To the Ladies.

MANDEL BROS. take pleasure in announcing to their lady patrons and the public generally that they have secured the services of MRS. I. LAGOS, of Chicago, and MISS E. McDERMOTT, late a leader of the modes in New York City, who will henceforth be connected with the Dressmaking Department in the Emporium of Fashion. The ladies named have had many years' experience as Modistes and as designers of Ladies' Dresses and Wraps, and, having just returned from a tour abroad and in the East, during which they were enabled to acquaint themselves with the latest designs of Worth and other artists, they will with confidence endeavor to satisfy the most hypercritical of the devotees of fashion.

The engagement of the ladies is due not alone to an appreciation of their exceptional skill, but also to the constant increase in the business of the Dressmaking Department.

MRS. L. L. RAPP, also favorably known, and who has enjoyed exceptional advantages, will continue in the department—a fact which will no doubt please many of our old customers. MRS. RAPP, MISS LAGOS, and MISS McDERMOTT will consider themselves favored if personal friends and others call to consult with them, even if immediate purchasing be not intended, regarding any work in their departments.

Desires to inform its patrons that the most extensive preparations have been made in every one of their 40 DEPARTMENTS!

A SPECIAL FEATURE of our establishment is the offering of some GENUINE BARGAINS in almost every Department; this is not done to deceive the public, because NOTHING is sold at our establishment ABOVE its real value, allowingly a fair legitimate profit.

Our past experience teaches us that if we offer an article at first cost we can dispose of fabulously large quantities, and are thus enabled to take advantage of large offerings, and often purchase goods at one half their regular price by buying the entire importation or a manufacturers' stock for

CASH ON DELIVERY.

We give today a few sample quotations, and shall continue this plan throughout the present season.

THE BLACK FLAGS.

THEIR CHIEF AN ABLE AND EXPERIENCED LEADER.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—[Special Cable Dispatch to The Chicago Tribune.]—There are tonight three grave warlike situations in Europe. The only one of the great Powers at present absolutely unentangled, and therefore in a position to cast her influence for peace, is England. The Chinese difficulty is in its most ominous shape. The turbulence of the Croatians has reached the revolutionary point. Germany has demanded of Russia an explanation of the activity of its agents in Bulgaria, and Russia has declined to answer. Throughout the continent there prevails a feeling of feverish insecurity, and the actions of the continental rulers are closely watched with feelings of profound distrust. France is divided as to the advisability of pushing the Tonquin invasion, while China appears to be solid for war. The battle of Phokhoi was forced by the French, was unnecessary, and was not only imprudent from a military standpoint, but extremely impolitic in a political sense. The Chinese have upwards of 30,000 men massed on the Tonquin frontier, with very efficient supply arrangements in the rear, and with a well-organized movement of troops between the frontier and Shanghai. The war fever is high throughout China, and is being constantly fed by the opponents of the present dynasty, which, with its following, is at present the only peace party in China, and is greatly in the minority in the Empire. The Chief of the Black Flags is an able and educated soldier. He is, of course, a banished and outlawed rebel against the dynasty, but his rebellion represented in a feeble way what, if it had not been suppressed, would easily have become the National sentiment. His bold and stubborn stand against the invasion of the French has been hailed by the Chinese people as the conduct of a patriot. Even Chang Shu Seng, the new Viceroy of the Chinese southern provinces, has officially referred to the recent conduct of the Black Flag commander in terms of admiration, and has gone so far as to publicly state that the services he was rendering to China would probably secure for him pardon and reinstatement. This utterance of Chang Shu-Seng was undoubtedly the carefully considered utterance of a shrewd diplomat, intended to encourage the Black Flag leader to stand between China and the French advance pending any official delaration of war. It has held out to the exile a hope and a future. It has legalized his following, and it has recruited his army with thousands of so-called deserters from the Chinese army on the frontier. It has been estimated that these desertions have already amounted to 15,000. No authority in China would dare to punish these deserters.

CHINESE SYMPATHY.

Some estimate may be formed of the value of the sympathy in practice between the Black Flags and the regular Chinese troops from the fact that every firearm so far captured by the French from the Black Flags has borne on it the official manufacture stamp of Chinese arsenals. The French have occupied Hanoi from the beginning of the invasion. It is on the Song Koi, or Red River. The occupation of the river to be complete must extend northward to Lao Koi, on the border of Tonquin and Yunnau, the extreme southern province of China proper. The Song Koi country from the line of the French outposts above Hanoi is occupied by the Black Flags and their allies and Chinese auxiliaries. The first step in any French advance northwards must of necessity be the investment of Sontoi, a town on the Song Koi, seventeen miles north of Hanoi. The military situation made an advance by land more feasible than one by water. The French decided to make the advance. They presumed that they could steal a march on their enemy on the assumption that the latter would be found inactive because of the understanding that there was a truce pending the negotiations at Pekin and Paris.

THE FRENCH ADVANCE.

Leaving Hanoi protected by gunboats and an efficient land force, the French army moved forward. It marched northwest towards Phokhoi, seven miles distant, intending to occupy that as a sort of half-way point of inland protection to the river, which must continue to be their base of supplies. To their surprise they found the Black Flags well intrenched south of Phokhoi. There could be no retreat and a battle ensued. It lasted three days. The Black Flags made the attack each morning, and the fighting each day lasted from sunrise to sunset. The third day the French were pressed back towards the river, which was at flood, and from noon to night had to fight breast high in the water. Next day there was no attack, the French having retreated, and the Black Flags having fallen back into Phokhoi. The French claim to have secured a victory, to have killed over 500 of their enemy and taken many prisoners, while sustaining a loss of but fifty killed. They really suffered a repulse, as the Black Flags retained Phokhoi and stopped the advance at less than five miles from the start.

POPULAR FRENZY.

The fighting was terrible, and the most exaggerated reports of it have been spread throughout China. The Chinese people are indignant at what they denounce as the treachery of the French in advancing during the pending negotiations for peace. The beheading of the Chinese prisoners by order of the French commander upon the ground that they were pirates has intensified the popular frenzy, which it is now feared may direct its revenge indiscriminately against all foreigners. The latest advices show that the European tea-cultivators and buyers in a state of panic are fleeing from the interior to the port towns. They allege that movements are in progress for a general massacre of all foreigners.

THE WHITE LILY.

The Society of the White Lily, which inspired the Woo-Chong tumults, it is reported, is bending all its energies towards fomenting a general crusade against Christians. The White Lily is a pure Chinese Know-Nothing organization, which is undoubtedly the largest and most powerful secret society in the world. It has lodges in every Chinese town, and its brotherhood always act with wonderful unanimity. Its fundamental object is the dethronement of the Mantchu dynasty. If, as is reported and as is probably the case, it has decided upon an anti-European crusade, the near future will witness to the full all the horrors of a retaliation.

GERMAN CRITICISM

LEVELED AT THE FRENCH ARMY—A SCATHING DOCUMENT.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—[Special Cable Dispatch to The Chicago Tribune.]—Another cause of offense has been given by Germany to France. The disturbance caused by the recent article in the North German Gazette has hardly subsided when another aggravating publication is launched. This time as before, the glove is thrown down from high quarters, and although the political effect may not be so grave, the indignity may be felt in a national sense to perhaps a greater degree. Maj. Gossler, Count von Moltke's first aide, has made a private report to his superior of the details of the autumn maneuvres of the French cavalry. This report has unaccountably just been published, and has caused a great sensation in military and political circles. In it he states that the thoughts and time of the officers of the French army are taken up far more with politics than they are with the study of the arts of war; that their knowledge of true military science is superficial in the extreme, and that their Generals do not possess the sound judgment nor the cool calculation necessary under trying circumstances. Hesitation and instability, according to Maj. Gossler, are the prominent characteristics which render the Generals and superior officers of the French army almost worthless in the face of the enemy. These failings are readily preceived by the men, and render that discipline which comes only of confidence and respect almost impossible. He calls attention to the fact that no French General has yet been able to hold his men well together after even a quasi defeat, and attributes the sauve qui peut tactics frequently displayed by the rank and file to the fact that the soldier knows perfectly well that those in command do not possess that knowledge which can modify disaster and possibly snatch victory from temporary defeat. No slur is cast upon the innate bravery of the French soldier or his officers; but the want of force of character and the general lack of technical instruction, which would surely make themselves painfully apparent during the progress of a great campaign, are pointed out by Maj. Gossler, with a bluntness of expression which almost forces conviction.

GLARING INEFFICIENCY.

He further states that the transport service as exhibited during his inspection was wretched beyond description, confusion, and contradictory orders, making that branch conspicuously inefficient and totally inadequate for the wants of the number of men it was intended to supply. Lack of system, evidences of want of familiarity with the business in hand, and consequent chaos marked the commissariat as being thoroughly bad. The physique of the officers is commented upon at some length. Their effeminacy and want of hardihood are mentioned, and the report concludes with the statement that the bulk of those holding commissions in the French army, with the exception perhaps of the Bretons, are not fit to sustain the tension of a campaign, and that hardships, such as must be endured in every prolonged struggle, would incapacitate such a number as to destroy efficiency and probably lead to defeat.

ANGRY GAULS.

The publication of a report of this character, evidently intended by its author for the eye of Count Von Moltke alone, has caused a feeling of bitterness in France which will undoubtedly tend to still further complicate the already unsatisfactory relations existing between the two countries. The comparative strength of the German army is yet well understood by French statesmen, and the wanton menaces implied by these attacks, which find their sources in the highest political and military circles of Germany, serve to almost destroy any hope which has heretofore existed of at least an armed peace. Maj. Gousler's opinions could hardly have seen the light without the connivance of some one high in authority, and their publication is little better than an insult which must be resented.

THE LAST STRAW.

To cap the climax a decree has been issued at Strasburg by the Governor of Alsace-Lorraine directing that the German language shall be obligatory in the courts of justice and in the municipal councils of those provinces. This action is strongly resented by the press and people, who cling fondly to the French tongue, and they consider the act of the Imperial Government toward completely Teutonizing them, as coercive in the extreme.

FRANCE AND CHINA.

THE FORMER POWER PLACED IN AN ANOMALOUS POSITION.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—[Special Cable Dispatch to The Chicago Tribune.]—In France the people are in a state of alarm. They fear war. They are clamoring for a speedy settlement of the Tonquin difficulty, and they deprecate the conduct of the Ministry in allowing matters to drift into their present condition. The public demand for a convocation of the Chambers is becoming irresistible. The war party in the Cabinet are doing their utmost to gain time, so that there will be no retreat from the war policy. Challemel-Lacour, the pugnacious Minister of French Foreign Affairs, and the chief author of all their Chinese trouble, has become somewhat alarmed, and now takes refuge behind authority for many of his acts. He has induced the majority of the Cabinet to decide in favoring of upholding the Hué treaty under the pretense that Prime-Minister Ferry insists upon it. It is known that Ferry, while not daring to make a public backdown, is so alarmed over the situation that he has inspired several negotiations. It is this anomalous position which the French Government at present occupies which causes so much apprehension in London. It is feared that, while the Prime Minister and the majority of the French Government really desire peace, the latitude allowed some of the Jingo Ministers may be abused beyond the power of reparation. Even now it is feared that the Chinese people have got beyond control and may refuse to ratify any peace convention which may be arrived at by the Marquis Tseng. The Marquis keenly appreciates this, and his attitude, besides remaining unchanged, becomes increasingly positive. To all the overtures for proposals which have yet been made by the French Ministers the Marquis Tseng has returned the same invariable answer: "China will agree to a convention which will recognize the vassalage of Annam to China and the suzerainty of China over Tonquin." If a satisfactory convention is not arrived at soon and the public clamor succeeds in securing a convention of the Chambers, it cannot be doubted that the present Cabinet will suffer a complete collapse. One of the French journals this evening suggests that as both France and China were willing to accept the mediation of England. England proceeded at once, as an uninterested party in forming a convention, irrespective of the dynastic party in China, and insisting upon its acceptance by China. This journal points out that the Emperor of China should be considered a nonentity in the negotiations, as he is but a boy, 16 years of age, and kept in constant seclusion. The Republique Francaise proposes that England join France in coercing China into a settlement, recognizing the French occupation as a commercial necessity. This proposal meets with almost universal derision in Paris.

RUSSIA'S DESIGNS.

THE TROUBLE IN BULGARIA AND THE EAST.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—[Special Cable Dispatch to The Chicago Tribune.]—The acknowledged reason why Lord Dufferin has been recalled to Constantinople as the British Embassador is that the English Government has decided to take a hand in the Bulgarian business and has selected the Earl as the most capable diplomat in the British service to thwart the Russian intrigues in Bulgaria. The Embassador was absent from his post enjoying a vacation. It is understood that the Porte notified England that the gravity of the situation demanded Dufferin's instant recall, which was at once ordered. This action is unusually significant, and denotes that Russia's designs on Turkey have become dangerous enough to warrant British interference. Whether Russia will notice England's pronounced action in this matter, and what effect it will have upon Russia's southern policy, can only be conjectured. It is believed the crisis in Bulgaria is approaching rapidly, and that Russia will be called to account for it and will accept the full responsibility.

THE TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

Germany and Austria have together sent a joint note to Russia remonstrating against the continuation of the activity of the Russian agents throughout Bulgaria, and alleging that their conduct is provoking hostility against the Austro-German interests and creating revolution. This remonstrance is the first great notice sent out in the interest of the triple alliance, and its result is awaited with impatience. M. de Giers was about to go on an extended vacation when this note reached St. Petersburg, and he at once changed his plans. He formulated an answer to the note, which, after much revision, was forwarded to Berlin and Vienna. This note disavows the alleged acts of the so-called Russian agents, and, going further, accuses the German press of inflaming international passions by publishing false accusations and circulating insulting criticisms of the actions of foreign Governments. The note of M. de Giers has produced a sensation in Germany and is considered as tantamount to boldly telling Bismarck to mind his own business by looking more after the misdeeds of the German organ editors and less after the actions of the officers of other Governments.

The Russian reply is regarded as indicative of Russia's readiness to quarrel with Germany upon any matter at issue between the two nations. What action it may provoke in Germany cannot be guessed. Bismarck is not used to being bluffed, but he has now received the snub of his life. There can be no doubt that the charges made by Germany and Austria are well founded, nor can it be doubted that Russian agents are at the bottom of all the present troubles in Croatia. The Croatians are governed by Hungarian officers almost entirely, and these officers take every opportunity of displaying Hungarian prejudices. The Emperor of Austria would undoubtedly like to give the Croatians an autonomy as nearly complete as that accorded Hungary, if possible, but Hungary insists upon her present ascendency, and it is against this ascendency that the Croates are revolting. It is to Russia's interest to foment these uprisings for the purpose of disturbing the Austrian Government at home as much as possible and lessening her strength abroad as an effective member of the German alliance.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

LADY DIXIE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Lady Florence Dixie has again given vent in the London papers to her opinion of Irish affairs. Mr. Davitt is the victim this time. She attacks his recent speech at the meeting of the National League at Cappamore in the most violent manner and says that the sentiments to which he gave utterance on that occasion are a direct incitement to revolt and rebellion. She considers the renewal of the agitations in Ireland as an outrage; that it must lead to still greater acts of violence and lawlessness than have already occurred; and that those who are directly concerned in fanning the smoldering flames of hatred, which so completely possess the Irish heart, into an open conflagration should be made to feel that they cannot do so with impunity. The Government must at once take steps to suppress future meetings of this character. A gentle policy is useless and abortive, and it seems rather to encourage such men as Davitt to greater lengths of lawlessness and disloyalty. Lady Dixie winds up her philippic with the statement that it is useless for England to hope for anything in the shape of decency or loyalty from the Irish, and that they are at best nothing but a lot of rapscallions.

A BANQUET.

Tuesday next Mr. Henry Gillig will give a banquet in honor of the several prominent Americans who are at present in London. The list of expected guests is a long one, and will include ex-Postmaster James, ex-Mayor Grace of New York, Minister Francis, Prof. Sumner, the Lord Mayor, Sir Julius Benedict, delegate from the British Post-Office, and many others prominent in literature and art. The affair is expected to be a very grand one.

RUSSIAN PETROLEUM.

The first cargo of Russian petroleum ever landed in this country arrived at Liverpool this week. The oil on inspection was found to be of excellent quality and stood a high test. Great hopes have been built up by consumers on the strength of this first sample, and the belief is fully expressed that the quality and quantity of the petroleum which will soon begin to arrive from Russia will have the effect of completely revolutionizing the trade. The wells in Russia are principally in the hands of American experts who are good judges of the raw material, and the outlook, if report may be believed, is that the United States will soon have a prominent competition in the production of this staple.

FINANCIAL.

The feeling in the money market this week is one of great strength, and the belief that the tide has turned is practically confirmed by the stiffness shown during the last few days. Prominent financiers predict that high prices for all classes of securities may soon be looked for, and that purchases for investment have been freely made and will continue. An enormous amount of gambling has been going on in Mexican railway shares. It is stated that one leading bear has cleared during the week over $250,000 in transactions in these stocks. Two other bears have made $50,000 and $30,000 each. The officials of one of these corporations are strongly suspected of having assisted in these operations, and denunciations and threats of investigation are freely uttered.

MINOR MATTERS.

Mr. Gilbert this week flatly denies the report that he would prevent Miss Mary Anderson from appearing as Galatea. He says that he is pained and distressed beyond measure by the fact that any one should think him capable of the meanness of refusing Miss Anderson anything. He never dreamed of committing so ungentlemanly an act, and cannot imagine how such a report could have become current.

Miss Anderson's popularity continues unabated.

M. Coquelin, the most prominent of French actors, will make a six months' tour in the United States next summer. A company of his own selection will accompany him, many of the members being drawn from the staff of the Comédie Française. He has been guaranteed by the management under which he will appear that his remuneration shall not be less than $25,000 for a given number of performances, and should the enterprise meet with the success which is anticipated he will probably receive a much larger sum. M. Coquelin has always shown such an aversion to crossing the Atlantic that the announcement of this agreement has caused no little surprise among the theatre-goers in the French Capital.

Mr. Gladstone has arrived in Denmark. He was received by the citizens of Christiana this afternoon with demonstrations of enthusiasm and respect, and after passing a few hours in that city proceeded to Copenhagen. His health has been greatly improved by the cruise along the south coast. Mr. Tennyson and other members of Mr. Donald Currie's party accompany Mr. Gladstone to the Danish Capital, and they will undoubtedly participate in the honors which will be extended to the English Premier by the King and the Czar.

Mr. Mathew Arnold will leave for the United States early in October.

Col. Forbes and Capts. Butler and Slacke have been appointed permanent Police Commissioners in Ireland, replacing the special Police Magistrates.

Miss Josephine Butler, who witnessed the expulsion of the Salvation Army from the City of Geneva, has written a public letter to Earl Granville upon the subject in which "in unmeasured terms" she denounces the brutality with which the Swiss police treated the members of the army, and implores the intervention of the British authority for the purpose of preventing such outrages in the future, and the enforcement of the private rights of evangelists.

The Edison and Swan Electric-Light Companies have amalgamated.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt and her husband, M. Damala, lived an apparently happy life for several months after their marriage. Some serious trouble suddenly arose between them. They separated, and he enlisted in the military service in Tunis. There his health broke down and he was discharged. He returned, but whatever the domestic trouble was it seems it was incurable. Mme. Bernhardt has stipulated to regularly pay to M. Damala a handsome allowance.

MR. SMALLEY.

FRANCE AND CHINA.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—[Mr. Smalley's Cable Letter to New York Tribune.]—Till yesterday England was not invited to mediate between France and China. The unexpected arrival of M. Waddington, the French Minister to England, at Dover last night, and his instant departure to Lord Granville at Walmer, following yesterday's meeting of the French Cabinet, are popularly associated with the Tonquin affair. It is generally hoped that this may be so, for the occurrences of each succeeding day tend to increase the tension between France and China. French opinion indicates an increasing indisposition for war. The Ministry cannot declare war without the sanction of the Assembly, and it is perfectly certain that the Assembly would refuse the requisit authority for a campaign, and most probably dismiss the Ministry for proposing it. English opinion is showing signs of absolute irritation over French restlesness. Today's Times gives a bolder warning than France has yet received. She is reminded that she is trifling with English interests; that in dealing with China it is necessary to maintain a common policy, to which every European nation can adhere, and that the French are using illusory advantage and endangering common interests by demanding territory to which they have no right. Indeed, I may add that the belief is growing that English opinion may induce Lord Granville to take action against French designs. The English view is not unfavorable to the French protectorate in Annam and to the opening of the Red River, but as these concessions are covered by the Bouree treaty France can hardly be satisfied with them without incurring loss of prestige. If France proceeds to war for Tonquin as well as Annam, most likely she will embroil herself in Europe. The lack of earnestness on the part of the Ministry in neither summoning the Legislative Chambers nor in organizing substantial reënforcements for the meagre army in the East, has caused the French ship to drift toward the rocks. Marquis Tseng's willingness to accept English mediation and the French appeal for it, if that be Waddington's present object, strengthen the English position in China just as England gained in Egypt by French vacillation.

The rioting in Canton confirms the complaints to which I called attention last week respecting the absence of British ships on that coast.

THE BALKANS.

Lord Dufferin's sudden recall is supposed to be connected with the Balkan difficulties which have arisen. The coup-d'-état in Bulgaria fixes the Russian yoke more firmly, but has failed to get rid of Alexander. Germany is advising him to refrain from abdicating, lest a Russian nominee be appointed. The Russian intrigues against the alliance between Roumania and Servia on the one hand and Austria on the other and the Slav agitation in Croatia are causing a more serious strain between Austria and her mentor, Germany, toward Russia than most people are aware.

THE DISARMAMENT PROJECT.

Well-informed officials in London laugh at the disarmament project attributed to Prince Bismarck.

TAMATAVE.

Correspondence in the Times respecting the Tamatave incident strongly deals with a part of the dispute, but nevertheless shows that Mr. Gladstone had better grounds for his protest than he was supposed to have had. Capt. Johnston's letter was only a protest against a bombardment without notice. Admiral Pierre's answers were so unnecessarily furious that they can only be explained by irritation from his physical ailments, which have caused his death. The charge against Mr. Shaw of drugging wine because the soldiers sank into a lethargic intoxication after looting his cellars is grotesque. Admiral Pierre's death will tend to wind up the incident. But the Madagascar affair is not yet closed. The Embassy lately in England and the United States has arrived in the island, and it is expected will make terms with Admiral Pierre's successor.

NOTES.

The declaration of the Comtesse de Chambord that her recent action against the Comte de Paris at the funeral was not intended to assail the indubitable rights of the head of the Orleans house makes his recognition as the head of all the French Monarchists complete.

The public watch with interest Mr. Gladstone's northern tour. His irrepressible desire to make speeches is the best proof of his improving health. It is the first time an English Prime Minister has visited Scandinavia.

The Trades-Union Congress has been remarkable for the adoption of an absolute and effective closure, and shows that the English working classes have no deep-rooted antagonism to capitalists. The resolution against the nationalization of land confirms the opinion that last year's motion was carried by a "snatch" division. The conference has evinced no strong desire to discuss the subject save to reverse last year's vote. The moderation of the speeches, the business-like progress of the conference, and the reasonableness of its demands speak highly for the character of the leaders of English workmen.

Since Lord Lytton and Mr. Tennyson have joined the Tupper fund there is a greater probability of its success in England. Hitherto the testimonial has hung fire.

Mr. Dutton Cook's sudden death causes a serious gap in dramatic criticism. There were not six unprejudiced critics of the first rank in England, and he was probably the best.

Mr. Irving and Miss Ellen Terry continue their triumphal procession through the provinces, meeting with an enthusiastic reception in every place where they perform.

Miss Gerard, who suddenly threw up her part in "M. P." and left England for America, has been succeeded by Miss Robertson at Toole's Theatre. G. W. SMALLEY.

Society is somewhat startled over the announced marriage of Miss Remington, daughter of the firearms manufacturer and heiress to a very considerable fortune, to M. Dubrille, a penniless Paris opera singer. The young lady made the choice deliberately, and the marriage will be performed in October next.

The Liberals have decided to not contest the Manchester District. This will leave the fight between Mr. Houldsworth, the Tory candidate, and Mr. Parkhurst, the Home-Ruler nominee. The latter belongs to the Radical Bradlaugh school, and it is believed he will be supported by the Irish voters.

The diploma of honor of the highest award for the best collection of mineral specimens has been given by the Amsterdam Exhibition to the proprietor of the Zeehandelaar, specimens of which comprise 400 different minerals from the mines of Utah, Montana, and Idaho.

OTHER CABLES.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—[Special Cable.]—The Duke and Duchess of Teck have left England and intend to live in retirement in Germany, where they can economize. Their apartments in Kensington Palace have been placed at the disposal of the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise.

The Duke of Hamilton clique cleared £150,000 in bets by the victory of Ossian at the St. Leger.

The announcement that the Duke of Newcastle is passing the season at Long Branch is a mystery, as the real Duke is making a tour of the lake district in Westmoreland.

Mary Anderson is playing to meagre houses at the Lyceum. The cause is the great want of public interest in "Ingomar." While the stalls and boxes are full the pit and gallery are empty—a sure sign of the lack of public attention. The management is about to substitute the "Lady of Lyons" alternately with the "Hunchback." Mr. Gilbert has at last given permission for her to play Galatea. The report circulated in America of the Prince of Wales' invitation to Miss Anderson and her refusal, as also the Prince's reception of Miss Lillian Russell, are both canards. The Prince at the time Miss Anderson first appeared in London was not in London, but on the Continent.

Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan have a new opera in rehearsal at the Savoy Theatre, to be brought out in November.

Solomon's new opera, "Capt. Kidd," produced at Liverpool, was a failure, Solomon says, owing to the want of rehearsal, the first night's performance being the first dress rehearsal.

Mme. Ristori is arranging for a tour of Shakspearean readings in English, opening at Bath.

Isabel Bateman returns to the London stage in a new drama at the Adelphi, written by Mr. Stephenson, the author of "Impulse."

A dramatization of Mr. William Black's novel, "Sunrise," was offered to the Court Theatre and rejected.

IRISH AFFAIRS.

Mr. Davitt's recent speech has provoked a chorus of disapproval. The Tory papers demand the revocation of his ticket of leave on the ground that his speeches contain rank sedition. Mr. Davitt's illness, which is serious, is the result of exhaustion caused by constant traveling and addressing large audiences. His medical advisers insist on absolute rest as the only means of conserving his strength for a tour of England and Scotland.

Mr. Parnell, for the moment, is recruiting at Hastings.

Justin Macarthy, in feeble health, has gone to the Pyrenees. He intends to visit the Basque Provinces, to make a tour of Spain, and to write a book before his return.

The trial of O'Donnell will be had in November. American detectives are coming over to be present at the trial. They are reported to have discovered a connection between O'Donnell and certain American secret societies.

FRANCE AND CHINA.

All authentic news received as to the Franco-Chinese negotiations is indicative of an early peace. For the moment the outbreak at Canton has been quelled, and the presence of English gunboats will be a protection to all foreigners. This emeute is, however, only a type of what may occur at any of the other treaty ports. The misfortune is, that the Chinese make no distinction between Frenchmen and other foreigners. The conference which took place yesterday between Earl Granville and M. Waddington, the French Embassador at Walmer Castle, was satisfactory. M. Waddington stated that the French Government was willing to admit the claims of China to the suzerainty over Annam, with a right of investiture of the monarch and of veto over the succession to the throne. He also stated that they were willing to discuss favorably the Chinese proposal of a neutral zone between the Chinese frontier and the French protectorate. After the conference with M. Waddington Lord Granville telegraphed to the Marquis Tseng, who is staying at Folkstone, only a few miles from Walmer. The Chinese Embassador had an interview with Lord Granville the same evening, and it is reported that he at once accepted England's mediation with reference to the neutral zone, subject to a reference to Pekin. The Marquis Tseng hopes to hear from Pekin in time to return to Paris by Wednesday and resume negotiations. M. Waddington assured Lord Granville that the reënforcements now being sent forward to Tonquin are only just sufficient to keep the French force there in effective fighting condtion, and imply no menace whatever to China. After the interview between M. Waddington and Lord Granville, the Foreign Office telegraphed to Sir Harry Parkes, the British Minister to China, an important communication to the Chinese Government advising the acceptance of the French terms and pressing for an early settlement to prevent further demonstrations against Europeans.

THE AUSTRO-GERMAN ALLIANCE.

Roumania, Servia, Italy, and Spain have become members of the Austro-German alliance, and the English Government has already received an intimation that Germany is about to propose a congress of all the Powers enrolled in the alliance, which is about to receive its consecration at Rudesheim on the inauguration of the status of Germania that records the union of Germany and the humiliation of France. The purpose of the congress is to consider a plan of mutual and general disarmament, and as such a proposal means war in some direction the situation of France is justly regarded as critical.

CATTLE DISEASE.

There is a serious increase in the cattle disease all over England. In Leicestershire there is literally not an uninfected farm, but in some districts the malady takes so mild a form that the farmers are letting it run through the herds. This rapid development of the disease cannot fail to have its interest for American cattle-growers.

THE COLONIES.

A very serious quarrel between England and her Australian colonies seems to be brewing, and the personal unpopularity of Lord Derby at the Colonial Office is largely conducive to its development.

PARAGRAPHS.

Tourguenieff is to be buried with great honors by the side of his critic, Belinsky, as he desired. There is no room in Belinsky's grave, so they will inter him beside his predecessor. Like Tourguenieff, Belinsky was a warm supporter of the Nihilist and Socialist paper En Avant, when it was published at Zurich, and gave 500 francs yearly to sustain it.

The progress of the Villard expedition is followed with great interest, and much matter is published about President Villard personally, and the development of the Northwest.

THE POWERS.

THE FRANCO-CHINESE TROUBLE.

PARIS, Sept. 15.—[Special Cable.]—The news of the Canton emeute cabled by one of our special correspondents in China has produced a new phase of the Franco-Chinese question. The fanaticism of John Chinaman is aroused not only against Frenchmen, but against all foreigners, who are designated indiscriminately as "Yang Yin," or "Devils from beyond the sea." The subject is no longer a French question, but a general question the immediate solution of which is imperatively demanded. The English press, after having warned France not to send another soldier to Tonquin, now fully recognizes the right and even the duty of the French Government to reinforce Gen. Bouet and Admiral Courbet in order to enable them adequately to protect all French interests in Tonquin territory. The French Government will not be influenced by the English press any more than by the German press. But this reveillement of England, as it is called, is hailed with delight in Paris, where it is even regarded as an approval of the French colonial policy.

THE SITUATION.

The situation is this: France is now obliged to recognize that the state of affairs in Tonquin is totally different from what M. Challemel Lacour represented in the Senate, when last spring he obtained the votes of credit. Marquis Tseng has been sounding freely the traditional Chinese gongs and stink-pots, and now declares that the sending of any considerable reënforcements to Annam will be considered a casus belli. The opposition press is furious because the Government does not take them into its confidence in regard to diplomatic negotiations and the decisions of Cabinet Councils. It points its attacks with renewed venom. Meanwhile there seems to be a split in the Cabinet itself.

TWO GREAT CAMPS.

Meanwhile the nervous tension of Europe's armed truce is becoming more and more intense. People talk of the confidential tête-à-tête of sovereigns, and pretend that Europe is divided into two great camps, one under the tutelage of Russia, the other under Germany, while every idle rumor from Berlin causes stocks to tremble like aspen leaves. But in a problem where so many varied and conflicting factors are at work it is not unnatural that the cardinal motive underlying the one broad issue should be lost sight of. The moment has at last arrived when it is no longer possible to conceal the fact that Europe is becoming honeycombed with the germs of Republican aspirations. These are now latent, but at the slightest encouragement are ready to burst forth into activity, causing a political cataclysm analogous to the physical commotions at Ischia and Batavia.

BISMARCK'S SCHEMES.

Prince Bismarck is using the Chinese bait and the Russian decoy to prepare the same old snare for the French Republic which, from his point of view, is a permanent source of contagion to the rest of Europe, Prince Bismarck knows that the majority of Frenchmen want peace, and only those who have everything to gain and nothing to lose now worship glory and Chauvinism in France. The French Republic has always been the bete noir of all crowned heads. Probably nothing could happen at the present moment in Europe that would so gladden the heart of Prince Bismarck's imperial master as its overthrow. The only alternative would be a Bourbon restoration. No doubt Don Carlos would suit Bismarck better than the Comt de Paris, but Don Carlos is impossible, and even the grandson of Louis Philippe would be better than the Republic. I say no other alternative is possible, because, by a simple process, there has been an elimination of legitimacy as understood by the Count de Chambord, and imperialism has been put an end to by Prince Napoleon.

PRIVATE DETECTIVES.

HOW THEIR CALLING PROSPERS IN THE FRENCH CAPITAL.

PARIS, Sept. 15.—[Special Cable.]—The indignation of all well-regulated Parisian families has been aroused by one of those too frequent domestic episodes that set forth in true colors perhaps the vilest institutions that have as yet taken root in the social systems of great cities—very private detective agencies. The fact of this episode, which is about to be ventilated in the tribunals, and which, it is hoped, will lead to drastic measures, are briefly as follows: M. Lenormand, a Parisian advocate, married in 1875 a fascinating and frisky widow, somewhat older than himself, and of a temperament at once too ardent and too jealous. Their domestic felicity barely outlived the honeymoon. Lenormand was suspected of infidelities, and Madame became incompatible and shrewish. A few months ago Mme. Lenormand sought pretexts upon which to base an action for a legal separation. She had recourse to one of the private detective agencies that have sprung up in Paris lately with toadstool growth. Soon all the mechanism of the renowned Tricoche Cacolet type was put in motion against the husband, who is hale, hearty, and handsome, and enjoys an income of $30,000 a year. Ingenious tissues of falsehood, scandal, and slander of the most piquant description were fabricated by the fertile imagination of detectives, who, to demonstrate their raison d'etre did not hesitate to drag in the mire the reputations of honest men and women.

Among the many victims whose domestic hearths were assailed by the social vipers were M. and Mme. Clovis Hugues. M. Hugues is the well-known Depute des Bouches du Rhone, Municipal Counselor, poet, and essayist. M. Hugues recently married a young lady endowed with beauty and wit, tempered with the sterling virtues that make up a good wife. M. Cloirs Hugues' menage was the happiest imaginable. The other day there was brought to Mme. Le Normand an utterly truthless story, one of the incidents of which was that Mme. Cloirs Hugues had been previous to her marriage the mistress of M. Le Normand. This scandalous report reached the ears of M. Clovis Hugues. It burst like a bombshell in the midst of his conjugal felicity and narrowly missed ending in a most thrilling and fatal tragedy. Sober judgment, however, prevailed, and a proces en diffamtion is about to be instituted which will bring to light the doings of the private detective agencies, against which the feeling of the community is greatly excited.

CROATIA.

SLAVONIAN AGITATIONS.

PESTH, Sept. 15.—The Pesther Lloyd says: All indications point to the belief that the authors of the disorders in Croatia are but the pioneers of a projected Southern Slavonian agitation, which is to be directed, not against Hungary alone, but against the Austrian Empire generally.

CONTINUED SKIRMISHING.

There is continual skirmishing between the military and the peasantry on the southern frontier of Croatia. All is quiet, however, in the Zagorien District.

A RIOT.

A party of Croatian laborers at work on the railway near this city engaged in a riot. Sixteen were arrested.

THE LORD MAYOR.

A LUNCHEON TO AMERICANS.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—[Special Cable.]—The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress gave a luncheon yesterday to distinguished Americans at present in London. Among the guests were ex-Postmaster-General James, ex-Mayor Grace, Gov. McCormick, the Hon. J. M. Francis, Minister to the Court of Lisbon, and Mr. Puleston, M. P. The Lady Mayoress, after luncheon, took upon herself the task of entertaining her guests by showing them all that is historically interesting in the Mansion House. The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress spent four months in the United States in 1881-'82. They expressed their delight at the opportunity of returning in London the hospitalities received by them in America two years ago.

MEXICO.

CELEBRATING THE BIRTHDAY OF PORFIRIO DIAZ.

CITY OF MEXICO, Sept. 15.—This birthday of Porfirio Diaz was celebrated with great enthusiasm here today. The streets were gay with bunting, flags floating from the public buildings and private residences. There was a procession of the National schools and societies last night. Thousands of people of the best classes took part in the serenade to Diaz. The approaches to his house were crowded until midnight. This morning La Republica, the organ of Dr. Ramon Fernandez, nominates Diaz for President. This indicates that the powerful following of Fernandez will support Diaz for the next term. Tonight there were fireworks in front of Diaz's house. At 11 tonight the celebration of the anniversary of Mexican independence commenced, to be continued throughout tomorrow. The city is crowded with strangers.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The President, in his message to be read tomorrow evening at the opening of Congress, says Mexico's foreign relations become every day more satisfactory, and that the condition of the country generally is good, though there exist some financial troubles, which will be speedily overcome. The progress of internal improvements is highly satisfactory and visible to everybody. The Central Railroad Company has constructed more than 1,500 kilometres of road, the National Construction Company more than 1,000 kilometres; total kilometres of railroad construction in the Republic, 4,800. It was necessary to modify the agreement made by an unofficial agent with the British bondholders. Negotiations are progressing for a loan of $20,000,000 abroad. He hopes they will soon terminate satisfactorily. The revenues for the fiscal year ended June 30 last were $33,500,000, an increase of $1,500,000 over the previous year. The revenues the present year bid fair to exceed the sum mentioned. The notifications of the customs tariff are nearly completed. The new postal codes will soon go into force. Overland communication with the United States is to be improved. Public instruction is in a flourishing condition. Every effort is being made to attract a good class of emigrants; large contracts to this end are made. The army is in good condition. Peace reigns throughout the Republic.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF INDEPENDENCE.

SOTILLO, Mex., Sept. 15.—The fifteenth anniversary of Mexican independence and the advent of the Mexican National Railroad was celebrated today by a parade of the militia and the booming of artillery. The entire city was decorated with banners and streamers. The festivities will continue for four days. A grand reception was given at the palace by Gov. Madré, many Americans being present.

PERU.

THE MONTONEROS—THE YGLESIAS MINISTRY.

LIMA, Sept. 15.—It is reported that the town of Cerro de Pasco is menaced by the Montoneros on two sides—viz.: Ynahunca and Cayna. The Cure of Cayna, it is alleged, caused the assasination of Leodora Morales, Governor of Huamico, whose head was paraded through the streets, and whose body was mutilated and dragged in a field where it was left as food for the dogs.

After a banquet given by Señor Lavalle to the members of the new Yglesias Ministry, the latter left Callao yesterday en route for Trujillo. Señor Lavalle will follow later. The new ministry is inspiring confidence.

THE PACIFIC ISLES.

LORD DERBY OPPOSED TO ANNEXATION.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Lord Derby, the Colonial Secretary, has forwarded a dispatch to the Australian Government, stating that the Imperial Government deprecates the proposed scheme of annexation of Pacific islands to the Australian colonies. He calls attention specifically to the case of the islands of Samoa, where the German, British, and American Consuls have sometimes exercised their influence jointly or separately, and says the Governments of Great Britain and Germany made treaties with Samoa, which, therefore, forms an independent State, and its annexation to Australia might lead to a violation of international law. The same he declares to be true of other islands.

CABLE NOTES.

Gladstone arrived at Christiansund in good health. He started last night for Copenhagen.

The Papal Nuncio to France has arrived at the Vatican to receive from the Pope instructions in regard to the relations of the Papal See with the Government of France.

The North German Gazette in a leading article accuses the London Times of craftily sowing dissension between France and Germany by persistent distortion of facts.

The North German Gazette has published the confiscated letters belonging to Deputy Antoine. The Liberals are indignant thereat, and will probably offer an interpellation in the Reichstag in regard to the matter.

Official dispatches from Hanoi state that the numerical strength of the Black Flags in the recent battle was 4,000. The Black Flag commander expected reënforcements from Sontay, but the French gunboats prevented their arrival.

Emperor William yesterday inaugurated the grand army maneuvres at Merzburg by a review of the Fourth Army Corps. There was much enthusiasm. Everything went off satisfactorily. The Emperor was in the saddle three hours.

It is probable the police will board the steamer Athenian upon her arrival off Southampton and take O'Donnell, the murderer of James Carey, ashore and bring him secretly to London, in order to avoid any public demonstration by sympathizers.

At the wool sales yesterday Tasmanian, scoured, sold at 8½ pence to 1 shilling 8 pence; Swan River, scoured, 10 pence to 1 shilling 3½ pence, and greasy, 5 pence to 1 shilling. Eleven thousand four hundred and ten bales of Port Phillip and Sydney were sold. There was a fair demand.

MOVEMENT AGAINST THE SUNDAY LAW.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The saloonkeepers of this city have inaugurated a new move. Finding the Prohibitionists determined to secure the enforcement of the Sunday law, they have instructed the Executive Committee of their organization to communicate with similar associations in other cities, and if possible perfect a National organization which shall make a determined stand against the movers of the Sunday law. Agitators are now being started throughout the country. The tobacconists will be invited to join in the movement, as their interests also suffer severely by the enforcement of Sunday laws. In explanation of this new project one of the officials today said to THE TRIBUNE representative: "We have been hampered long enough, and we have come to the conclusion that something must be done to offset the attacks upon our rights. The only way to do this is by the combined efforts of money and power. The saloonkeepers, brewers, and tobacco men represent the great mass of revenue-payers to the Government. Now, if Government imposes a tax on what we sell, I claim that it has no right to restrict us to sell our goods any day in the year."

ATTACKED BY TRAMPS.

LANCASTER, Pa., Sept. 15.—Two tramps boarded a freight train on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Marietta last evening, and, climbing over the tops of the cars, met the brakeman and Railroad Policeman Berger, of Philadelphia. Drawing pistols, the tramps ordered the two men to throw up their hands, which they did. Immediately after the officer and brakeman, catching the tramps off their guard, grappled with them, and, seeing they were being worsted, one tramp jumped off the train and escaped. Officer Berger fired at the remaining one, who, putting his hands to his body, fell off the train, apparently wounded. The train, which was running rapidly at the time, was stopped, but nothing could be seen of the tramp. The object is believed to have been robbery.

SIX years of Democratic control in Louisiana have eradicated every public school from the State, as may be seen by the dispatches.

COMMANDER WYLDES declares the officers of the Proteus were unskillful, and that the conduct of the crew at the time of the wreck was shameful.

RAILROAD tickets to Louisville were yesterday sold at $6. Agents and officers were much excited, and deemed a "terrible war" highly probable.

FIFTY-TWO thousand more hogs have been slaughtered here since March 1 than were killed in the same time last year. The summer's figures are 1,452,000.

SUCCESS attended the efforts of the wrecking company to save the new Italian steamship Independente in Long Island Sound. She was released without great damage.

A CASTING in the machinery of a freight-elevator at the Boston Store, on State street, broke yesterday morning, and the machine fell three stories, injuring two men very severely.

NO cut was openly made by the Grand Trunk Railroad on passenger fares to Buffalo yesterday, the trunk lines being given till Monday to make promises and restore confidence all round. Monday, unless something shall be done, the Canadian company will sell tickets to Buffalo at $10, a reduction of $4 on first-class tickets.

GEORGE IRVINE and his two sons died suddenly near Erie, Pa. It is feared they were maliciously poisoned, and their bodies will be exhumed for examination.

CONGRESSMAN Robert L. Mayo, of Westmoreland County, Virginia, shot himself fatally, and with suicidal intent, while on board the steamer Virginia, from Baltimore for Norfolk.

EDOUARD REMENYI, the great violinist, contributes to the columns of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE a tale relating to the origin of a familiar Hungarian proverb. The admirers of the artist will no doubt read the story with especial interest. Many others will be charmed with the simple method of its narration.

FUNERAL services over the remains of the late Hugh J. Hastings were held at St. Leo's Church, in New York, yesterday morning. President Arthur, Roscoe Conkling, Hugh J. Jewett, Jay Gould, Samuel Sloan, Gen. Eckert, Jenkins Van Schaick, and William G. Weed were the pall-bearers. The remains were taken to Albany for burial.

FRIDAY night 150 able-bodied men tarred and feathered two Mormon elders who had been evangelizing in the region of Brookville, Ind. A young girl had been enticed from her home by the elders, and was found only after a determined search. She had been converted to the ideas of Mormonism and heartily desired to accept the sad lot which the Salt Lake Church apportions to the women of its faith.

"DANIEL ROCHAT" is to be enacted in our divorce courts. Lena Gottlieb avers that last February she was married to Aaron Gottlieb by a Justice of the Peace. Her conscience, however, would not be satisfied unless a rabbi of the Hebrew faith also joined her with her spouse. To this proceeding the groom has steadfastly objected, and the Hebrew maiden now prays for divorce from the unhappy connection in which she finds herself.

IN a fog yesterday morning the excursion steamer William Harrison, plying between Manhattan Beach and Boston, ran into the steamer Prof. Morse, which lay at anchor. The excursion steamer was badly smashed, but luckily the injury was all above the water-line. Many of the excursionists scrambled aboard the Prof. Morse, and none fell into the water in so doing. When the true extent of the damage had been ascertained they went back to the Harrison, and reached Boston in safety.

MUNICIPAL REFORM.

The article on municipal reform contributed to the current number of the North American Review by the Hon. John A. Kasson, the leader of the Iowa Republican delegation, ought to receive serious attention from municipal taxpayers, large and small, throughout the country. Mr. Kasson himself deserves great credit for his courageous exposure of the failure of universal suffrage in its application to city government; for, though this fact is generally conceded by all who have made an intelligent study of the American municipal system, it is rarely that an active politician, whose continued preferment depends upon the votes of the masses, has sufficient pluck to utter one word which may be construed as hostile to popular suffrage at any point. The example set by Mr. Kasson ought to encourage other statesmen to continue the agitation of municipal reform upon the only basis which promises completeness and permanency.

The comparison of State and municipal indebtedness in this country, as made up by Mr. Kasson from the statistics of the last census, is sufficient without entering into the manifold details of extravagance, waste, and corruption to impress upon owners of property and business-men the peril threatened by the existing system of city and town government. The proportion of municipal indebtedness to State indebtedness in the different sections is as follows: In the New England States, $146,000,000 to $49,000,000; in the Middle States (including the District of Columbia), $407,000,000 to $44,000,000; in the Western States, $135,000,000 to $39,000,000; in the Southern States, $76,000,000 to $125,000,000. It is only in the Southern States as a whole that the State indebtedness exceeds the municipal indebtedness. Outside this one section the municipal debts of the country bear the proportion of $689,000,000 to $184,000,000 of State indebtedness, or more than four times as much. The total municipal debt of the country is $765,000,000.

The direct taxation which this enormous debt imposes, in addition to the extravagant assessments for current expenses, is more burdensome than the taxes raised for the National and State Governments combined. The official waste and corruption which it denotes are undoubtedly encouraged by the prevailing system of suffrage, whereby a majority of non-taxpayers vote away the substance of a minority of taxpayers. Mr. Kasson puts the case as follows:

> The constant element in municipal affairs is the unremitting desire of the politician to gather masses of votes, and of the contractors and placemen who furnish them to prey upon the city treasury. The people who do not pay are always ready to create debts against the people who must pay. They who do not pay the piper are ever ready to dance to his music. . . . The evil principle lies in this: that elected authority is nearly independent of proper responsibility. The party that creates the liability is not the party that supplies the funds. The party in real interest is not the party really in control. One disburses at will the money which the other is compelled to raise. It is an association of citizen stockholders, where the owners of a minority of the stock control the majority of ownership and interest. There would be little demand for shares in any insurance or banking company managed on that principle.

The remedies which are suggested and tried for the evils necessarily incident to the prevailing system are temporary, spasmodic, and partial. Some of the States have taken the precaution to fix a limit on municipal indebtedness (usually 5 per cent on the assessed value of the taxable property), and also a maximum rate of taxation. At the best this plan merely checks extravagance and corruption, but does not prevent it. The proposed limitation may be circumvented by increasing the valuation of property for taxing purposes, and the politicians in control of the Chicago City Government are constantly making efforts in that direction. The occasional revolt of the taxpayers against the taxeaters and still rarer success of such a movement furnish only temporary relief. The influence of the ward politician and the contractor over the irresponsible rabble soon restores control to the taxeating minority. "Municipal reform," as agitated by citizens' clubs and in the Legislature, has no staying qualities.

The remedy which is to be thorough and lasting must go to the root of the evil. Universal suffrage may be held as sacred as ever in National and State affairs without requiring that it shall control the business affairs of local communities; or, if it be retained for the municipal system, it may still be modified in such manner as to give the taxpayers a proper representation in the disbursement of their money. Mr. Kasson directs attention to three plans which would seem to offer permanent relief.

1. What may be called the Washington plan vests the government of the city in a board of three Commissioners, who are appointed by the President, and act under the control of Congress. One of the Commissioners is a practical engineer, and the other two represent the two political parties. The City Government of Washington under the reign of universal suffrage was brought to the verge of bankruptcy; under the new system Mr. Kasson describes it as "one of the cleanest, healthiest, and best-governed cities in the world," and he doubts whether a single taxpayer can be found who would return to the old system of self-government by unlimited suffrage. Of course the same system could be provided for other cities by action of the State Legislatures, from which municipalities derive their powers, but it may well be doubted whether it would prove desirable. The City of Washington is unique in many respects, and the President and Congress of the United States can be trusted more safely with municipal supervision than the Governors and Legislatures of the various States.

2. Another system which commends a certain degree of confidence was suggested as early as Madison's day and by that distinguished statesman himself. It contemplates two Houses in the governing Council, one to be elected by the taxpayers and the other by all citizens. This plan might enable the taxpayers to exercise a certain check upon the expenditure of their money, and still save to the people the assumed "right" of universal suffrage.

3. The system of municipal government which prevails in Vienna, the Austrian Capital, could be adapted to universal suffrage. The whole body of electors may be divided into three classes, each electing an equal number of representatives in the Board of Aldermen and Council, if there be two Houses; the landowners paying annual taxes exceeding a certain amount may elect one-third; other proprietors, manufacturers, merchants, paying over another amount in annual taxes, may elect another third; all other taxpayers and citizens may elect the remaining third. In such case the entire mass of citizens would be represented, but the taxpayers, controlling two-thirds of the Municipal Legislature, would be able to protect their property.

It is certain that the time is not far distant when the principal American cities will demand some system of permanent municipal reform, and the leading minds in public life should begin to give the matter serious study.

THE STATUS OF WOMEN IN AMERICA AND IN EUROPE.

Several papers in the American and English magazines, notably in the North American and the Fortnightly Review, have led to considerable discussion on both sides of the Atlantic as to the status of women in America and in Great Britain and the European countries. The general verdict is, that women in America are treated with far more respect, courtesy, and consideration by men than in any other part of the world, and, as it is urged that woman is what man makes her, it is therefore acknowledged that the American dames and maidens are far more charming, vivacious, intelligent, and companionable than their sisters of England and Europe.

Indeed, some writers greatly exaggerate the chivalric devotion of the male American towards lovely woman. Thus George Augustus Sala, who has been several times in America, in discussing Mary Anderson's acting in the Illustrated London News says: "In America every woman is a queen. From the shores of Cape Cod to the Golden Gate she is worshiped with a devotion almost verging on idiocy and treated with a gallantry far beyond the limits of reason." The hyperbole is of course due to the fact that Mr. Sala is a Britisher, and that in his own country women are treated with scant courtesy, not even with what would be called ordinary politeness in America. It may be that now they are treated with more chivalry than Tennyson's hero in "Locksley Hall" describes and held "a little better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse." Mr. Sala, however, says that "In England woman is not looked upon as particularly embodying all the heavenly virtues, and Englishmen are not carried away by the sentiment for female heroism which so strongly obtains at the other (this) side of the Atlantic." A novel which has been widely read in England and America, Lawrence Oliphant's "Altiora Peto," and which has been heralded as a faithful picture of high-life in England, more than bears out Mr. Sala's statement. In the book there is not one good—we had almost said not one virtuous—English woman described. All the married women flirt, and their husbands seem to approve of it, because they in turn flirt with other women. All the young women are eager, almost desperate, husband-hunters. The women, it is true, excuse themselves for their questionable conduct on the ground that the practice of flirting is forced on them by the example of their husbands, which bears out the statement of the Englishman that "Woman is what man makes her." If the truth of this were admitted American men would have good reasons to congratulate themselves on their chivalric devotion to the sex, for nearly every writer, English and French, nowadays admits the superior intelligence, manners, and virtues of the American women. The best testimony to this has been borne by those English and French grande dames who recently resolved to exclude American ladies from their parties, because they were fast "picking up the most desirable young men," those for whom the English and French matchmaking mammas had in vain set matrimonial traps and snares. Mr. Labouchère, a candid Englishman, speaking recently on the interesting subject, said: "American women are in nine cases out of ten infinitly more agreeable as companions than English women. They are better instructed, they talk better, they dress better, and they flirt better. They are neither dolts nor tomboys dressed in petticoats, nor bread-and-butter misses." The last sentence of this quotation is no doubt meant for Mr. Labouchère's countrywomen.

Besides the want of consideration for the sex by men in England, there is another reason why the English woman is not equal to her American sister. The educational facilities for women, at least up to within a few years, have not been as good in England as in America. There is nothing like the American high-school in England. The young ladies' seminaries are admittedly inferior to ours. As Lady Mary Wortley Montague wrote over a century ago, "Learning is necessary to the happiness of women"; and again, "Knowledge amuses their solitude, moderates the passions, consoles them in affliction, and teaches them to be contented with small expense." Learning and knowledge have most surely had a beneficent influence on the American women.

So far we have dealt only with the position of the American woman as compared to her English sister. In France a woman is treated as either a wayward and incomprehensible ornament, or as a devotee, who is kept under strict surveillance until she is married. In Italy and Spain she is treated as a petted slave. We are told by Col. Higginson in the Woman's Journal that "all theories of social courtesy in Germany so far as I have known imply deference as due to man, and not to woman." In Russia so great is the degradation of women that noble ladies are driven to Nihilism as a means by which their condition may be improved.

The American woman is not only the most favored, but the best and most charming, of her sex.

MR. PARNELL'S HOPES.

Tenniel in a clever cartoon which appears in a recent number of Punch represents Mr. Gladstone as a schoolmaster addressing a class composed of his Cabinet officers and three or four Irish members of Parliament, among whom Parnell has a conspicuous place. The boys are preparing for vacation. Sir Henry James appears with his corrupt-practices prize volume nicely bound, and Mr. Chamberlain has two volumes, patents and bankruptcy. Both are commended by the head master and sent on their way rejoicing, Sir William Harcourt gets scant consolation for his failure, while the Irish boys are warmly complimented for not forcing the head master to adopt extreme measures and radical courses. And there is an intimation of good things to come. The appearance of the cartoon marks a new kind of temper on the part of the English people in regard to Irish matters, and taken in connection with the chorus of praises with which Mr. Parnell's recent utterance before the Land League in Dublin has been received gives the Irish solid grounds for hope.

The Pall Mall Gazette, referring to the last phase, says:

> Mr. Parnell's praises are to be heard in every English newspaper. His address, we are told, was prudent, practical, statesmanlike, and we know not what. Far be it from us to deny the justice of this recognition of the shrewdness and sagacity of one of the ablest and wariest Irishmen ever sent to St. Stephen's, especially when we find that the organ of ascendency at Dublin "quite agrees" with the observations of the Irish leader.

The observations in question if made by Mr. Parnell two years ago would have been denounced by every English journal, the Pall Mall Gazette excepted, as treasonable, seditious, and calling for the prosecution of its author. In the address referred to Mr. Parnell recalls the storm of vituperation and abuse with which he and his party were met at the opening of Parliament; how it was sought by Sir William Harcourt and Mr. Forster to connect them with the Invincible murderers, and to hold them responsible for their crimes; and how a leading journal expressed regret that none of them were hanged. He exults in his and his party's triumph over this storm of hate and malice, and "points with pride" to the fact that a session which opened with an announcement that "No Irish need apply" ended with very substantial concessions to the Irish demands, and that which was intended to be a purely British session turned out to be a quasi-Irish one. The address concludes with a congratulation and a prophecy:

> I think our position is one which should afford us every encouragement. I believe the day is not far distant, that not many years will go by, before we shall have gained the full program for which the Irish League was formed. It is no longer a question with the great body of Englishmen whether the Irish people shall have self-government, but as to the amount of self-government they will be willing to accept. I have every hope that before long a measure in the direction of local self-government will be laid before Parliament; and though it may not go the whole distance that we go, yet undoubtedly it will give considerable further powers to the Irish people, and train them in those habits of self-government and self-reliance which are of so much advantage and of such vital importance in forming a nation.

Does the chorus of approbation in which the English journals have joined mean that these predictions shall be fulfilled, that Mr. Parnell has no exaggerated hopes for the future, that the full program for which the Land League was formed shall be granted without dissent on the part of any of the political parties of England? It really seems as if the answer should be in the affirmative. "Some not uninfluential members among the English Radicals," says the Tory Saturday Review, "have as good as declared for home rule, and Mr. Gladstone has pledged himself to a large Irish measure of quite indefinit character for next season." The reviewer concludes from this that Mr. Parnell is altogether "justified in his tone of serenity," all the more so because Mr. Gladstone and his party seem to have a long lease of power, while Mr. Parnell is entirely master of the Irish situation and has a compact party of able men and a united nation at his back.

CHICAGO'S WATER-SUPPLY.

While Chicago has still an abundance of water for the supply of all legitimate demands—a fact sufficiently proved by the simple statement that the consumption per capita exceeds that of any other city in the world—a material decrease in the pressure of the supply has been noticed during the summer. The warmest weather and the coldest weather test the capacity of the pumps, for in a period of extreme heat the demand increases for sprinkling and cooling purposes, and in extreme cold it is a common practice to let the water run in order to prevent it from freezing in the pipes. Under either of these conditions the daily consumption is apt to exceed 100,000,000 gallons, and the capacity of the two pumping-works (four pumps) is limited to 130,000,000 gallons. But this rate of consumption makes no allowance for stoppages, repairs, and rest which are necessary for all machinery. But, aside from these special conditions, the increase in population, houses, factories, and machines requiring water is drawing upon the service so largely that the force is seriously inadequate in those sections of the city at a considerable distance from either the North Side or West Side works. The time is rapidly approaching when the necessity for an enlargement of the water-supply will become urgent, and prudence suggests that preparations for better service should be delayed no longer.

It is agreed that the most expedient plan for increasing the water-supply is to construct high-pressure works for serving the district bounded by Twelfth street, the river, and the lake, which includes most of the elevators, machinery, and tall buildings. The capacity of the two tunnels is much greater than that of the existing pumps, and hence the water-supply may be increased enormously by the construction of the new pumps. At the time this matter was under discussion it was estimated by the City Engineer that all the additional facilities necessary for carrying out the high-pressure system for the districts described may be provided at a cost of less than $250,000. But the project was dismissed by the Council ostensibly on the ground that there was no money to provide for the pumps, but really because there was no money for the Aldermen in the scheme. We presume the same selfish and corrupt consideration will continue to stand in the way of the needed improvement. But it is worth while for the people who are the victims of Aldermanic intrigue to remember that, if the Mayor and Council had abided by the new license law enjoined by the State and nullified by the city, the revenue accruing therefrom would have provided four times as much as is necessary to furnish all the additional facilities requisit to an abundant and unfailing supply, and ample pressure of water even in the most remote parts of the city.

Chicago may be obliged to await the election of a more conscientious City Government before it can procure the high-pressure water-works which are needed; but in the meantime the present City Government has nothing to lose by instituting a more thorough system of inspection to prevent the waste of water which is constantly going on in all parts of the city. If everybody were constrained to limit the consumption of water to a reasonable quantity compatible with the needs and comforts of metropolitan life, the pressure would be stronger everywhere, and there would be no legitimate ground of complaint in the immediate present. Perhaps Mayor Harrison may be induced, when he returns, to spare sufficient time from his political affairs to give this matter a little attention.

THE OPENING OF THE VATICAN LIBRARY.

Pope Leo XIII. is an opportunist. In this he is wholly unlike his predecessor. It is said of the Comte de Chambord that, acting on the advice of Pius IX., he remained honest and impractical, and thereby incurred the reproaches of the present Pontiff, which clouded his last years and hastened his end. Leo XIII. acts entirely on the principle that the end justifies the means, provided they are not openly wicked. Whatever will serve the church is good. This explains his bargain with the Czar; his negotiations with Bismarck; his congratulations to the profligate young King of Spain; his dickering with Earl Granville through Errington; and his maneuvres to force the Republican Government of France to accept his terms by affecting to support the pretensions of the Bourbons.

His course in throwing open the Vatican Library to the investigations of his historical students is opportunism of a different kind—bolder, more original, and altogether commendable. It is so contrary to the traditions, policy, almost to the teachings, of the church, that the announcement of it must be a nine-days' wonder among the habitués of the Vatican, and among the strictly orthodox everywhere. The great Vatican Library, with its untold literary treasures, its manuscripts covering the history of all the ages, its dusty tomes eloquent of the past, its parchments which can throw a strong reflected light into all the nooks and corners, lanes and alleys, cracks and crevices of the centuries gone, has been hitherto a sealed book. No one dared to look in. To do so was a crime punishable with excommunication. The only thing known of the contents was what was allowed to trickle through the labored volumes of the ecclesiastical historians. The history of the great Council of Trent, at which it may be said the creed of the Roman Catholic Church was formulated, is there in manuscript and parchment, but it has so far been kept from the world's gaze. Now the opportunist Pope finds it to the interest of the church that this great library shall be thrown open. Its records and parchments are to be accessible to men skilled in the writing of history. The school-books of France and Italy, Leo XIII. says, teem with perversions of historic truth. This can be proved by reference to the Vatican Library. Therefore at last has necessity become a virtue, and the literary treasures of the Papal palace are opened to the researches of the learned.

Leo XIII., in his letter to Cardinals De Luca, Pitra, and Hergenröther, says: "History studied without passion and prejudice from original documents is in itself the most splendid apology for the church and the Papacy." Therefore the original documents so long hid away, so hermetically sealed, will have their contents revealed to the enlightened world. Texts, he says, have been mutilated, exploded fables have been produced and reproduced, supreme Pontiffs, eminent for their virtues, have been vituperated, while documents to prove the mutilations and to expose the fables and the vituperations have been lying covered with the dust of ages in the Vatican Library. They could not be inspected, strange to say, even by men zealous for the honor and glory of the church, Roman Catholic and Protestant historians alike were excluded. Ranke, Milman, and Guizot made their discoveries in vindication of the church in certain grave matters despite the dog-in-the-manger policy of the Papacy. Libelous statements which the Pope tells us accumulated against some Roman Pontiffs were allowed to pass uncontradicted and unchallenged that the whole truth should not be known, perhaps, about others less worthy.

Now the course adopted by the school-book publishers and schoolmasters of France and Italy renders the abandonment of this traditional policy imperative. Students and historians are to be permitted to pursue their researches after truth "subject to rules sanctioned by our [Papal] authority." The bad must suffer that the good may be vindicated. Light must be let into the dark places that the morsel of truth may be discovered there. The profligacies of Alexander IV. and of all the Borgias and of some of the Medicis may be exposed that Gregory VII. and Alexander III. may perhaps be vindicated. It must be known whether Dante, who lived through the reigns of fourteen Popes, "two of whom he praised, five of whom he censured, and about seven of whom he was silent," spoke from prejudice or knowledge.

Leo XIII. boldly asserts that history will prove that Rome was destined by Providence to be the perpetual domicile and seat of the successors of St. Peter; that it was ordained that the Papacy should, "with complete independence, provide for the government of God's church throughout the world." It will further, he says, prove to Italians that the Papacy has conferred untold advantages on them, and that it will be their interest and in accordance with the Divine will that the temporal sovereignty shall be restored. Christendom will be taught that the church has been the mother of enlightenment and progress. This is Leo XIII.'s idea of the effect of the opening of the Vatican Library to historical students.

He is rather sanguine about the result of his new liberality. The intelligent world will closely investigate his statements, and will closely scan the proofs to be furnished. The Pope has made many assertions that have already found general acceptance. Protestant historians like Ranke, speaking for their fellow-Protestants, concede that the church in the early ages did much for enlightenment, progress, and Christian unity, but those who are now skeptical as to the Divine intention to make Rome the Capital of the Christian world, the Popes the successors of the apostles, and the Papacy the Divine agency on earth, will continue in their skepticism. No man of modern time had greater reverence for the past of the church or had more gratitude for what it did for enlightenment and liberty than Joseph Mazzini, but he utterly repudiated its authority in the "stage of education which mankind in the providential plan had reached," and he declared that its prelates are now "as motionless sphynxes in the vast desert, inertly contemplating the shadows of the centuries as they pass, while humanity, which they should have guided, has gone otherwhere." Mazzini's countrymen, notwithstanding the eloquent appeal which Leo makes to them, are no more likely to admit that the temporal sovereignty should be restored than Mazzini believed that the Divine mission of the church was to hold humanity at a stand-still. The first note comes from the organ of the people, the Popolo Romano, which believes that "the temporal power has had its day, and that history, invoked by Pope Leo XIII., will confirm this opinion."

SISTER REPUBLICS.

The treaty by which the United States was formally acknowledged by Great Britain to be a free and independent Nation was signed at Paris 100 years ago last Monday. Were it not for the truly loyal and generous assistance which the French nation gave to the Revolutionary patriots the struggle with Great Britain would have been prolonged, and the day of nationhood deferred perhaps for a quarter of a century. There can be little doubt that it would have come even without foreign aid of any kind. But the intervention of France added some years to the age of the Republic and to its career of progress and prosperity.

No man contributed more to make France the ally of the patriots of the Revolution than he whose statue was unveiled at Paris Thursday amid so many expressions of mutual friendship and congratulation between representative men of the two great Republics, France and America. The Marquis of Lafayette, before his nation had taken any action, had espoused the cause of the Americans. He had pledged to it his property, his influence, and his life. By voice and pen he succeeded in arousing enthusiasm for the cause of the Revolutionists among his awakening countrymen, and King Louis was only acting in accordance with the spirit of his subjects when he sent his soldiers and his ships to aid the struggling Republic. Many hundred Frenchmen, following the example of Lafayette, had already enlisted under the standard of Washington.

But Lafayette had aims beyond the establishment of a Republic in America. He loved liberty everywhere. He wished that all people could enjoy it. The establishment of a government of the people in America was to his mind an example and a beginning. He had no doubt that among the most intelligent people of the time the experiment of republican government would prove a success which would have its effect elsewhere, particularly in his own country. It would prove that a people were capable of governing themselves, and that the widest liberty among an intelligent people was not incompatible with public order, peace, and prosperity. Lafayette was more than a revolutionary soldier: he was an apostle of republicanism.

It was to honor his memory as such that his countrymen, proud of his history, in gratitude for his sacrifice, and in recognition of the true greatness of his career, erected the statue to him in their Capital last week. The participation of representative Americans in the ceremonies of the occasion was a fitting recognition of the debt of gratitude the American people owe to Lafayette and to France. It was a renewal of cordial pledges of friendship between the two peoples, begun so auspiciously, and never seriously interrupted—a friendship which becomes stronger each year as the institutions of both nations become more and more alike, as the principles of Lafayette, which have been applied so successfully in America, are more fully enforced in his own land. As America has attained the splendor and prosperity predicted by Lafayette, it is the hope of every patriotic American that the French Republic, also founded on his principles, shall enjoy those blessings. The whole American Nation repeats the wish of Mr. Morton: "May the friendship which Washington and Lafayette founded remain forever unbroken between the two Republics."

IN another column this morning we print that part of Postmaster-General Howe's report for 1882 which relates to the subject of a postal telegraph. It is timely and interesting. We are not aware that this part of the report has been printed in full in any newspaper in this section of the country. The argument of the late Postmaster-General will commend itself to most thinking men as the cleverest and most convincing short statement of the case in favor of a Government telegraph that has yet been advanced. The right of the Government to control a telegraph he shows is incontestible. The expediency of it he makes equally plain. The economy of it he puts in a new and favorable light. No great perspicacity is required to see that one establishment can do the work of sending, receiving, and distributing the people's news better and cheaper than two can do it. The Government can do it cheaper than a private corporation because it will not be harassed by blackmailing competitors; it can utilize for the telegraph many of the buildings and much of the clerical force now employed by the postal service; and it will not be expected to satisfy the cupidity of shareholders by declaring exorbitant dividends on watered stock. As to the civil-service features of the proposed Government telegraph, the late Postmaster-General forcibly contends, no apprehensions need be felt. The operators are skilled workmen who cannot be displaced by ward "bosses" or cross-roads "workers." Where expert service is required, as in the Patent-Office, the Government never has any difficulty in securing it and retaining it. As the late Postmaster-General quaintly said: "The union of the "two services would . . . necessitate the "employment of telegraph-operators for "Postmasters in many offices. That would "result in giving to the administration of "not a few offices men who have learned "to do one thing in place of those who have "never learned to do anything." All of the report which relates to this subject is worthy careful attention. It is terse, spirited, and epigrammatical; and, as we think, sound in its reasonings and its conclusions up to the point where it leaves the reader to infer that its author would favor the purchase of the present telegraph system. To that it is well known THE TRIBUNE is irrevocably opposed, believing that the Government can construct a better system than the Western Union at one-third to one-quarter the face value of the fictitious stock and bonds represented in its outstanding obligations.

THERE remains little doubt that the trunk lines have lost all faith in each other once more, and will soon be carrying the public between Chicago and New York for nearly nothing. Many rumors were afloat in New York yesterday. First class rates to Chicago had been trimmed to $15 by experienced buyers. It was reported, though incorrectly, that the Grand Trunk was selling an open cut of $2 on fares between Chicago and Buffalo, and it was felt on all sides that every open movement by any one road would be gladly seized by the others as an excuse for completely unmasking practices now but thinly concealed.

ACCORDING to the cable chronicles which appear in this morning's TRIBUNE, Americans have not viewed the situation in Europe as more serious than it is. There are now represented to be three active causes of distrust in which every Power except England is more or less involved. France has a war on her hands, and her people are not united as to the advisability of its prosecution. The possible consequences of this war are highly alarming to every civilized nation on earth. Germany has demanded of Russia an explanation of her course in Bulgaria, and has received no reply whatever. The Croatian uprising threatens the whole Austro-Hungarian Empire, and all the more so from the reason that the Hungarians will not believe the Austrians are so much inspired by fears for the whole Empire as by a desire to cripple the Magyar Kingdom. With all this feeling of insecurity come the autumn maneuvres of all the Powers, during which war is always likely to be precipitated between any two of them through misapprehensions on one side as well as treachery on the other.

THE First Aid of Von Moltke has made a private report, which has unaccountably become public, in which he gives a very frank statement of the contempt in which he holds the French military organization. After witnessing the French maneuvres, he writes that the whole army would "peter out" in a war, just as it did at Sedan, the Generals being inefficient and the soldiers, with the exception of the Bretons, "physically worthless." This cheerful narrative has come to light just in time to raise a hubbub in Paris.

IN A corridor of the State-House of South Carolina yesterday morning a controversy arose between the Secretary of State and the private secretary of the Governor. The private secretary, in the fight which ensued, withdrew slowly, maintaining an unbroken front, and finally reinforced himself with something between a poker and a crowbar in defensive value. With this weapon he smashed the head of the Secretary of State. This closed the engagement. The excitement at Columbia is represented as exceeding anything since secession.

THE Washington correspondent of THE TRIBUNE last week asked certain of the post-office officials at Washington why it was that the transient rates of postage on newspapers remained relatively so high, though the rates on newspapers in bulk, and finally on letters, had been reduced. Some of the persons interrogated replied that the reason was, as they supposed, that the newspaper publishers had not sent a lobby to Washington to influence Congress to make such a reduction. This reply reveals a characteristic ignorance of the merits of the question in dispute. There is no reason why the newspaper publishers should send a lobby to Washington for the purpose indicated. The publishers obtain no profit worth mentioning from the sale of newspapers that are sent at transient rates through the mails. These are commonly papers that have been once read, and are sent away to be read a second or third time by friends at a distance. The number of such transient publications in any one case transmitted through the mails as compared with the average daily circulation of the newspaper is insignificant, and all papers sent direct from the office of publication to the post-office are charged but two cents per pound, or one-quarter the transient rate. It ought to be clear from what we have said that the transient rate on newspapers affects the public much more closely than it does the proprietors of newspapers, yet we find the Third Assistant Postmaster-General saying on this subject:

> The rates of postage on transient newspapers are about as low now as they can be without provision for a very great deficiency in the postal receipts. Mr. Hazen, who has charge of the financial affairs of the department, considers newspaper rates proportionately low when compared with the reduced letter postage, and in his recommendation to the President last year did not suggest a lower rate. The rate of letter postage is now 64 cents per pound, of transient newspapers eight cents per pound, newspapers to subscribers two cents per pound outside the county of publication and within the county limits free. Mr. Davis does not think the department will recommend any reduction from these figures.

The rate on newspapers to subscribers has nothing to do with the question. There is no complaint on account of that rate. But the rate to the people who buy newspapers and wish to send them through the mails is excessive, and out of proportion to the first cost of the thing transmitted. For example, the Government charges two cents, or almost half the first cost of THE TRIBUNE, to send a transient copy through the mails; it charges three cents for a sixteen-page paper, and four cents for a twenty-four-page paper, such as we issue every Sunday morning during the busiest season, and sell for five cents. We should like very much to know why, according to Mr. Davis' own meaning, the rates for newspapers to subscribers should be two cents a pound, and for transient newspapers four times as much, or eight cents a pound.

THERE was one little incident connected with his tannery experience in Western Pennsylvania which Mr. Gould forgot to mention to the Senate Committee at their recent interview. The following communication from Mr. John Nevin-Hill, of Northumberland, Pa., to a Philadelphia paper, supplies the missing link, and will no doubt jog Mr. Gould's memory and induce him to remit his check for $15 to one of the acquaintances of his early years:

> The Gouldsborough war has been frequently recalled by anecdote, but evidently the landlord of the little tavern at the ruined tanneries has not been interviewed. He can tell, no doubt, an interesting tale of the rise and fall of Gouldsborough, giving prominence to the fact that when Jay Gould finally abandoned the scene of his daring speculation necessity compelled him to borrow $15 of mine host, who to this day mourns the loss of his shekels.

HENRI CONSCIENCE, who died Tuesday, was the most noted of Flemish writers. Having in his youth been apprenticed to a horticulturist he retained a passionate love of flowers, and during his last illness he planted more than 80 varieties in long rows of boxes made by his own hands. For he was not only a novelist, but a carpenter, a locksmith, a mason, a painter, a picture-framer, and a good botanist and chemist to boot. His study was a mixture of a laboratory and a joiner's shop, filled with tools and chemical utensils, and adorned with pictures and diplomas framed by himself. He received during his illness but few visitors, and refused to answer any letters. He kept a daily diary of his illness entitled "Dagboek Mijner Ziekte."

THE astronomers at Cambridge have computed the following as the approximate elements of the comet Brooks: Perihelion passage, March 16 next; longitude of perihelion point, 122 degrees; longitude of north node, 278 degrees; inclination of orbit, 82 degrees; perihelion distance, 0.75. The comet is not bright enough to be visible in the moonlight. It will be visible about the 20th of this month in north declination six and a quarter degrees, and right ascension sixteen hours twenty-five minutes. It is moving south about thirteen minutes of arc, and westward about twenty seconds of time each day. It promises to be a very bright object next spring.

WILL the Galveston News, Democratic as it is, never "leave off its damnable faces" and back up its sick candidate for Governor in Ohio instead of continually poking at him such jibes as this?:

> Hoadly's Philadelphia physician says he is suffering from "excessive political enthusiasm." This is a decidedly new name. People have heard it called sick-headache, blues, slight indisposition, run-around-with-the-boys-too-late, and various other names, but "excessive political enthusiasm" is decidedly new. Away at this distance from the scene of operations it looks as if it might pay Judge Hoadly to amend the name of his complaint on the eve of a general election.

ROSWELL P. FLOWER, whose large "bar'l" and small brains triumphed over young Mr. Astor's financial hogshead and even less brains, and sent him to Congress, is the latest suggestion as a possible New York candidate for President. Several of the rural Democratic papers in the State are already wearing the Flower badge in their editorial button-holes, and are cruelly reminded by the Albany Evening Journal that the Flower emblem, in the language of horticulture, "is the camellia of political immorality."

WHITELAW REID is evidently ambitious to write the tariff plank in the New York Republican platform and work in some of Mr. R. P. Porter's observations on the beneficent operations of a high protective duty on pig-iron.

[NEW YORK Herald.]—St. Louis is not able to compete with Chicago in the glory of its candy-store windows, in the size of its elevators and feet, or in the muscle of its politicians.

But St. Louis is the head-centre of philosophy in this country. A St. Louis journalist this week begins a report thus: "The work of iconoclasm is not endemic but universal, and the breaker of our images presents himself most inopportunely as to place and season, proving that our idols are of clay, our ideals friable, and that our worship is wasted on a thin substance." This rendered into Chicagoese means "Johnny Mulligan, the statesman, went into Mulhooley's saloon, and, as no one would fight him, he cleaned out the whole crowd."

A FRIEND of Mrs. Garfield at Saratoga, when recently asked how she regarded the late attacks on the President's memory, replied: "She pays no attention to them whatever. Mrs. Garfield is a close reader of the newspapers, and has been for many years, but she is never in the least disturbed by attacks on the General. She remembers those who make them, and has lived to see a good many maligners of her husband brought to repentance, but she never allows these things to disturb her."

THE late Dr. Moffat, the venerable missionary, became so accustomed to "roughing it" in Africa that when he returned to England he could not sleep comfortably on a soft pillow. So for his use at home he had one made of wood, and when he was visiting friends he asked them to put a block of wood or a wooden footstool at the head of his bed.

MR. FILES evidently didn't know Mr. Costigan was loaded. During the second round when he beheld a brilliant succession of stellar phenomena a glimpse of the actual condition of things seems to have flashed athwart his No. 28 intellect.

MR. HENDRICKS does not intend to take part in the Ohio campaign. The Ohio Democrats will kindly paste this in their hats and show it to Mr. Hendricks at the next National Convention.

IT would perhaps be well for Mr. George A. Shufeldt not to go plowing through the Fourteenth Ward after dark. It is there that the late King Sobieski's followers "most do congregate."

INSTEAD of being satisfied with one of the greatest shows on earth—to-wit: its two Constitutional Conventions, both daily—Dakota must needs put in a bid for a prize-fight.

THE story of the alleged discovery of De Soto's bones is not without a suspicious resemblance to one of Mr. Joseph Mulhatton's charming fairy tales.

IF the Western Union Directors have any sort of appreciation about them they will doubtless call upon Jay Gould to open the next meeting with prayer.

MR. FREDDIE GEBHARD, like Mr. Banquo's ghost, will not down. He is in Paris and probably "swapping gum" with the Lily at this very moment.

I AM here, but it is impossible to tell just now whether I've come to stay. The "Half-Breeds" seem to have "dropped."—"Me Too."

FASHION NOTES FROM THE West End Dry Goods House

Notable changes are being made in the shapes and colors of Dresses this season, some of the newest shown at the West End Dry-Goods House being almost identical with those worn in England during the Reformation. CARSON, PIRIE & CO. show a great variety of these stylish Renaissance Dresses in rich dark shades of Plush and Cashmere at $15. Ask for the TUDOR GOWN.

AND

Seem to become more popular daily. Carson, Pirie & Co. show some beautiful styles in Braided Jerseys at very reasonable prices, with a full line of the most desirable shapes in excellent qualities of Plain Stockinet at $2.00, $3.00, and $5.00.

THE OXFORD GOWN

Is one of the latest of the Chicago styles, and Chicago is rapidly becoming a centre of fashion. This beautiful Fall Wrap can be found in a great variety of materials at the West End Dry-Goods House, Madison and Peoria-sts.

PLUSHES

This season are more beautifully finished than ever before, and will by many be preferred to Seal Skin, as they are known to be much more durable. Carson, Pirie & Co. make them up entirely by hand, in the style of the best Furrier's work, at very reasonable prices, and would earnestly recommend their patrons to place their orders early, even if they do not wish the garments delivered immediately, as it will not be possible to finish them as carefully in the rush of the busy season. Garments ordered now will receive careful attention and be kept to await the convenience of our customers. West End Dry-Goods House, Madison and Peoria-sts.

THE RUSSIAN CIRCULAR

Is now made everywhere, and some sad-looking garments are sold in New York and elsewhere under that honored name, but only at the West End Dry-Goods House, where it was designed and first introduced, can it be found as it ought to be made. We show some beautiful combination garments admirably suited to the variable character of our Fall and Winter weather, to which we invite special attention.

AND MANTLES

Vie in popularity with the famous Persian Shawl. We show some Stylish Wraps of this character at $15.00, $17.00, and $20.00. Much under value.

Weber Pianos

find their field in the more cultured classes, and more especially in the highest ranks of the musical world. It cannot be expected that people of no musical knowledge will appreciate the superlative merits of such an instrument.

To a great many people one Piano is just as good as another. As all Pianos look alike, such undiscriminating listeners argue that there is really very little difference between the high-priced, first-class Piano and the cheap second-rate one.

The indorsement of the best musical authorities and their patronage of these Instruments furnish that absolute protection which must always be the highest consideration in so large an investment.

HEALTHY DIGESTION! CLEAR COMPLEXION! BRIGHT EYES!

Round form, an elastic step, and last, but not least, a happy state of mind, is the dearest wish of dyspeptics, and the weak generally. No other tonic is so well calculated to bring about these results as AREND'S BEEF, IRON, and WINE, with CINCHONA. It promptly invigorates the brain and nervous system, excites the activity of the assimilating and secretory glands, thereby purifying and improving the quality of the blood. Being skillfully made from the best materials, it is as pleasant to the taste as rich and fruity wine, adapting it specially to those delicate organizations which revolt at the ordinary nauseous tonics.

DUST TO DUST.

FUNERAL OF HUGH J. HASTINGS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The solemn requiem mass for the repose of the soul of the late Hugh J. Hastings was begun this morning in the Church of St. Leo, Twenty-eighth street and Fifth avenue, at 9 o'clock. The altar was draped in mourning, and before each inner door of the church hung a portière of funeral black. In the centre aisle, at the foot of the altar steps, stood the coffin, covered by a pall of black velvet and silver, and upon the lid were placed a golden crucifix, a wreath of white and red roses, a pillow of white flowers surmounted by a broken shaft and bearing the inscription, "Farewell, Old Friend," and some branches of sacred palm. On either side of the bier stood ten-branched silver candelabra. The body had lain in the church all night, watched over by two Sisters. At ten minutes to 9 the portière of the vestry-door was drawn back, the notes of the organ stole gently upon the ear in one of Händel's slow and melancholy largos, and the widow of the lamented journalist, leaning upon the arm of President Arthur, entered and proceeded to the seats assigned to the chief mourners. They were followed by Richard, John, William and Robert Hastings, brothers of the deceased, and his nephew, William Hastings. After these came the pall-bearers, who, besides President Arthur, were Messrs. Roscoe Conkling, John Hoey, Samuel Sloan, Jay Gould, Jenkins Van Schaick, Isaac England, J. Nelson Tappan, William T. Weed, Gen. Thomas T. Eckert, Hugh J. Jewett. The chief mourners and near relatives occupied the front pews to the left of the altar and the pall-bearers those to the right. At 9 o'clock the Rev. Thomas J. Ducey, preceded by the Rev. Father Toley and acolytes in black cassocks and white albs, entered and began the services. The soprano solo "Come Unto Me" was sung by Mme. Salvotti, Hargitt's "O, Salutaris Hosia" by M. Coletti (baritone), and Leybach's "Pie Jesu" by Mme. Salvotti. At the conclusion of the mass, priests and acolytes retired and returned in procession, headed by Father Toley bearing the professional crucifix, with which he took his place at the foot of the coffin. Father Ducey, taking for his text the words, "Blessed are they which die in the Lord, for they rest from their labors," delivered a brief address in well-chosen language. The absolution was then pronounced, and the ceremonies of the "Asperges" and censing were performed, the melancholy strains of Chopin's "Marche Funèbre" swelled through the building, the relatives, chief mourners, and pall-bearers slowly filed down the centre aisle, and the coffin was borne from the church. It was covered with black cloth and was heavily mounted with oxidized silver. Among those who followed the bier were Judge Gunning, S. Bedford, Algernon S. Sullivan, W. J. Florence, Senator Bixby, H. C. Hardy, Charles H. Lanier, Jordan L. Mott, ex-President of the Board of Aldermen; Sidney Dillon, President of the Union Pacific Railroad; Thomas Acton, Superintendent of the Treasury; Postmaster H. G. Pearson, Gen. Gastlin, ex-Judge Dittenhoefer, Eugene Kelly, the Hon. John Kelly, Richard O'Gorman, the Board of Assessors, Judge McAdam, D. O. Mills, Donald McKay, President of the New York Stock Exchange; Charles Lanier, Sheriff Davidson, Judge Colton, Lawrence Jerome, and ex-Secretary Hamilton Fish.

At 10 o'clock the remains, accompanied by the family and intimate friends of the deceased, left the church and proceeded to the Grand Central depot, when they were placed on board the 10:30 train for Albany. The interment will be in the Rural Cemetery at Albany, where the final services will be performed by Father Ducey. The pall-bearers and family accompanied the remains.

FRAUDS

IN THE COLLECTION OF WATER-RENTS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The disclosures of the frauds perpetrated in the collection of water-rates by unauthorized persons, either directly connected with the office of the Water Register or familiar with the methods of that office, continue to be a subject of interest to citizens and politicians. It was ascertained from a perfectly trustworthy source that, so far as present developments have shown, there will be a deficiency in the water-rents which should have been collected and turned over to the city treasury of about $30,000, and further investigation may increase this amount materially. Great secrecy prevails in official circles today as to the steps being taken to detect and punish the persons who may be responsible for the irregularities. There are two suspected persons, one of whom is a fugitive from justice, and the other is in this city. Presentments against the suspected persons will undoubtedly be made to the grand jury at once. The officers of the department refuse to make known the names of the persons who have been engaged in this conspiracy to swindle the city—that is, people who paid money to unauthorized collectors—but it was ascertained today that many of them have become frightened at the prospects of exposure, and have already paid to Register Chambers the amount called for by the bills which they had tried to compromise by the fraud just discovered. Up to noon today about $10,000 had been received from consumers on account of these old bills.

NEW SIGNAL CODE.

IMPORTANT NEWS FOR MARINERS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—A new official "danger and distress and storm signal code" for the signal service, seacoast stations, and mariners has just been published by the Chief Signal Officer at Washington, with full instructions for day and for night signaling. It also contains a chart of the life-saving service day and night signal code, with instructions. This system has long been needed. The flag system, it is well known, has been in use a number of years, but it has never been arranged in such a form as to be useful for signaling between stations on shore and vessels at sea. The night-signal system of this code, as adopted by the service, is the invention of Benjamin F. Coston, whose widow perfected the same for use in our navy during the War. His son, William F. Coston, has introduced it in a wider field—viz.: in commercial as well as naval marines. By means of this night signal code the Coston night signals have been adapted to the signals of the international code. In using these lights the letters of the international code are made by burning single or combined lights corresponding to the letter. Intervals of twenty seconds will be made between the letters of any combination, and intervals of one minute between combinations when more than one is required to signal any message.

GOTHAM ITEMS.

BRIEF DISPATCHES.

The police of this city have been notified to look for Abram S. Nesbitt, the 16-year-old son of the President of the Second National Bank of Easton, Pa., who ran away from home, and is supposed to have come here. He is said to be heir to $500,000.

Gen. Raimon Leocadio Bonachea, "Chief of the Vanguard" of Cuba Libre, who has been attempting to organize filibustering expeditions in this country, finding that he was being followed, and that all his actions were watched, started for Jamaica by Friday's steamer. He is said to have learned that both the Spanish officials and the local authorities were engaged in keeping track of his movements.

Imports of specie at New York for the week ended yesterday, $282,387, making a total since Jan. 1 of $10,932,755, against $2,531,415 for the same period in 1882; exports of specie for the week, $166,300, making a total since Jan. 1 of $10,726,165, against $42,884,781 for the corresponding period last year. Imports at the Port of New York for the week ended yesterday, $7,601,077, of which $2,473,932 were dry goods and $5,127,165 general merchandise. Total imports since Jan. 1, $327,916,566, against $362,368,245 for the same period in 1882.

The Rev. J. M. Oldfather, his wife, and three children sailed on the City of Berlin yesterday afternoon on his way to the missionary fields of Persia. They were accompanied by Mr. A. A. Hargrave and the Misses T. Holliday, O. B. Sherwood and S. J. Bassett, of Indiana. Mr. Oldfather is bound for Ooroomeeyah, a fortified town of Northern Persia, in Azerbaijan. Mr. Oldfather was there for ten years, having returned to this country in July, 1882. He has been in Rockville, Ind., since then. All of these missionaries have been sent out by the Foreign Board of Presbyterian Missions. Another missionary who sailed yesterday on the Bolivia is the Rev. P. T. Easton, of this city, who with his wife and family is returning to his mission field at Tabreez, a city of North Persia, Capital of the Province of Azerbaijan.

Mrs. Langtry, before her departure for Europe, in an interview with a reporter stated that she held large mortgages upon property on Fifth avenue and other streets. The truth of this statement has been partially substantiated by the filing in the Register's office of an assignment of several mortgages to Emilie Charlotte Langtry, of the Island of Jersey, the assignee being Mr. William Boswell. By the instrument he, in consideration of $81,000, releases and transfers to Mrs. Langtry all his interests in mortgages upon property on the west side of Eighth avenue, about 103 feet north of Thirteenth street; also on the east side of the same avenue, between Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh streets, and on the north side of Fifty-third street, a short distance east of Sixth avenue. The amounts of Mrs. Langtry's claim upon the pieces of property are respectively $16,000, $45,000, and $20,000.

A BIG SUIT.

Gen. Connors, of California, Sued by W. R. Derby, of This City, to Recover $150,000.

William R. Derby began a suit in assumpsit yesterday in the Circuit Court against Patrick E. Connors for $150,000. Derby sold to Connors, about ten years ago, a tract of about twenty-five acres of land located a mile west of Central Park, and extending from Madison to Randolph streets, and took a mortgage on it for the purchase money. Little or nothing was ever paid on it, and this suit is brought to force a settlement. Mr. Connors is a California miner, and is supposed to be able to pay for the land if he chooses. He called on Mr. Derby a day or two ago on this business, but did not talk to suit. The suit was suppressed during yesterday until service of the summons was got on the defendant.

At 8 o'clock last night Gen. Connors was in the rotunda of the Palmer House when Deputy-Sheriff Hanchett promptly served a summons. The General was very much astonished, and afterward left his hotel. He returned about 11:30 o'clock, and was met by a TRIBUNE reporter. As the hour was late he desired to give no details. In fact, at first he declined to say a word. But he made this general statement: About twelve years ago he had an interest in the Flagstaff Mining Company of Utah. He came on here to Chicago, and H. H. Honoré got him interested in some land which lies between Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth streets, and between Madison street and Park avenue, in the vicinity of the Northwestern shops. Mr. Honoré held a bond for this tract—three blocks and a fraction—from Derby. Gen. Connors traded his interest in the Flagstaff Mine for the land, and the deed was given for the land by Derby. Gen. Connors gave Derby a mortgage. The purchase price was $64,500. About three years ago Gen. Connors says he told Derby he didn't think he (Connors) could ever pay for the land—he had paid about $2,500—and that he would let Derby take it. Derby agreed to do so, and the deed was to be sent to Gen. Connors, living near San Francisco, for his wife to sign. However, Derby changed his mind. The mortgage has been long since due. Yesterday Gen. Connors arrived here from West Point, where his son has just graduated, and called on Derby. They talked over the matter amicably, so Gen. Connors says, and at 5 o'clock took a social drink together. Derby agreed to meet him at the Palmer House at 8 p. m., and there they were to arrange to drive out to the land today, look at it, and arrive at a satisfactory settlement. "I was here at 8," said Gen. Connors. "Derby came here with a Deputy Sheriff, pointed me out, slunk away, and the service was obtained. That is the way he kept his engagement. I think he acted mean, and I am indignant at it. If he were a younger man I think I should call him to an account for it. He says his claim is $150,000. I can't conceive how it can be that. I believe now that he and Honoré intended to fleece me from the start. He thinks to sue and get judgment, and compel me to come to his terms. I will fight him as long as there is any law. I shall remain here to arrange for the suit."

Gen. Connors was Colonel of the Thirtieth California, and was then sent to Utah, where he was made Brigadier-General, and in 1865 had under his command 18,000 troops between Nevada and the Missouri. Custer's troops were there under him. His home is twenty miles from 'Frisco.

OBITUARY.

Farish C. Furnam.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Ex-State Senator Farish C. Furnam died at his home near Milledgeville, Georgia's old Capital, this morning, after an illness of two weeks. This morning he was taken with acute congestion of the bowels, which ailment hurried his death. Deceased during the campaign in which the location of the Capital was submitted to the people advocated the retention of the Capital at Milledgeville, from which place it was removed to Atlanta by the convention of 1868. He was regarded as the most prominent advocate on the stump for Milledgeville, and in the campaign won considerable reputation as an orator. He was regarded as one of the prominent young men in the State at the time that Colquitt was elected Senator, and he was suggested as a suitable person to succeed Senator Hill. A year or two ago he got up a formula for a fertilizer that, after being tested, gave him considerable reputation.

Mrs. Mary E. Chamberlain.

Mrs. Mary E. Chamberlain, 49 years of age, died at 7:20 o'clock last evening at No. 148 West Monroe street. The deceased owned considerable property on the West Side, where she was well known and respected for her charities. The body will be taken for interment to her former home at Ausable Forks, N. Y.

Dr. Robert Gunn.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The remains of Dr. Robert Gunn arrived here at noon today. He died a few days ago at Tucson, Ariz. He was one of the best-known citizens, and was for years Superintendent of the Government works here. He was a prominent Mason.

John M. Krum.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 15.—John M. Krum, aged 73, who from 1843 to 1848 was Judge of the St. Louis Circuit Court, in 1848 Mayor of the city, and for nearly half a century a prominent member of the Western bar, died at his residence here at half-past 3 this afternoon.

A CELEBRATED CASE.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The case of James H. Ringo, the man who was City Register when the $100,000 of city bonds were stolen, comes up Monday. The suit is brought against Ringo's bondsmen, the city claiming some loose or wrong conduct in exchanging and handling bonds. The approach of the celebrated case attracts some attention.

PEANUTS.

PETERSBURG, Va., Sept. 15.—Reports are received to the effect that the peanut crop is a perfect failure throughout the State. It is not believed more than one-fourth of the crop will be made. Some sections have not enough to be raised for seed next year. The loss is estimated at $200,000. The failure of the crop is owing to drouths.

The Large Increase in East-Bound Freight Shipments Prevents the Cutting of Rates.

Western Passenger Rates Unsettled—An Important Meeting to Be Held Tomorrow.

End of the Passenger Warfare at St. Paul—The Roads Make an Ironclad Agreement.

Important Project for the Consolidation of Canadian Lines—The Record of Minor Events.

Still Further Increase in East-Bound Freight Shipments—The Roads Have Plenty of Business, and Consequently Rate-Cutting Has Ceased.

As long as east-bound freight shipments from this city remain as heavy as they are at present there is no probability of serious troubles among the Eastern roads regarding the maintenance of rates. Freight shipments to the East have steadily increased from week to week since the beginning of August and business still continues to improve. Last week's increase was the heaviest yet experienced since the improvement commenced, and there is plenty of business now to keep all the roads busy. So long as the roads can get all the business they want at the prevailing rates it will do them no good to cut rates, and therefore rates are likely to be better maintained than they have been heretofore until their is another decline in shipments. For those reasons no complaints about cutting of rates on the part of the new lines have been heard during the last week, although the new lines still continue to get almost as large a percentage of the business as the old lines. The new rules for the diversion of business from the roads that have run ahead of their allotted percentages to the roads that have fallen behind seem to be satisfactory to all the lines, and considerable business has been divested from the Grand Trunk to the Lake Shore during the last week. Under the new rules no business is diverted where shippers object to the diversion, and each road has the right to select the freight that is to be diverted. Everything is expected to run smoothly now until the new percentages, which will apply from July 1, are announced by Commissioner Fink. But then there will be more trouble, as it is quite certain that the percentages will not prove satisfactory to all the roads. No sudden rupture will occur, however, on that account, because the dissatisfied roads will take an appeal to Arbitrator Charles Francis Adams. This gentleman will then take the matter under consideration, and he will not announce his decision until it has become clear how much business the roads may be able to secure during this winter. If no further accident happens to the growing corn the crop will be quite large, and there will be plenty of business for all the lines throughout the winter. In that event the decision of Arbitrator Adams will be accepted by all the lines, and the pooling agreement will continue to be carried out. Should, however, another frost set in and largely reduce the corn crop, the prospects for a good business during the winter would not be so good, and in such an event a scramble for business would be the inevitable result among the roads and a war on rates be inaugurated, thus relieving Arbitrator Adams from the task of a decision regarding the new percentages.

TOTAL SHIPMENTS.

The total shipments of flour, grain, and provisions by the various roads leading east from this city for the week ending Sept. 15, 1883, amounted to 49,524 tons, against 40,994 tons for the week previous, an increase of 8,530 tons. The total shipments for the corresponding week in 1882 amounted to 29,812 tons, and in 1881 to 56,094 tons. The following statement shows the amount of flour, grain, and provisions shipped by each of the various roads running east from this city during the last week, and also the amounts shipped during the corresponding weeks in 1882 and 1881:

	Flour, tons.	Grain, tons.	Provisions tons.	Total tons.
Balt. & Ohio	212	1,847	896	2,955
Chic. & At.	1,092	5,636	622	7,350
Gr'd Trunk	228	3,790	1,817	5,835
Pan-Handle	350	2,055	2,728	5,133
Lake Shore	316	7,579	1,389	9,284
Mich. Cent'l	400	3,655	1,861	5,916
Nick'l-Pl'te	119	4,751	867	5,737
Ft. Wayne	266	4,566	2,482	7,314
Total, 1883	2,983	33,879	12,662	49,524

The percentages this year were: Baltimore & Ohio, 6; Chicago & Atlantic, 14.8; Grand Trunk, 14.8; Pan-Handle, 10.4; Lake Shore, 18.7; Michigan Central, 11.9; Nickel-Plate, 11.6; Fort Wayne, 14.8. The percentages last year were: Michigan Central, 16.90; Lake Shore, 20.60; Fort Wayne, 20.30; Pan-Handle, 12.30; Baltimore & Ohio, 6.20; Grand Trunk, 17.70.

EXPLANATORY.

It has frequently been charged that the weekly statements published in THE TRIBUNE are not correct because they do not correspond with the statements made by Joint-Agent Moore to the pool lines. The reason for this discrepency is that the statements published in THE TRIBUNE contain all shipments of flour, grain, and provisions shipped East from this city as reported daily to the Board of Trade, no matter whether such business is local or through, or whether it went into the pool or not. Joint-Agent Moore's statements to the pool lines simply give the amounts shipped under the pooling agreement.

The Passenger-Rate Wars—The Commencement of Hostilities by the Eastern Lines Postponed Till Monday—Louisville Rate Reduced to $5.

The Grand Trunk has been prevailed upon to postpone its threatened reduction in passenger rates from Chicago to Buffalo until Tuesday morning. A meeting will be held at Commissioner Moore's office Monday, when another strong effort will be made to prevent a general break in east-bound passenger rates. Commissioner Moore is trying his best to get the General Passenger Agents of the various roads to stop their quarrels and fix matters so that rates can be faithfully maintained hereafter. It is the opinion that some arrangement will be made Monday that will prevent an immediate outbreak of hostilities. But it is quite certain that peace cannot be maintained much longer, and that sooner or later east-bound rates will go to pieces. The Grand Trunk is determined that the clandestine cutting of rates by its competitors shall be stopped. The officials of this road say they have maintained the rates more faithfully than most of its competitors, yet all along the Grand Trunk has been charged with cutting rates. They have now come to the conclusion that they may as well have the game as the name, and they will therefore reduce the rates to Buffalo from $14 first class to $10, and from $11 second class to $9, if the meeting Monday does not take measures which will make further rate-cutting and violations of agreements impossible.

The Louisville war threatens to become quite serious. The Pan-Handle yesterday morning reduced the rate as previously announced from $9 to $6 from Chicago to Louisville. As was expected, the Louisville, New Albany & Chicago met the rate. Scalpers were afterwards found to be selling tickets over the Louisville, New Albany & Chicago for $5.50, and on this account the Pan-Handle reduced its rate in the afternoon to $5, which rate was also met by the Louisville, New Albany & Chicago. The officers of the latter road say they will keep on reducing rates as long as scalpers continue to sell the tickets of its competitors at a lower rate. It is quite certain that rates will be still further reduced today, and the prospects are that before the end of the week tickets to Louisville will be sold as low as 50 cents.

There is no change in the Council Bluffs war. The Wabash is still the only road that makes an open rate of $9.30. Tickets over the other roads, however, can be purchased from scalpers at the same rate.

End of the Fight Between the St. Paul Lines—An Alleged Ironclad Agreement.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 14.—[Special.]—The cut-rate war has come to a temporary end; at least Messrs, Teasdale, Dixon, and Boyd, representing the roads interested, got together two or three days ago, and as a result of their labors submit the following agreement, which they one and all claim is ironclad. It has, or at least its principal features have, been incorporated in the Kansas City "local agreement," and found to work well. After specifying to whom shall be issued passes and half-rate tickets, the agreement continues:

The rates published in the St. Paul & Minneapolis rate sheet shall be the standard rates, and any ticket or tickets sold at less than rates stated therein, or with excessive limit, or in violation of any of the rules or stipulations named in said "rate-sheet," must be redeemed by the company's regular agent, a broker, or commission-agent, as the case may be, who sold the ticket or tickets, under the following penalties:

For the first offense the ticket or tickets shall be redeemed at twice the redeemed rate.

For the second offense, within thirty days of the commission of the first offense, the ticket or tickets shall be redeemed at three times the agreed rate.

For the third and all subsequent offenses, within thirty days of the commission of the preceding offense, the ticket or tickets shall be redeemed at four times the agreed rate.

No tickets shall be sold to any competitive point not named in the St. Paul & Minneapolis rate-sheet, except by agreement.

Any sharing of rentals with, or payment of salary, side-cut or extra allowance of any nature, to brokers, their assistants, or other outside parties selling our tickets, which have the effect of increasing, directly or indirectly, the amount of commission herein agreed, shall be deemed a violation of this agreement.

No commission or consideration of any kind whatever shall be paid to a broker or anybody else for the sale of or for influencing the sale of any ticket or tickets, who does not first deposit to our joint credit $50 as a guarantee of his or her intention to observe rates, limit tickets properly, and carry out all other provisions of this agreement.

Theatrical rates are agreed to be two-thirds of the regular unlimited rates over our respective lines, and must be confined to genuine theatrical people.

No passes or free tickets shall be given by us to secure passengers; and if the fact of a pass or free ticket being given to secure any passenger business is established the agent who gave the pass or free ticket must redeem the same at twice the regular fare between the points for which issued.

No extra baggage shall be checked free to secure the sale of a ticket, and the fact of any road checking any extra amount of baggage being established the ticket on which such extra baggage is checked shall be redeemed according to the penalties already prescribed for cases in which the rate is cut.

No tickets reading from our Eastern, Southern, or Western termini to any point beyond shall be sold under any circumstances except in connection with proper transportation issued by ourselves from our own offices in St. Paul and Minneapolis, and presented by the bona fide owner and holder thereof; it being the intention of this clause to prevent the detaching of our own coupons and selling those beyond to brokers and others who may have in their possession transportation between our initial and terminal points that would have the effect of cutting regular rates, and any broker or commission-agent found dealing in such clipped or extension-tickets shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this agreement and subjected to the prescribed penalty. Ticket agents selling such clipped or extension-tickets must note on the stub of the same a description of the transportation in connection with which it was sold.

The agreement is signed by A. V. H. Carpenter, G. T. A., Milwaukee; T. W. Teasdale for the Omaha; and S. F. Boyd, of the Minneapolis & St. Louis.

Comment on the Attempt of the Grand Trunk to Move Its Atlantic Coast Terminus.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The attempt of the Grand Trunk Railroad to move its Atlantic coast terminus from Portland to Boston is thus commented on by the Transcript:

It is this that has of late given rise to reports that the Grand Trunk was about to lease the Boston & Lowell Road, which has for some years maintained the anomalous position of an unremunerative head for a very long tail of other railroad lines. In fact, the difficulty for some years in the management of the Lowell property has been that, with terminals exceeded by but few railroads in the country, it could not handle freight at these terminals and take its pay in the pro rata of its forty miles of road upon a 1,200-mile haul, and the connecting lines would not pay for the terminal charges. The Grand-Trunk railway system, consolidated Aug. 12, 1882, with the Great Western, represents more than 3,000 miles of road, mostly in a trunk-line from Portland to Chicago. The fact that this great trunk-line system desires to move into Boston is no small recognition of the advantages of this port. The Lowell Railroad people recognize the mutual advantages that might result from a lease of their property to a longer line of road, and are perfectly willing to take 6½ or 7 per cent upon their stock as the price of such a lease. The connecting roads through New Hampshire and Vermont would be friendly to such an arrangement. The question is a very large one, and can be more quickly settled upon the Boston side than upon the English side, for it involves still greater improvements in terminals, the construction of elevators, etc., and a great outlay by the Grand-Trunk. The matter is being very carefully consided at the present time. Last month Sir Henry W. Taylor, of London, President of the Grand-Trunk Railway Company, and Mr. James Hickson, the General Manager, made a quiet inspection of the Lowell property in company with its Directors, and Engineer Shanley, of Montreal, is now engaged in making a detailed report upon the terminals in Boston, together with estimates of the cost of improvements needed for the large business the Grand-Trunk expects to do if it concludes to make Boston its Atlantic port.

Canadian Railway Matters.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 15.—Receiver Hendee of the Vermont National Bank, St. Albans, is in Montreal today for the purpose of conferring with parties acting in the interest of the Canadian Pacific. In the event of the Canadian Pacific, Passumpsic, and Boston Companies and the Concord & Montreal Railroad coming into possession of the Southeastern Railroad proper, it will be necessary to secure the Montreal, Portland & Boston Railroad in order to complete their line and make the desired connection between their respective termini at Montreal and West Farnham, a distance of thirty miles. This important link is owned by a separate corporation, and has an incumbrance of $901,000 first-mortgage bonds, of which $501,000 is held as collateral security by the Vermont National Bank on its loan of $319,000 to Bradly Barlow. The Canadian Pacific and other roads interested in the line made an offer to Receiver Hendee for the purchase of the bonds in question, but at a lower figure than the Receiver was willing to take. It is probable that a better offer will be made.

An Injunction Denied to Restrain the Issue of Bonds.

ST. ALBANS, Vt., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Judge Wheeler, of the United States Court, rendered a decision today in the case of Roland G. Hazard vs. the American Land & Trust Company on an application for an injunction restraining the Loan & Trust Company from issuing $700,000 of bonds of the Consolidated Railroad Company of Vermont in exchange for the stock of the Vermont & Canada Company. Judge Wheeler denies the motion for an injunction. He holds that both roads are practically one, and owned by the Vermont Central; that the road and property are covered wholly by the mortgages of the Consolidated Company; that the Vermont & Canada had power to change the form of its securities, and that the act of 1859 brings the Vermont & Canada within the act of 1882. The extinguishment of the rent practically extinguished the value of the stock to the Consolidated Company. The settlement was a just one, and Hazard is in no danger of being deprived of any of his rights.

The James River Valley Line.

JAMESTOWN, D. T., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Grading commenced yesterday on the James River Valley Railway. The contract is let to Grand Rapids, and is to be completed in sixty days. Next week the contract will be let further so as to connect with the Northwestern at Columbus.

SHOOTING AFFRAY.

About midnight last night Fred Leindecker, the Polk street bridgetender, was seriously shot by August Mathis, 18 years of age, a tinner in the employ of Fuller, Warren & Co., corner of State and Adams streets. About 10 o'clock Mathis and three friends entered the saloon of Harry Gobes, No. 421 Fifth avenue. Leindecker was at the bar drinking, and invited Mathis and his friends to a boat ride on the river. They entered a yawl at Harrison street, and secured a tow from a canal-boat as far as Sixteenth street. Casting off at this point they started to row back. Leindecker, it is alleged, became very dictatorial. Charlie Andrews, a friend of Mathis, was the recipient of abusive language from Leindecker, who, when they had returned to Harrison street, ordered him to leave the boat. Mathis expressed a determination to accompany his friend, whereupon Leindecker applied to him a number of vile epithets. Mathis resented the insults, and when the boat had arrived within a few feet of the shore Leindecker sprang upon him, striking him twice in the face, and continued the assault after Mathis had gained the landing. Mathis broke away from Leindecker, and afterwards borrowed some money, with which he purchased on Clark street a revolver for $1.25 and 25 cents' worth of cartridges. Returning to the corner of Fifth avenue and Polk street he again met Leindecker, who seized him by the throat, accusing Mathis of having a revolver. The latter then drew the weapon and fired. The ball, a 32-calibre, entered Leindecker's shoulder below the collar-bone, glanced upward, and lodged beneath the flesh. After firing the shot Mathis started to run toward his home, No. 95 East Polk street. Leindecker fired two shots at him, whereupon Mathis turned and, proceeding to the Harrison-Street Station, surrendered himself to the officers. He had thrown the revolver into the street, but returned with an officer and found it. Leindecker was then removed to his home, No. 107 East Polk street. He is a married man, 25 years of age. Dr. Lingley attended him, removed the bullet, and pronounced the wound severe, though not necessarily fatal. Mathis was seen at the police station by a TRIBUNE reporter. He narrated the facts as given above, which were corroborated by the police. Mathis has been in the city since April, his home being in St. Louis. His face is badly bruised, the effects of the blows received. His story was told in a straightforward manner, though he was considerably agitated. He has a smooth face, was poorly-clad and would weigh about 160 pounds, whereas, Leindecker is described as a person nearly twice that size. Mathis is unknown to the Chicago police, and asserts that he was never arrested before, his action being purely in self-defense. Charlie and Billie Andrews, the companions of Mathis, are also under arrest, being detained as witnesses.

JOHN OBERLY.

The Well-Known Democratic Editor and Politician Going Round with a Pistol.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Sept. 15.—This morning a very exciting episode occurred in the office of the Daily Leader, in which the Hon. John H. Oberly, editor of the Bulletin and a prominent Democratic politician of the State, appeared upon the scene with a loaded six-shooter. Oberly, since his defeat in the race for the office of Secretary of State of Illinois, has a new-born ambition for office, and is beginning to loom up as a Democratic candidate for Governor. He has been for weeks waylaying the rural newspaper publishers for the purpose of an Oberly boom. The Leader last evening contained a short article which spoke of Oberly as a defunct Democratic politician and a failure as a journalist. This, it seems, stirred up the most intense wrath in the bosom of Democratic John, and he armed himself with a revolver, and about half-past 9 o'clock this morning he entered the office of the Leader and threatened to shoot Mr. C. M. Leek, a well-known journalist of Central Illinois, and who, for a short time past, has been connected with the Leader. Leek exhibited considerable courage, and seemed ready to defend himself. This exhibition quieted Oberly, and he left without a single shot being fired. The affair created considerable excitement in the city, owing to the prominence of the parties.

TARRED AND FEATHERED.

A Pair of Mormon Elders Punished by Indiana Townsmen.

BROOKVILLE, Ind., Sept. 15.—For several weeks past a pair of Mormon elders have been preaching in this county whenever they could secure the use of a church or school-house. They have spent much time in the vicinity of the Town of Laurel, and were given accommodations by one D. W. Adams. They left there for other fields, and Monday last Annie, an 18-year-old daughter of Adams, disappeared from home. A search was instituted, and she was found concealed in a house at Cedar Grove, where the elders were visiting. She had been converted and baptized into the "Church of Jesus Christ" by one of the elders, and had been hiding several days before she was discovered by her parents. It was with the utmost difficulty she was persuaded to return to her home, as she was thoroughly convinced that the "Church of Jesus Christ" was the only church of true faith, and she wished to go to Utah. Last night the elders were found in the house of Ellison, a few miles from Laurel. There about midnight they received calls from 150 able-bodied men, who escorted them to the woods and made them strip and submit to a coating of tar and feathers. They were then threatened with lynching if they did not leave the country speedily.

THE CORN CROP.

An Estimate of the Yield Made by the Hon. Martin I. Townsend.

TROY, N. Y., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The Hon. M. I. Townsend, of this city, feeling a great interest in the corn crop of the West, has devoted a good deal of time this week to ascertaining the extent of the injury done by the frosts of the last and present week. He has received many communications from the West, and now states with great confidence that the frost has not so injured the crop as to produce any perceptible effect upon the amount raised in the country. Individuals here and there will suffer, but he does not believe that the frosts which have already occurred will reduce the expected crop of some 1,600,000,000 to 1,700,000,000 bushels by the amount of 20,000,000 bushels.

KILLED IN A BEAR-FIGHT.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 15.—The body of a man has been found in the woods eight miles from Cheboygan and identified as Frank Devereux, a homesteader who lived near the locality. The surroundings show that he was killed in a bear-fight, which resulted fatally for both, as the animal's body was found near that of the dead man. Devereux's body was in a sitting posture, braced against a log, where he had evidently placed himself after the combat with the beast. Evidences of the terrible struggle were plainly visible all about, but those on the body were the most prominent. His left side, cheek, and legs had been gnawed nearly to the bone, one shoulder was dislocated, an eye was gouged out, his stomach was almost torn open, and the marks of the bear's claws were discernable on various parts of the body. The bear had been shot through the shoulder, and aggravated by his wounds a terrible struggle evidently ensued.

JUNIUS BRUTUS BOOTH DYING.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Junius Brutus Booth, the well-known theatrical manager, is tonight reported dying at the Mascanoma House, which he has kept for some years at Manchester-by-the-Sea, on Cape Ann, opposit Marblehead. He has been ill for some time, and a day or two ago had a paralytic shock. His wife, Agnes Booth, has been summoned from Philadelphia. Mr. Booth is the only son of the celebrated actor Junius Brutus Booth by his first wife. He was born in Charleston, S. C., in 1821, and made his first appearance on the stage at Pittsburg when he was only 13 years of age. He played at the Bowery Theatre in New York in 1850, and remained on the stage until a few years ago, when he was forced by illness to leave it.

PLEASANT PARAGRAPHS.

A gentleman the other evening objected to playing cards with a lady because, he said, she had such a winning way about her.

A man in Italy has made a clock entirely out of bread. It may be no more than proper to state that the mainspring is made out of a piece of restaurant sandwich.

Longfellow said: "In this world a man must be either anvil or hammer." Longfellow was wrong, however. Lots of men are neither the active hammer nor the sturdy anvil. They are nothing but bellows.

An old bachelor recently gave the following toast: "Woman—the morning-star of infancy, the day-star of manhood, the evening-star of age. Bless our stars, and may they always be kept at a telescope distance."

"Mamie says you can't come to see her any more," said a boy to his sister's admirer. "Why not?" "Because you come to see her seven nights a week now, and how could you come any more?" Silence was the only answer.

The coal-man's cart broke down as he was going to weigh the coal. "You needn't fuss to weigh that coal," said the man who had purchased it. "If it's heavy enough to break down the cart it weighs more than any ton of coal I ever got before; I'm satisfied."

A reporter interviewed the prize fat woman, whose weight is 720 pounds. When asked, "Do you still claim to be the largest fat woman in the world?" she frigidly replied, "Excuse me, sir, but I do not recognize the title. I am said to be the largest large lady on exhibition."

Celebration of Admission-Day—The Sacramento River Filling Up—A Broker's Failure.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 15.—[Special to New York Tribune.]—The week opened with the celebration of the admission-day of the State, an occasion which called out many reminiscences of pioneer days and showed the gradually lessening number of Argonauts. Two large celebrations were held—one at Stockton, the other at Monterey. Early times in San Francisco were recalled by a picture, exhibited on Montgomery street, of the first celebration of the day in 1850, when the city looked somewhat as Santa Fé does today—with low Spanish-American houses, and gambling-saloons on the ground floor of the main buildings.

The rapid filling up of Sacramento River and its tributaries by débris from hydraulic mines has been brought forcibly to public notice by the dangerous sandbars recently formed, which have proved ruinous to river navigation. Just below Sacramento a big sandbar formed, so that a loaded steamer drawing only four and a half feet of water grounded this week—and only got off with difficulty. Ten years ago deep-sea vessels could pass this place, where, it is estimated, the deposits of mining débris now reaches a depth of twenty feet. Yuba River has been so filled up that the smallest boat cannot get to Marysville except when there is a flood, though formerly big boats ran there. Feather River is virtually closed to navigation all the year, because of formidable bars. Of course San Francisco Bay suffers also, and a large part near the mouth of the Sacramento has been so badly filled up as to make navigation dangerous. The "Stickens war," as it is called, is a fight of one rapidly dwindling industry against the agricultural interests of two of the richest valleys in the State and the navigation of the main inland waters. Unless something is done soon to deepen Sacramento River navigation must be abandoned and the farmers will be left to the tender mercies of the railroads.

The logical result of mining-stock speculation is shown in the failure this week of Edward F. Hall Jr., one of the leading local brokers. During the Bonanza excitement he made a fortune, estimated at $1,000,000, by selling out when Consolidated Virginia and California reached their highest points. About three years ago, however, he was inveigled into Pine street again, and took part in a big Hale & Norcross deal. The result was he lost his fortune and mortgaged his fine residence, which he was finally forced to sell to Col. Fred C. Crocker. This sacrifice did not save him, and he was reported a few days ago as being unable to meet his contracts. He is only one of the many local brokers here who are on the ragged edge of financial ruin. It is safe to say that not a single stockbroker in this city makes enough to pay his office rent and expenses.

This is a season of fairs, two being open. At Sacramento the State Fair attracts many farmers by a good showing of thoroughbred stock and the liberal premiums offered. The most interesting exhibit is fifty Australian sheep imported by J. B. Hoggin, the capitalist, who has immense stock ranches in southern counties. He proposes crossing these sheep with the best California strains, the result being a hardier breed, with a fleece free from grease and dirt. In this city the Mechanics' Institute Fair opened the 7th inst. It was once fairly representative of California manufactures, but now it has degenerated into a show for retail dealers, and, aside from mining machinery and a few other exhibits, it no more represents the State industries than would an exhibition in New York.

Theatre audiences have been decreased by the opening of the fair. At the California the Union Square Company has presented the disagreeable play of "A Parisian Romance," Mansfield's Bavron being severely criticised by the leading dramatic critic as a moral and physical monstrosity and against the author's evident conception of a worn-out debauchee. High dramatic art is illustrated by a circus at the Grand Opera-House, and the managers threaten an infliction of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" next, with real negroes, but without the last touches of realism found in trained bloodhounds.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 15.—This morning Henry Marks, a laborer, stabbed to death John Connelly. The victim was living in the house with Marks and his wife. He was caught in the act of adultery with Mrs. Marks. Connelly was stabbed eight times and died within fifteen minutes. Marks was arrested.

A special meeting of the local Board of Health met today and passed resolutions declaring Guaymas and Mazatian ports infected with yellow-fever, and orders were issued to quarantine vessels from those ports. The State Board of Health was requested to enforce quarantine regulations on passengers and freight by rail from Mexico. The attention of the Postmaster was called to the necessity of disinfecting the mails. The action was taken on account of dispatches received from Guaymas stating that a consultation of medical men had decided that what had been considered typho-malarial-fever was yellow-fever.

THE SEASON OF FAIRS.

Satisfactory Closing of a Model Exposition at Zanesville, O.—Other Meetings.

ZANESVILLE, O., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Today closed the most successful and satisfactory fair ever held in this (Muskingum) county, and long will it be remembered as one worthy to be referred to as a model. The Directors have expended over $6,000 in overhauling the grounds generally by the construction of new buildings for machinery, horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, and poultry. Machinery Hall is two story. The upper one is Fruit Hall, which is the whole length of the building. The sheep-house is a circular building and admirably adapted to its purpose. The universal testimony is that the people are under lasting obligations to the Directors for the judicious expenditure of the money, for we have now the best-equipped and handsomest fair grounds in the State. There never has been such a display of fine cattle, horses, hogs, and sheep, showing the care our Grangers have taken to improve the stock of the country. Many thousands of dollars have been given as premiums, and the award of them has been almost unanimously approved. Twenty thousand people were on the grounds yesterday, and about half that number were present at the close today. The satisfaction expressed by all affords good evidence that the people approve the action of the Directors in remodeling the grounds.

CARTHAGE, Ill., Sept. 13.—[Special Correspondence.]—The largest and best fair ever held in Hancock County is now going on here. It is the second fair of "The Hancock County Agricultural Board." Few fairs in the State have any prettier or more desirable grounds, and our half-mile track is by sportsmen said to be among the best in the State. After the entries closed Tuesday noon it was evident that our fair would be an immense success, nearly 5,000 entries having been made. The exhibition of horses, mules, jacks, cattle, sheep, hogs, and poultry were was very large, and included some of the best stock in the State. The display in the art department was pronounced by every one as grand. The agricultural, horticultural, and floral displays are of the very highest order. Excellent races have taken place every day. Today, Thursday, was the "big day." Not less than 10,000 people were on the ground, the gate receipts being nearly $2,700. Tomorrow will close our fair for 1883, and a very large crowd is expected. No liquor is sold in Carthage, and not a row, disturbance, or accident has taken place. No gambling of any kind is permitted on the grounds. The board will come out about $2,000 ahead this year.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Today closes the fair and races of the Montgomery County Union Agricultural Society, which has been a grand success in every respect. In the free-for-all trot for a purse of $400 the following is the summary:

Willis Wood	1	1	3	1
Longfellow Whip	2	3	3	2
Betsey Ann	3	2	1	3

Time—2:28¼; 2:27; 2:30.

Willis Wood took the third heat, but was set back for running. No time was caught.

Consolation race—Purse of $100:

John S.	1	1	3	2	1
Loyd G.	2	2	2	1	2
Tom Tipton	3	3	1	3	3

The running race, purse of $100, was won by Boston in two straight heats, Lady Crosslot second. Time, 1:53, 1:52.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The Maitland (Holt County) Fair closed today. It was held during all the week. The attendance was very large and the display of grain, fruit, cattle, and vegetables remarkably good.

THE WEATHER.

Signal Service.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER, WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 16—1 a. m.—Indications: For the South Atlantic States, fair weather, east to south winds, nearly stationary temperature, lower barometer.

For the Gulf States, local rains, partly cloudy weather, southerly winds, becoming variable, nearly stationary temperature, in the east portions lower barometer.

For Tennessee and the Ohio Valley, local rains, south to west winds, stationary or slight fall in temperature, falling followed in the west portion by rising barometer.

For the Lower Lake region, increasing cloudiness and local rains, winds shifting to south and west, lower barometer, stationary or slight fall in temperature.

For the Upper Lake region, rain followed by clearing cooler weather, northwest winds, rising barometer.

For the Upper Mississippi Valley, light rains followed by clearing cooler weather, north to west winds, higher barometer.

For the Missouri Valley, local rains in the southern portion followed by cooler fair weather, fair weather in northern portions, north to west winds, higher barometer.

For the Pacific coast regions, fair weather.

For Colorado, cool, fair weather.

Bulletin—Fair weather continues in the districts east of the Mississippi, with light variable winds, generally from east to south. Rain has prevailed west of the Mississippi and near Lake Superior, followed in the extreme Northwest by cooler fair weather. There is a slight disturbance central near Lake Superior, which will move eastward during Sunday and Monday. Cooler fair weather is indicated for the Upper Lake region and Northwest Monday.

ROSE AMBLER.

Detectives Said to Strongly Suspect Her Lover of Being Her Murderer.

STRATFORD, Conn., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The State detectives think that they are drawing the web of circumstantial evidence close around Will Lewis, the sweetheart of the murdered Rose Clark-Ambler. They say that he drove his wagon into the Village of Birmingham yesterday for two purposes—to sell his produce, and with the more important design of hushing up the stories which he himself is said to have circulated concerning the murder. There is no question now that he is the only object of the detective hunt. Two days ago Pinkerton's detective, Wood, went down to Birmingham, and returned to this city late in the evening. He would not say what clew he was working on, so yesterday a reporter went to the villages of Ansonia, Derby, Birmingham, and Shelton to investigate. The result shows that Will Lewis, if not guilty, is at least afraid that the net of clews may bind him fast in its meshes. Before the murder he was a talkative, genial fellow, with any amount of animal spirits. He is now a quiet, changed man. He has no warm greetings for his old friends. One of the most prosperous tradesmen in the Town of Derby, or Birmingham, is Samuel Durand, a grocer. The Monday or Tuesday following the discovery of Rose's body Will Lewis stopped his wagon at Durand's door. He got down, it is said, in a quiet, steady way, and not with his usual "Hello" and brisk step. He walked into the grocery store and, according to the detectives, said to Durand:

"What do you think of it?"

"Think of what?" Durand inquired.

"Why," answered Lewis, "haven't you heard that my girl was murdered last night?"

Durand had not heard of it, and was dumbfounded at the news. The interview would be of no importance, the detectives say, but that, according to what can be learned of the inquest, which of course must be taken for what it is worth, Lewis himself did not know of the murder until Monday night. The question they ask is, How could he have told the story Monday at Birmingham when the girl's body had just been found at Stratford? The grocer and Lewis talked of the case, and Lewis is reported to have said that one man could not have killed the girl. He suspected two negroes of the crime, and said if he caught them he would shoot them. W. E. Woodward is a grocer in Birmingham. Lewis drove his wagon thither the next day (Tuesday), so the detectives say, and Woodward, on seeing him, said:

"I am sorry for you, Will, that Rose should have been murdered."

"What the —— do I care about it?" he is said to have answered quickly. "I know the murderer," it is further said he answered, "and if I was up in Stratford now I could put my hands on him in five minutes."

Still another story is told which the detectives say if true is very important, as furnishing a motive for the murder. Near Birmingham lives another girl who is said to have loved Lewis. She is quite as handsome as Rose was, and is said to have been able to bring her husband more money than Rose.

A VERY INTERESTING SNAKE STORY.

[Hamilton (O.) Letter to Cincinnati News-Journal.]—Last Thursday, while George Logan was plowing in his bottom lands, he was surprised when there were turned over in the furrow a number of curious-appearing eggs, which seemed not unlike those of a hen without the shell, with the exception that they were not quite the same shape. Mr. Logan gathered up the eggs, fourteen in number, and took them home. In an old ash barrel near the house was a patient and motherly hen setting upon imaginary eggs. He placed them under the protection of the hen with such an ardent longing to become a mother. The hen was equal to the occasion, and buckled down to business on the new deal with unrelaxed zeal. The farmer, highly gratified, departed with his family the next day for Urbana. He thought nothing more about the eggs until his return. Upon entering the yard the first sight that greeted his vision was the old hen in the lawn, chuckling away at a tremendous rate, scratching, squawking, and evincing every other demonstration of delight. Mr. Logan's little girl, upon approaching the clucker, gave a scream of terror and fled, crying "Snakes!" Mr. Logan then cautiously advanced, and found that the hen had about her a brood of fourteen little blacksnakes, all between four and six inches long, and as pert and chipper as young snakes ever were. Strange to relate, they answered the old hen's clucks of affection and gathered around her bill to snatch choice flies and insects and dainty bits. A note of warning from the hen and not a snake could be seen. They would instantly dart under leaves or grass and be entirely concealed from view. As night approached the hen and her brood of serpents found the old barrel, and each baby snake sought the protecting warmth of mother hen's wing. This strange combination still exists, and crowds of the neighbors have hastened to view the wonderful sight. Mr. Logan, for the present, has concluded not to interfere with the fond attachment between reptile and fowl, and is only waiting to see which will tire of the bargain or discover the mistake first, the snakes or the hen.

The Hon. John Callahan, Judge First District Court, New York, and the Rt.-Rev. Bishop Gilmour, Cleveland, O., have used St. Jacobs Oil and indorse it.

THE TURF.

Jay-Eye-See's Wonderful Time at Narragansett Park.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Five thousand people witnessed the third day's sport in the grand circuit races today. Kitty Patchen won the deciding heat in the unfinished 2:33 race easily, and then the judges withdrew their decision of last night on the dead-heat business, and decided that that was Patchen's heat, and that the heat was superfluous.

The 2:20 pacers' race came on with four starters, Westmont being the favorit $100 to $24. Westmont acted badly in the first heat, and Billy S. beat him from wire to wire. In the second Westmont broke so badly and was driven in such bad form that he was distanced. The judges concluded that there must be fraud, and declared all bets off. Billy S. had no difficulty in taking the third heat and race.

THE SUMMARY.

Pacing race, 2:20 class, purse of $1,000, divided:

B. Knowlton's b. g. Billy S.	1	1	1
William Bedford's g. g. Eddie D.	3	2	2
J. S. Campbell's ch. g. Westmont	2	dist.
J. W. Campbell's b. g. Lone Jack	dist.

Heats	Quarter	Half.	Mile.
First	35¼	1:10	2:19½
Second	37	1:13	2:22¼
Third	34¾	1:07½	2:27

The 2:22 race was simply pie for the Providence horse, H. B. Winship, he taking the purse in three straight heats, Fullerton, one of the favorits, being distanced in the first heat. Winship sold before the race $10 to $100.

THE SUMMARY.

Purse of $2,000, divided, mile heats, three in five, to harness:

James Golden's blk. g. H. B. Winship	1	1	1
E. McCall's g. m. Katie McCall	3	2	2
J. Dongrey's m. Amelia C.	2	6	6
F. L. Noble's b. g. Gladiator	4	3	3
T. D. Palmer's b. h. Happy Thought	7	4	4
J. Murphy's g. g. Steve Maxwell	6	5	5
J. W. McKee's s. h. Young Fullerton	dis.

Heats.	One-qr.	One-half.	Mile.
First	.35¼	1:09¾	2:21½
Second	.35¼	1:09½	2:21¾
Third	.35½	1:10½	2:21¾

Jay-Eye-See trotted for a special purse of $2,000 to beat his record of 2:14, and did it handsomely. The new turf track, which is the fastest in the country, enabled him to go from wire to wire in 2:10¾, equaling St. Julien's record. He went to the quarter in 34 seconds, to the half in 1:06½, to the three-quarters in 1:39, and, coming down the home-stretch as if shot out of a cannon, he went under the wire in 2:10¾. J. I. Case, the owner of the speedy animal, was beside himself with joy, and kissed his wife in his rapture. The races will continue Monday.

RACINE, Wis., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—There is considerable excitement and good feeling in Racine tonight on account of the wonderful feat performed by J. I. Case's horse Jay-Eye-See at Narragansett Park, Boston, this afternoon. When the news was received here that the little horse had made his mile in 2:10¾ there was a general tossing up of hats, and numerous cheers were given for Mr. Ed Bither, the driver, who has after many years of earnest toil managed to make for himself and horses a record that has never been excelled.

Inaugural Day of the Autumn Meeting of the Latonia Jockey Club.

COVINGTON, Ky., Sept. 15.—Bright skies, a cool breeze which tempered the sun's heated rays, a fast but dusty track, a very large attendance, one-third of which were ladies, and excellent racing were most salient features of this, the inaugural day, of the autumn meeting of the Latonia Jockey Club. The betting was of an excellent character, several of the Eastern bookmakers being present. Although bookmaking is a new feature here, the people seemed to take quite an interest in it. The starting of Mr. Sheridan was simply perfection. Three out of four events were captured by the favorits.

In the first race, one and one-eighth miles, Jocose took the track to a good start, closely followed by Katie G., Ascender, Carson, Emma Manley, and Sovereign Pat. This was the order of the running up to the half-mile post, when Ascender went to the front. There was a general closing up while rounding into the straight. Ascender and Carson drew away from the field, were abreast at the eighth post, and fought to the wire, Ascender winning by a length from Carson, he two lengths in front of Sovereign Pat, the others well tailed off. Time, 1:57. French pools paid $6.80.

In the second race, Zoozoo stakes, for 2-year-old fillies, three-quarters of a mile, there was another excellent start, with Matinée first away, closely followed by Binette and Eva S. The latter quickly headed Binette and laid at Matinée's saddle half a mile, then fell away beaten. Binette moved up and challenged Matinée, but the filly was running well in hand, and was unapproachable. Matinée won by a length, Binette second, Eva S. third. Time, 1:16½.

In the third race, Springton stakes, for 3-year-olds, mile and five furlongs, Rosaline at once took a commanding lead, and made the running at a clipping pace for three-quarters of a mile; McGinty second, followed by Aztec, Halfellow and Bellona close up. On the turn, moving towards the quarter post, McGinty challenged Rosaline, and quickly obtained the lead. McGinty kept in the van to the distance stand, when Stoval brought Aztec up with a rush. Aztec won at the post by a length, McGinty second, two lengths in advance of Long Knight. Time, 2:56½.

In the fourth race, mile and one-fourth, Japonica made the pace for the first three-quarters; there Manitou went to the front, and won handily by two lengths, with Lord Edward second, and Japonica third. Time, 2:11½. When opposit the judges' stand Maj. Hughes ran into the fence, breaking the leg of his jockey. Manitou was bought in at the entered price.

In the hurdle race Katie Creel had a walk-over.

Racing at Sheepshead Bay.

SHEEPSHEAD BAY, L. I., Sept. 15.—The weather was warm and the attendance large, but the track was rather heavy. The first race, one mile, was won by Carnation, Mediator second, Pizarro third. Time—1:43.

The second race, mile and a furlong, for 3-year-old fillies, was won by Breeze, Bella second, Bric-a-Brac third. Time—1:59.

The third race, three-quarters of a mile, was won by Mattie B, Economy second, Huron third. Time—1:17.

The fourth race, one and a half miles, was won by Euclid, Hartford second, Gath third. Time—2:40.

The fifth race, mile and a half-furlong, was won by Baby, Monk second, Manitoba third. Time—1:54.

The sixth race, full course, was won by Jim McGowen, Disturbance second, Maj. Wheeler third. Time—5:22.

Races at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Sept. 15.—There was a large attendance at the last day of the Pawling races. The following were starters in the 2:38 class: Annie C., Dora F., Dr. Smith, Queen, Nina, and Prince. The race was won in three straight heats by Queen. Best time, 2:36. Nina was second.

In the free-for-all the following were starters: Capt. Emmons, May Thorne, Dan Smith, and Driver. The race was won in three straight heats by Driver. Best time 2:27¼. Dan Smith was second.

Point Breeze Races.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 15.—Today was the last day of the trotting meeting at Point Breeze. The unfinished 2:33 class was won by Frank Patchen in 2:30¼, the fastest heat of the race.

The 2:50 class was won by Lady Pointdexter, Fannie Bell second. Best time, 2:35¼.

It took five heats to decide the pacing race. Gossip Jr. took the first money, Don Cameron second, and Estelle third. The others were shut out. Best time (by Gossip), 2:27¼.

Trotting Match at Aquidneck Park.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 15.—The trotting match at Aquedneck Park this afternoon for $200 between James Mead's r. g. Tom and F. W. Greene's ch. m. Fashion was won by Tom in three straight heats. Time—3:05; 3:06; 3:02½.

Central Park Matinee.

The regular Saturday matinée of the Central Park Driving Association came off yesterday, and was well attended, although the weather was quite warm. The track was in good condition, with the exception of being rather dusty, and needs a good rain to make it as fast as usual. There were four events on the card, and good time was made. Below is the summary:

THREE-MINUTE CLASS TO ROAD WAGONS.

J. Myers' br. m. Kitty	1	1
G. H. Donahue's b. m. Dolly	2	2
J. Chalafoux's bl. g. Frank	3	3

Time—2:53; 2:53.

2:40 CLASS, PACERS TO HARNESS.

E. D. Morse's b. g. Tom Brown	1	2	1
J. T. Rawleigh's br. g. Steve	2	1	2

2:35 CLASS, PACERS TO HARNESS.

J. Jaworski's gr. g. Planter	2	1	2	1
J. Eighme's b. m. Little Doll	1	2	1	2

Time—2:43½; 2:35; 2:37; 2:48.

This race was unfinished, and there will be another trial next Saturday.

SPECIAL RACE—TROTTING.

J. Gee's br. m. Martha Washington, to road-wagon	1
J. M. Smith's bl. b. White Stockings, to harness	2

Time—2:44½.

BASE-BALL.

The Record.

The result of the week's play in the East has been just about what the wiser heads predicted. Chicago and Cleveland fell behind and Providence and Boston moved up a peg or two. The Bostons lead with fifty-five games won, Providence comes next with fifty-four, and Chicago and Cleveland are tied for third place, with fifty-three games to the credit of each. The Boston club won all four games of the series with Chicago, and now stands an excellent chance of winning the pennant. Providence yesterday lost the first game of the Chicago series, which puts that nine at a serious disadvantage as compared with Boston. The Cleveland Club is, to be sure, a tie for third, but the games with Providence and Boston are yet to be played, which puts Chicago in a more favorable light than Cleveland. Judging from the condition of affairs at the close of play last night the chances are decidedly in favor of the success of the Bostons, while the Chicago and Providence teams have about an even chance for second place, with Cleveland a probable fourth. Should the Chicagos win one more game from Providence, and the Clevelands one from Boston, the aspect of affairs would be changed, as Chicago still has a comparatively easy series with New York and a still easier one with Philadelphia. Still a shrewd better would be apt to place Boston first, Chicago second, Providence third, and Cleveland fourth, thus making a rather fair division between East and West. The following table will show the standing of all the League clubs at a glance:

Clubs.	Boston	Providence	Cleveland	Chicago	Buffalo	New York	Detroit	Philadelphia	Games won	Postponed

The Victory for Chicago.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The home team gave another of those occasional wretched exhibitions of ball-playing, allowing the Chicago nine to crawl out of a bad defeat and walk off with the game. The 1,884 people present were terribly disappointed, and gave vent to their feelings in bitter remarks, in which the umpire came in for a generous share. The game was lost through Farrell's very bad work in the last inning, Carroll's inability to judge anything coming his way, and Sweeney's wild pitch. There is not the slightest doubt but that with ordinary fair support Sweeney could have downed his opponents and that Providence could have given Chicago a rattling defeat. The run-getting began in the second inning, Radbourn scoring on an error by Williamson, a put-out, and a passed ball. In the fourth, Kelly scored on a base on called balls, a steal, and Anson's two-baser. Denny untied the score in the fifth by knocking the ball over the left-field fence for a home run, greatly to the delight of the spectators. In the fifth inning Pfeffer opened with a single-bagger, Flint, Goldsmith, and Dalrymple following suit. A wild pitch and a wild throw by Gilligan, counted Chicago two runs. Providence struck a streak of batting in the sixth inning, Farrell, Start, and Carroll each securing two-base hits, while Radbourn and Sweeney got singles. Pfeffer failed to hold a ball thrown to him, Williamson doing the same thing, and Flint having a passed ball, the hitting and misplays giving Providence four runs. Here Providence had a splendid lead, and one that ought to have been maintained. The agony began in the seventh inning, when Dalrymple scored on a single hit, Carroll's fumble, and a wild pitch. The agony was piled on in the eighth inning, when Anson got a single base hit, Williamson a two-baser, and Burns reached first base on Farrell's fumble, Anson scoring instead of being retired at the plate, which would have been the case if Farrell had pitched up the ball and not sought to stamp it all out of shape. Pfeffer went out on a fly to Carroll, Williamson scoring on the out and a short throw home by Carroll. Flint got a single hit, and Burns scored in the ninth, with two men out. Hines got a base hit, and scored on Farrell's single. This tied the score again, with two men out. Anson also got a two-base hit, and scored on the balls which Williamson not only knocked through Farrell, but which Radbourn fumbled. This ended the game with Providence, beaten by one run, with twenty-six put-outs to their credit.

Boston, 6; Detroit, 4.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The Bostons batted for seven hits and six runs, four earned, in the first two innings, and obtained a lead that the visitors could not pass. The Detroits batted Whitney hard, but after the first inning their hits were scattered till the eighth, when they bunched three hits and scored a run. The playing on both sides was about even. Hornung, Sutton, and Hanlon lead their respective sides at the bat, and the latter played a magnificent game in the field. The attendance was 4,400. The victory of Chicago over Providence was bulletined and was greeted with loud applause.

A Drawn Game.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Sawyer, the left-handed pitcher of the Cleveland Club, bothered the New York batsmen to such an extent on the Polo Grounds today that they gained but two safe hits from his delivery, and failed to defeat the Cleveland players, the contest resulting in a tie game. The game was called on account of darkness. Following is a summary of the contest by innings:

Innings—	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9

Fly Tips.

The Websters defeated the Walton nine yesterday by a score of 31 to 19.

Other games yesterday: Eclipse, 16; Baltimore, 8. Metropolitans, 12; St. Louis, 6. Cincinnati, 11; Athletics, 2. Allegheny, 7; Columbus, 3.

The Stock Exchange nines played a game yesterday at the Union grounds, the Metropolitans scoring but 13 to 42 for the Public Exchange.

Manager Spalding left for the East last night, and will join the Chicago team in Providence Tuesday and remain with them until the close of the championship season. Mr. Spalding expected to leave with the club a week ago, but was detained by the serious illness of his wife.

MISCELLANEOUS SPORTS.

The Mitchell-Slade Fight Declared Off.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—At a meeting between Mitchell and Slade's backers this afternoon it was agreed to declare the fight off. Mitchell's backer immediately covered the deposit of $1,000 recently made by William Sheriff, the "Prussian," who lately challenged Sullivan. The arrangements are for a private glove-fight, to take place within two weeks from the date of signing the articles. The men are to fight according to the Marquis of Queensberry's rules until one of them is beaten.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 15.—Al Smith, Sullivan's backer, states that there will be no match arranged between the champion and Sheriff, the "Prussian," at present; that all the latter's backers desire is to advertise their man. Sullivan is shortly to start on an extended tour throughout the country and does not propose to postpone it to go into training to fight a man whom he considers his inferior in every respect. When the tour is ended he will be ready to fight the "Prussian" privately for $1,000 a side, ten persons to witness the encounter.

Duncan C. Ross Challenged by Prof. Bauer.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Prof. Bauer has challenged Duncan C. Ross, the winner of and Police Gazette's trophy, to wrestle for the trophy and $500 a side, the match to take place any time Richard K. Fox may name within two weeks from the signing of the articles. He also expressed a willingness to wrestle with John McMahon or Dufur for $500 a side.

The Walking Match.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 15.—The six-days' walking match closed tonight. Neither of the contestants made the distance required to get the prize for upwards of 500 miles. Score at the close: Hart, 417; Panchot, 406; Elison, 401.

JONAH'S ADVENTURE BELITTLED.

[Portland Oregonian.]—As will be remembered by our readers, the carcass of a whale came ashore nearly three weeks ago on the beach south of the entrance to Shoalwater Bay. A great many sojourners at the shore visited it, and many were the theories as to what caused the death of the monster. By the arrival of the Umatilla yesterday a solution of the problem has been found. Capt. Worth states that three days before the whale came ashore the Umatilla was off Gray's Harbor on her way to the Sound. A pilot-boat coming near, he hailed to know if they had a late paper on board. The boat ranged up alongside and threw a copy of the Oregonian on board the Umatilla. Giving the officer on duty directions in regard to the course, etc., Capt. Worth went to his cabin, and, after glancing through the shipping intelligence, was perusing with much interest the local column, when he felt a violent shock, followed by something striking the ship a tremendous blow on the side forward. He rushed on deck and asked what was the matter, and was informed that a whale had broken water just in front of the ship and had been struck by the bow, whereupon he kicked back, striking the ship with his tail, and making everything on board rattle. The huge monster disappeared, leaving the surface of the ocean tinged with blood. Three days after the dead carcass floated ashore. In this connection it is proper to state that a gentleman who came up from the shore yesterday says the whale is now nearly covered with sand and is rapidly decaying. One of the party who visited it a few days ago climbed up on the carcass, and while delivering an animated speech suddenly dropped into the interior of the monster. He scrambled out soaked with decaying blubber, and said he would rather make an entrance as Jonah did and take chances on being digested than to repeat his experience.

RACING FOR $100,000.

[Canton (N. Y.) Commercial Advertiser.]—The 27th of July, the day before their failure, the Shaws represented to the banking-house of Fogg & Co., of Boston, that they were in a prosperous and solvent condition, and obtained from them a loan of $100,000 cash. The 28th—the very next day—their assignment was recorded in the St. Lawrence County Clerk's office in this village. By some means the sharp-sighted lawyers of Fogg & Co. discovered that there was a legal defect in the deed of assignment, and took measures to procure an attachment against the property of Shaw Brothers in this county. For the purpose of putting a notice of such an attachment on record in our County Clerk's office, the Hon. W. P. Cantwell, of Malone, came to Canton Saturday last by the noon train, accompanied by Mr. Fogg. It appears that the Shaw Brothers had also discovered the defect in their assignment and had executed a new one, which was being conveyed to Canton for record by Thomas J. Kennedy, a young law-clerk of Boston who happened to be on the same train. The parties were unacquainted, but for some reason seem to have been mutually suspicious of each other, and each determined upon the arrival of the train at Canton to outwit the other and be first at the Clerk's office if possible. The result was an exciting race, which in some of its features bordered on the ludicrous. Under-Sheriff Bailey had been notified by Mr. Cantwell to meet him at the depot, and was on hand when the train stopped. The attachment papers were placed in his hands by Mr. C., who told him to make the best possible time to the Clerk's office. He got started while young Kennedy was inquiring the way, but he was soon overtaken and passed, and, seeing that the young man was too fleet for him, he stopped a gentleman whom he met driving a fast horse to a buggy, turned him about in a jiffy, jumped in, and drove to the Clerk's office at full speed, arriving there a little in advance of Kennedy, who ran all the way. In the meantime Mr. Cantwell had secured the aid of a horse and buggy, and reached his office a little behind Kennedy. The race had been won by the attorneys of Fogg & Co., Mr. Bailey having delivered the attachment-papers to the Clerk before the arrival of the amended assignment. But, after all, Kennedy found a defect in the attachment, and so got his paper on file forty-five minutes before the others could be amended. The result of all these haps and mishaps will doubtless be a long and interesting litigation in the court.

SENATOR SHARON.

His Statement that Miss Hill Is Trying to Blackmail Him Brings Out a Sharp Response.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The statement of ex-Senator Sharon telegraphed from Sharon, claiming the suit against him to have been brought for the purpose of blackmailing, has brought William M. Nielson, the complainant, to the fore, and the Chronicle tomorrow will publish Nielson's statement of the case. First Nielson gives copies of the marriage contract between William Sharon and Miss Hill as follows:

> In the City and County of San Francisco, State of California—the 25th day of August, A. D. 1880, I, Sarah Althea Hill, of said City and County of San Francisco, aged 27 years, do hereby in the presence of Almighty God take Senator William Sharon, of the State of Nevada, to be my lawful and wedded husband, and do hereby acknowledge and declare myself to be the wife of Senator William Sharon, of the State of Nevada.
> SARAH ALTHEA HILL.
> SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25, 1880.
> I agree not to make known the contents of this paper or its existence for two years unless Mr. Sharon himself sees fit to make it known.
> In this City and County of San Francisco, State of California, the 25th day of August, A. D. 1880, I, Senator William Sharon, of the State of Nevada, aged 60 years, do here, in the presence of Almighty God, take Sarah Althea Hill, of the City of San Francisco, to be my lawful and wedded wife, and do hereby acknowledge myself to be the husband of Sarah Althea Hill. WILLIAM SHARON, of Nevada.
> Aug. 25, 1880.

Nielson claims to have compared the writing of the above contract with about fifty letters in Sharon's handwriting, and finds the writing, especially the signature of Sharon, to be identical. In addition, Nielson claims to have letters in his possession written by Sharon to Miss Hill from Washington, in which he addresses her as follows:

> SENATE CHAMBER, WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 24, 1881.—My Dear Wife: Herewith I send you $500, with which I hope you will pay on your obligations for this month, as I don't want to pay any more bills this month, as I am rather short. Yours, affectionately, WM. SHARON.

Ex-Senator Sharon, it is also alleged, gave Miss Hill an introduction to Thorn, manager of the Grand Hotel, in which Sharon mentioned Miss Hill as a lady of unblemished character and family. Furthermore, when Miss Flora Sharon was married to Sir Thomas Haskett Miss Hill was installed as mistress of ceremonies. Nielson also refutes the charge of blackmailing, stating that the lady is not in want, that she has been offered $500 a month and $100,000 paid in hand to give up documents and sign a final acquittance. What she wants is to be recognized that she is Sharon's wife.

A BLOODY MURDER.

Henry Marks Fatally Stabs Joseph Connelly, His Wife's Paramour.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Another murder has been added to the long list since July 1. This morning Henry Marks stabbed John Connelly to death. The former's wife was a witness of the affair, and was herself cut by the infuriated husband. The circumstances leading to the tragedy are as follows: Connelly and Marks had a year ago been partners in a saloon, but the partnership was dissolved after a brief trial, and Marks had ordered Connelly to vacate the rooms he occupied in the former's house. Connelly refused to move, and in the course of time Marks heard of undue intimacy between Connelly and Mrs. Marks. When Marks upbraided his wife for infidelity she gave him a beating for his interference, and Marks left in disgust for New Mexico and Arizona. About two weeks ago he returned, and, notwithstanding Connelly was still in the house, Marks made up with his wife. Last night Connelly came in the room where the Marks family and some friends were, and the husband ordered Connelly out. Mrs. Marks, however, took Connelly's part, and Marks himself was ejected and badly beaten. This morning Marks went to his work as cook in a restaurant, but soon returned and saw enough to confirm the rumors and his own suspicions. The infuriated husband drew a large carving-knife and stabbed Connelly nine times, and his wife, in endeavoring to prevent Marks from cutting her paramour, was cut twice. Marks then went out and entered a saloon, where he told what had happened, gave up the weapon, and the police were called, to whom Marks quietly surrendered. The room where the tragedy took place presented an awful scene. The bed was broken down and laying in the corner, blood was spattered all over the walls, and the bed-clothes were saturated with it. A trail of blood a foot wide led through the hall kitchen into a yard where Marks had dragged the body of Connelly. His body showed three small cuts on the left arm and shoulder and right side of the back. Another and fatal wound was in the right thigh, which severed the femoral artery. Marks was married twice. The last was his adopted daughter, and he had raised her from a little child. Marks married her twenty-two years ago, she being twenty years younger than Marks, who is 61. Mrs. Marks at first denied knowing anything about the affray, but when informed that her husband had been arrested she charged him with being aggrieved without cause. Since July 1 there has been eight murders and eleven assaults to murder in San Francisco. During the last fiscal year there were twenty murders and homicides. Hanging is played out in San Francisco, apparently, as there are thirteen murderers in the county jail and about town whose cases are not yet settled. Among them is the strangler Wheeler, who choked his mistress to death in October, 1880. He is fat and hearty, and petted by maudlin sympathizers.

A FOX-HUNT.

[New York World.]—Mr. Mulkittrick, of the Queens County Hunt, was presented with a splendid hound and he determined to try it. He purchased a fox and let it loose in the woods. Then he mounted his horse, "unleashed" the hound, and started in pursuit. The chase was a long one, and it led him over the fields and far away. He ruined field after field of cabbages, potatoes, and other garden stuffs, doubled three or four times, and finally came up in a farm-yard.

He saw the dog rush through, but could see no fox. Finally the fox darted into sight in close pursuit of the dog, and a domestic cat was chasing both. The dog rushed under the farmer's stoop, with the fox a good second and the cat third.

Just then the farmer came out with a gun and blazed away under the stoop. The three animals made a break and dashed into the hennery.

When the farmer and Mr. Mulkittrick arrived the dog, cat, and fox were engaged in a tussle for the possession of a sturdy old rooster. Mr. Mulkittrick blazed away and shot three chickens that were on the other side of the barn. Then the farmer pulled and shot the hound. Then the fox pulled and carried off the chickens and the cat. The farmer was about to give the other barrel to Mr. Mulkittrick, but he consented to swap off the horse for the absent but not forgotten fowl, and he threw in the dog to boot. As the dog was too dead to boot the farmer booted Mr. Mulkittrick, and all hands went away satisfied.

RICE.

[New York Sun.]—"Melican man no sabe cookee lice," said a Mott street Chinaman who was industriously washing a big pan of rice on the edge of the sidewalk. "She no washee plenty. Heap washee makee lice good."

The Chinaman poured on water, carefully rubbed the wet rice between the palms of his hands, bringing the grains just to the surface. Again and again he poured the water off and renewed it. When he had washed the rice in a dozen waters, carefully removing imperfect grains, he drained off the remaining water, leaving the rice in a snowy mass.

"How cookee?" he said in answer to a question. "Put no too muchee water."

A Chinaman uses just so much water that the rice will cook dry. He never touches a spoon to it, and when it is done every grain is whole, soft, and thoroughly cooked.

BOSTON GOSSIP.

The Great Fair and Its Numerous Fatal Deficiencies.

An Overshadowing Crowd of Quilts in the Woman's Department.

Politics Just Now Absorbing a Good Deal of Attention in All Circles.

Notes and News Concerning Literary Matters, Art, and Society.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—[Special Correspondence.]—If one sees an elegant barouche freighted with stylish ladies and gentlemen who look about them with the air of being strangers, and who are being whirled in the direction of the Back Bay, that means the fairs; if one sees a seedy countryman clad in homespun and carrying a carpet-bag, equally that means the fairs also. The townspeople are still holding aloof. Bostonians never sink shrewdness in their culture, and they know very well that it is best not to be in haste: the shows will improve with age. Of course, the exhibitions were not in order when they opened; no exhibition ever was. While the opening addresses were being made people wandered through empty spaces ticketed with the names of all nations under the sun, or firms from East and West, and, in short, the fairs fulfilled the first requisit of fine poetry: they appealed largely to the imagination. There are still many mighty gaps, and the managers of the Foreign Exhibition are beginning to get positively savage over the criticisms made upon them. James Jackson Jarvis, who brought over the Italian fine-art display, has vented his rage in a letter to the newspapers. Mr. Jarvis brought over a few very fair tapestries, a few passable plaques, a few pictures, good and bad, and a pair of remarkable stone sarcophagi, which are interesting enough, but too archaic to be of any especial interest in an art sense.

THE PICTURES.

The pictures of the exhibition are neither better nor worse than is usual in such cases. Some of the too-moral critics have been abusing a brilliant French canvas by Renoir, called "Boatman Breakfasting at Bougival," which represents a group of lightly-clad boating-men feasting in a sort of pavilion with a party of females, whose character cannot even be saved by whatever merit may lie in the adjective "doubtful." The painting is like a page from Zola—it is brilliant; and, in precisely the way in which "Nana" is clever, this picture is clever. It is, however, a great deal more immoral than the picture of a nude woman which is skied over its head; but the Hanging Committee confounded decency and raiment, as many a man has done before them.

The most prominent work in the gallery, however, is the enormous placard affixed to the portrait painted by her Royal Highness the Princess Louise. The picture is completely overshadowed by this big gilded board, but, as it would never be particularly noticed without it, this is no great matter. The chief point was not the work, but the artist. The picture shows good training, and is a very clever piece of amateur work. Her Highness' water-colors, while decidedly better than the harsh crudities she condescended to exhibit in Canada two or three years since, are such as are to be seen at any boarding-school exhibition, as done by the second and third class pupils. With such talent in her family, it is strange that Queen Victoria has felt constrained to go abroad to get proper honor paid to the late lamented John Brown. Instead of forcing unwilling rhymes from Tennyson, her Majesty should have requested a post-mortem portrait from her daughter, who would doubtless have recognized both the opportunities and the appropriateness of such a commission, and who might have been rewarded by one of those cashmere shawls with which her royal mamma so generously requites important services.

The art gallery of the other—the N. E. M. & M.—exhibition is far more interesting and valuable, even in foreign paintings, and its catalog, with its splendid group of etchings, its monographs by distinguished critics, and its sumptuous paper and press work, is probably the finest work of the kind ever issued.

THE WOMAN'S DEPARTMENT.

The most entertaining thing about this fair, however, is the Woman's Department—woman with the largest possible W. I grieve to say it, but it is a simple and solemn fact, that everybody who approaches the enchanted section where short-haired women bear rule, begins thereupon to smile, so that the unfortunate sisterhood has experienced the dreadful fate of Victor Hugo's Man who Laughs and "tumbled into a spume of laughter." The reason may be that the first and most striking impression that one receives is—quilts! And very dreadful quilts at that. Quilts of hideous idiosyncrasies of turkey-red and pea-green sewed upon a white ground; quilts of crazy silk patchwork, and quilts in all those forms of surpassing ugliness in which the ingenuity of woman has proved itself so fertile. There are really many charming and beautiful specimens of domestic work in the department, but they are overshadowed and overpowered by the presence of the cloud of quilts, as the features of a landscape are lost in a fog. There are very dainty embroideries, delicate paintings, a goodly array of volumes—somewhat gaudily bound, it is true, in the main, but written entirely by woman; decorated pottery—not so very bad; screens and knickknacks; in short, a very creditable showing for a downtrodden and oppressed race. The object of the collection, I believe, is to call attention to the enslaved race of woman, just as in anti-slavery days the handiwork of the negro used to be exhibited to excite compassion for the dusky victims of cruelty and power. The superabundance of quilts, it is true, give an impression that woman aforesaid must have had a hand in making the bed in which she now objects to lying; but the truly philanthropic will not on this account refuse to turn aside to drop a sympathetic tear in the Woman's Department of the N. E. M. & M. Fair!

POLITICS.

But enough of fairs for today; rather let us take a side glance at the political field. It is true nobody can make much out of the confused aspect which it presents, and even the veteran politicians are very shy of prophesying. The prominent name just now in the newspapers is that of Henry L. Pierce, and were it not for one or two unfortunate points in his record which Butler is ready to bring forward if necessary, he would undoubtedly be the strongest candidate available. As it is, it is uncertain whether he on the one hand and the Republican leaders on the other will conclude that it is practicable to ignore these obstacles. They are trifling, it is true, beside the derelictions of our present Governor, but the disadvantage of a good reputation is, that it shows the dirt, while a bad one doesn't. Robinson is the second man in general talk; but he has the negative disadvantage of not being sufficiently well known. Crapo has many bitter enemies; there was a good deal of bad blood over his failure to secure the nomination last year, and his River-and-Harbor bill vote has been neither forgiven nor forgotten. Altogether it is rather difficult to say with certainty anything more than that either Pierce or Robinson will be likely to be the choice, and that either could probably—and I think this probability a strong one—beat Butler this year. There is a general feeling of having waked up next year with a headache among those Republicans who last year voted for Gen. Butler. The fact that Wendell Phillips has turned his back on Butler, too, although it may seem of no especial importance in itself, has really considerable significance, for Mr. Phillips is a barometer by which the feelings of the more emotional elements of society may be not inaccurately discovered.

Lieut.-Gov. Ames is practically in the novel position of demanding a renomination as a vindication of his reputation. Two reporters declare and insist that they heard Mr. Ames say the election this year would result as it did last season, in the election of Butler and himself. The Lieutenant-Governor has published a card denying that he said this, and his friends insist that the convention is bound to show its faith in his integrity by a renomination. This is certainly a curious way of reasoning, but no more peculiar than many other political anomolies. However, the time draws on apace, and next week's convention will give at least an opportunity for a crop of predictions.

It is an unfortunate fact that Massachusetts has not, just now, any statesmen, or even any first-class politicians. Henry Cabot Lodge, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, is a good sample of a large class of the men who possess influence rather because there is nobody to dispute the place with them than because of any fitness for leadership. He is an educated man, of good family, of untarnished personal character, yet nobody thinks of expecting from him any show of original force; nobody believes his convictions to be of any vital and virile sort. At what rate the popular estimation holds him is fairly well indicated by a story told of a drunken man in a sleeping-car between here and New York. About the time when the passengers were retiring and quiet was settling over the car an intoxicated drummer stood up in the aisle, and balancing himself against the berths cried out in stentorian tones: "Is the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge on board?" At first nobody answered, but when the demand had been two or three times repeated, cries like those recorded in Mr. Howells' "Sleeping-Car," of "Give us a rest!" and the sort came from the curtained recesses on either hand. But the exalted drummer, not to be balked of his purpose, cried out louder than ever: "If the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge is aboard, will he—hic!—will he please lead in prayer!"

The chorus of laughter which this evoked sent the tipsy traveler to bed satisfied; but the story is told with great glee at the clubs, where the seriousness and sedateness of the Chairman are considered too beautiful to be wholly genuine. I had, when I began, no intention of attacking Mr. Lodge personally, who is a favorable, and in certain respects an able, representative of the class to which he belongs. But I do object to the class. The West is not wholly wrong in reproaching New England with being cankered by a sort of overcultivation; we have too many men who are "worthy" and respectable, because they have not innate force enough to be anything else. The dry-rot of respectability has struck New England society in too many places, and Butlerism has been largely a protest against it by the class whose hearts are supposed to be in the right place, but whose heads were not very clear. It was an honest reaction against stupidity and political ossification, but it was more stupid still in its means and its misdirection than what it attacked. Which is far more than I meant to take up your space to say on an old topic; my excuse is that we shall probably have it all to discuss over again this fall.

Bostonians are still scattered abroad. Miss Nora Perry, as your readers may be aware, is in Chicago, the guest of her niece, Mrs. A. F. Stevenson. She has been much out of health this summer, and needs the rest which she is doubtless finding among her relatives in your hospitable city. Among the fall books, it was at one time hoped, a new volume of her poems would be included, but the idea, if it was ever seriously entertained by the lady herself, has evidently been abandoned. It is only a matter of time, however, for she has published a number of fine poems since her last volume was issued, and it is only a question of time, too, when her poetical works receive the dignified, complete edition to which their rank in American literature entitles them.

LITERARY MATTERS.

And that brings me to literary matters in general. The publishers are, like "Brer Fox" in the tar-baby story of Uncle Remus, "lyin' low" this year, and the holiday books are only just beginning to send out a few advance scouts. Of the illustrated books I shall have something to say hereafter; of fresh, original poems there is nothing of importance as yet announced; while in fiction Bret Harte has led off with the best novel he ever wrote, "In the Carquinez Woods." The announcements you can get from the bulletins, and of exciting rumors there is a dearth just now.

A paragraph is going the rounds to the effect that Miss Lucretia Gray Noble, the author of "A Reverend Idol," is writing another novel. The fact of the case is that Miss Noble, who is a very slow worker, has has been engaged upon another story ever since her first book was published. The "Reverend Idol" itself was years in incubation. In one of its earlier forms it was shown to James Russell Lowell seven or eight years ago, and he advised Miss Noble to persevere in a literary career.

Rather a phenomenal success has attended a little jeu d'esprit published here last winter. It is called "Mr. Jacobs," is a travesty on the famous "Mr. Isaacs." Certain private gentlemen volunteered to bear the expense of its publication, and without advertising it has twice run out of print, besides selling in overlapping editions. The seventh and eighth editions of the tiny volume are now in press, advance orders covering the former being already received.

Thomas Bailey Aldrich does not, it is said, like to be gossiped about, but apropos of the announcement of a new volume from his pen, I heard a gentleman relate recently that Mr. Aldrich once said to him: "I like 'Mercedes' better than anything I have written, and it is a pet plan of mine to make a pretty little book of it with the poems I've written since my last volume. But my wife advises me not to; she has a presentiment that it will not succeed, and I have always found that her presentiments about my work are apt to be verified, so I shall not do it." Now, however, the volume is coming out. "Mercedes" is undoubtedly one of the strongest things Mr. Aldrich ever wrote, and it will be interesting to see to what Mrs. Aldrich's forebodings will come in this instance.

William H. Rideing is writing a paper on the islands off the Plymouth shore, and Mr. W. H. Holsall, last year President of the Paint and Clay Club, is illustrating it. That breezy and lively club, by the way, is talking of taking up a plan started and dropped a year ago. This is a history of the Charles River, with its scenery, its traditions, and history; with views of its nooks and corners, its beauties and piquancies, the historic spots along its banks, and all the artistic fancies which the clever brains and pencils of the members of the club can connect with it. The volume, should it ever see completeness, would certainly be unique, but it is not to be counted among this year's possibilities.

It may not be out of order to mention here the fact that Massachusetts is burning up. The long drouth has resulted in forest fires all over the State, and while forestry committees are discussing the means of replacing the wasted forests, the flames are rapidly destroying the few remnants which remain to us of the forest primeval. In the outskirts of the historic Town of Hingham last week the flames threatened many of the dwellings standing near the woods, and in one case a mother and daughter, who were watching by the bedside of a second daughter who was dangerously ill, had to go out in the night and fight fire to preserve their house from being burned over their heads. Perhaps from the cold season, perhaps from the irritating influence of the smoke-laden air, a sort of influenza is very prevalent, and a few cases of epizoötic have developed themselves. There is a splendid chance for a repetition of the conflagration of 1872, though it is to be hoped fate has no such evil in store for us. The weak, dribbling rain of today amounts to nothing, but it may be the earnest of better showers to come.

JOHN PENNIMAN.

BRITISH LAND-OWNERS IN AMERICA.

[Washington Sunday Herald.]—The largest owner of land bought in recent years in this country is Sir Edward James Reed, M. P. for Cardiff, Wales. He has purchased in the last ten years 2,000,000 acres of well-selected land in Montana and Dakota. Sir Edward Reed is a practical man and the founder of his own fortune, which he got out of the iron and coal mines of his native Wales and the tin mines of Cornwall. His investments in this country directed many others to our public domain, who had great confidence in his sagacity. Next in consequence is the purchase last year of 1,300,000 acres, consisting mostly of pine land in the State of Mississippi, though included in this holding are 400,000 of the finest agricultural land on the continent, lying on the Yazoo River bottoms. This magnificent property belongs to the firm of Philips, Marshall & Co., wealthy corn-factors, of Mark Lane, who are also the largest dealers in American wheat and other grains in England. Next in consequence comes the Grant estate, which includes an entire county in Kansas, and has within its bounds about 350,000 acres. This is probably the most desirable landed estate held by a single owner in America, as the land is all rich, well watered, and settled mostly by emigrant farmers from England and Scotland. Alexander Grant, the owner, has laid off all his land into farms, built about 400 good farm-houses, each with the necessary out-buildings, and is conducting the estate just as though it was north of the Cheviots instead of in America. The Duke of Portland owns about 500,000 acres, part of which is on the North Platte, in Nebraska, and part in Colorado. Not much of it is yet in cultivation. Lord Stafford owns 100,000 acres on the line of the North Pacific Railroad, and he is gradually colonizing it and getting it into field cultivation. Lord Dunraven is the pioneer of the English nobility in American land owning. He bought the well-known property in Colorado called by him Dunraven Park, 1868, and at Government prices. Dunraven Park contains about 140,000 acres. The first purchase was 81,000, and subsequently 40,000 acres more were added. It is one of the best cattle ranches in America, being a lovely valley, full of pure streams fed by mountain springs, rich in the best cattle-growing grass known, and the whole property is fenced in by mountain ranges. It is now easily worth $1,000,000, but Lord Dunraven refuses to sell it at any price. Lord Dunmore owns 100,000 acres not far from Dunraven, and very much the same character of land, which is rapidly improving. The Duke of Beaufort is one of the four owners of a tract of 400,000 acres recently bought by English gentlemen in the Panhandle of Texas, and Sir John Rae-Reed is another of them, the others in interest being two rich bankers' sons. There are many other Englishmen who have from 1,000 to 2,000 acres in Colorado, Texas, Dakota, and New Mexico, but those alluded to in the House of Lords only were those I wished to speak of.

SNAKE-HANDLING.

Strange Experiences in India with Pythons and Cobras.

[Chambers' Journal.]—Apropos of Dr. Stradling's interesting snake anecdotes in your Journal, I send you a note illustrative of the danger of handling certain kinds of snakes. Out here, individuals of one sect of fakirs—religious mendicants—are frequently met with wearing young and tame pythons as necklaces. One such animal took the fancy of an officer and for a few rupees was transferred from the fakir's neck to his; and for some time both were on very good terms. One day our friend sat down to breakfast with the python round his neck, a thing he had never done before; the tail of the animal came across the arm of the chair and instinctively coiled round it. The leverage thus obtained seemed to revive its memories of victim-squeezing, and in a moment the officer was in the pangs of strangulation, bound fast to his chair and the awful coil of the python around his neck. But in that supreme moment of horror appalling he retained his nerve; with his left hand he seized the reptile's head and with his right grasped a table-knife and was just able to inflict a gash behind its head, and then the suffocating coils fell slack. The officer was afterward found prostrate on the floor in a dead faint, from which he only recovered to be seized with brain-fever, the delirium of which was entirely occupied with encounters with monstrous serpents. In course of time he recovered, but no one could recognize in that pallid, gray-haired, and careworn shadow of a man the once stalwart, hearty, and enthusiastic sportsman.

Another note to illustrate the extreme danger of handling even dead snakes. Maj. Dennys, a police officer in the Central Provinces, was recently out shooting and killed a large cobra. His companion asked to see its poison-fangs, and Maj. Dennys, seizing the head with one hand, opened its jaws with the other to exhibit the fangs, which, in the approaching rigidity of death, closed on his finger. Aware of his awful risk he sucked his finger and hastened home. But all assistance was unavailing; he died in three hours.

I once kept and freely handled a snake declared to be innocuous; it escaped, and after much searching could not be found. Presently my boy ran up with tears in his eyes, declaring that his three pet rabbits were all dead; and, true enough, they were so, and quite rigid. Coiled up in the hutch was the missing snake which my boy and I had so frequently handled!

The handling of snakes is often unavoidably forced upon us by the extraordinary and oftentimes incomprehensible positions in which snakes are frequently encountered. We are apt to fancy that snakes are essentially grovelling creatures, forgetting that their ventral scales give them admirable facilities for climbing. Unless you recognize this fact, it is difficult to understand how snakes get into the roofs of up-country bungalows, which are supported by smooth and whitewashed walls and pillars; how you meet them on the upper shelves of your bookcases, or in other apparently inaccessible situations.

But when you meet snakes in the act of ascending trees, and apparently with nothing to hold on by, you are resigned to your fate, and are prepared for sanguine encounters anywhere and everywhere. If you are a lady you must not be surprised—as my wife was—at a deadly snake dropping out of the sleeve of your velvet jacket, which your ayah was helping you on with, that jacket having previously hung from a wall-peg, leaving it three or four feet from the ground. Nor, if you are going out calling, must you be astonished if a cobra looks in upon you from the double roof of your brougham. How did the one snake ascend the smooth wall and get into the jacket? How did the other pass up the smooth and glass-like sides or wheels of the brougham and get into its double roof?

I might adduce illustrations by the score of these strange rencontres, and they show us how we must always be on our guard against snakes. Yet it is marvelous that among Europeans we very rarely hear of deaths from snake-bite, while the bare feet and legs of natives leave them frequently and fatally open to attack.

DISRESPECT.

The following is said to have been the postscript to a letter received lately by a sporting nobleman in Lancashire from his steward: "I beg your lordship will excuse me for having taken the liberty of writing this in my shirt-sleeves, but the excessive heat has compelled me to be guilty of this disrespect."

EVENING SESSIONS.

The evening sessions of H. B. Bryant's Chicago Business College, Phonographic Institute, and English Training-School will commence on tomorrow evening, Sept. 17th. Young men and women who are engaged during the day can spend their evenings at this college to great advantage. A practical education has come to be a necessity.

THOUSANDS HAVE BEEN SURPRISED.

THE WORLD DEFIED

To Produce a Finer Brew-House than That Just Completed

And to Be Opened Tomorrow by the Bemis & McAvoy Brewing Company.

This magnificent Brewery is situated on South Park avenue, between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets. The structure has taken one year to build, and from the foundation to the handsome clock-tower it is finished in the most substantial and elaborate manner, a special feature of which is the first introduction into Chicago of the Phillips gas-fuel system of heating boilers. The whole building is well worthy of inspection by our citizens, and the firms who have contributed toward making this brew-house a model of its kind are entitled to creditable mention in these columns.

THE BUILDING

was erected by Mr. Andreas Elmers, a mason contractor, well known in Chicago since 1857, and who for the last fifteen years has had entire charge of this company's work. Under the able foremanship of his son, E. P. Elmers, the foundations and walls have been substantially built, and the general structure a model of construction. As a whole, the building is a lasting credit to Mr. Elmers' constructive ability.

What is conceded the most perfect and effective in the West was furnished by C. C. Warren, general agent of the United States Electric Light Company, of No. 185 La Salle street. There are three systems, comprising about thirty large Weston arc lights, over 100 maxim incandescent lights, and operated by a special dynamo, is a mammoth light of 8,000 candle-power suspended in front of the clock-tower, sending its light over the whole neighborhood.

THE REFRIGERATING DEPARTMENT

is perhaps the most important one in any first-class brewery, and one that is now controlled as easily as the running of an engine. The machinery is acknowledged to be the best known to the brewing fraternity. The first Boyle ice machinery for brewers' use was erected and put in service at the Downer & Bemis Brewery in 1877 and has remained in constant and successful operation ever since; and, although Mr. Bemis had implicit confidence in the machine and its workings, yet he would not contract for the same machines for his new brewery until he had thoroughly examined those of other manufacturers and convinced himself that the Boyle ice machines are the best in the world, and Mr. Bemis is not alone in his conclusions, for Capt. Pabst, President of the Philip Best Brewing Company of Milwaukee; Mr. A. Busch, President of the Anheusen-Busch Brewing Association of St. Louis. Also the large brewers and packers in New York, Pennsylvania, Missouri, California, Texas, Ohio, Tennessee, and many other States have them in use and indorse them in every particular as being what their manufacturers claim for them, the most simple, reliable, durable, and economical machine for making ice or for refrigerating breweries, packing-houses, etc., etc., in the market. Over ninety of these immense machines are now in use and a large number more are contracted for. All machines built by this company are in successful operation today, and are giving entire satisfaction.

THE FINE FURNITURE,

made of San Domingo mahogany and upholstered in the finest quality of embossed leather, was manufactured by the W. W. Strong Furniture Company (William Soloman successor), 193 Wabash avenue. The reception-room and the chief brewer's private office are made elegant by the fine furniture they contain, and Mr. Bemis shows his belief in the old adage that the best is the cheapest.

THE VESTIBULE, RECEPTION-ROOM, and head brewer's office are handsomely decorated, but what gives them such a finished appearance is the handsome plate-glass partitions and doors most beautifully ornamented by the Western Sand-Blast Company of Chicago. So elegant are the productions of this institution that very few buildings of importance are now erected without this company being called on to furnish some decorative plate glass.

THE ORNAMENTAL IRON-WORK,

including the iron stairways, ornamental railings around the galleries of the brew-house, cresting on the roof, etc., is the work of Mr. A. Bolter, proprietor of the Illinois Iron-Works, Chicago. This work is noticeable for its superb finish throughout, and gives the utmost satisfaction to Mr. Bemis, who expresses himself in words of the highest and most unqualified praise.

BROWN'S KEYSTONE CEMENT

was adopted by Mr. Brown as being the very best obtainable for the purpose of covering the immense 300-barrel brewing kettles, hot-water kettles, mash tubs, and all the steam and cold water pipe is covered with this cement. This cement is in general use in breweries and all large concerns where a first-class non-conducting material is required. John E. Brown, manufacturer, 39 South Fourth street, Philadelphia.

THE STEAM AND WATER PIPE CONNECTIONS

were made and put in by Kroeschell Bros., 4 to 12 Michigan street, Chicago. They also put in the eight-inch pipe to the lake for water-supply. Mr. Bemis is well pleased with the firm's work. The firm does a large amount of work for brewery and malt-houses, and their boilers and tanks are favorably known. Prompt attention given to repairs.

THE IRON PIPE, VALVES, ETC.

In his desire to have the best, Mr. Bemis had his engineer procure samples from various firms, and after taking several valves apart and thoroughly examining them and the piping, the contract was given to Messrs. Fieldhouse, Dutcher & Belden, of Chicago, for iron pipe, valves, special fittings, etc. This firm makes a specialty of the best quality of brass goods, iron pipe, etc.

THE RUBBER AND LEATHER BELTING

in use at this brewery is of the very best material, it being the production of the Boston Belting Company, and was furnished by Salisbury & Cline, 109 Madison street, who are their Western agents for hose and belting. This is the oldest firm of the kind in the city, and their trade in strictly first-class rubber goods of every description is very large.

THE CAST-IRON WORK,

as is the case with nearly all breweries and many of our prominent buildings, was executed by the old and reliable firm of Schilto, Cossman & Co., 87 to 93 West Polk street, Chicago. To say that the work was well done our readers have only to refer to Mr. H. V. Bemis for an indorsement. The firm's figures for cast-iron work given upon application.

ENGLISH PORTLAND CEMENT CONCRETE.

Plain and smooth finish floors are found in the fuel house, ice-machine room, basement of main building, and fifth floor, and diamond-shaped blocks of different colors in the fine boiler-room, and the heavy concrete foundations were all done by the Portland Cement Paving Company of Chicago, of which Mr. J. B. Hurlbut is President, whose office is Room 10, 116 Washington street.

THE EXHAUST VENTILATORS.

The fuel house where gas is produced for heating the boilers, the boiler-house, and the large malt-house of this company are all ventilated and the working economy perfected by the use of these popular mechanical appliances, which are also in use in many of the large breweries and malt-houses East and West. They are made by the Exhaust Ventilator Company, 111 Monroe street, Chicago.

THE ELEVATOR GUARDS

were manufactured and put up by the Novelty Wire Works, State and Madison streets, and give entire satisfaction to Mr. Bemis. This firm executes all wire work to order promptly.

SALOON LICENSE INCREASED.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The city has increased the saloon license from $100 to $200. This makes the annual license over $1,200, and no wine and beer license will be issued. Several saloons were unable to meet the increase. Six closed yesterday and three today. There were about 200 in the city July 1, when the new law went into effect.

THE GERMAN BAPTISTS.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 15.—The Eastern Conference of the German Baptist Church are holding the thirty-third annual session in this city. About thirty delegates, representing forty-eight churches in every State east of Ohio, are present. Rev. I. Senna, of Williamsburg, N. Y., opened the conference with an able sermon, after which the following permanent officers were elected:

President—Rev. Lenker, Philadelphia.

Secretary—Rev. I. C. Grummel, Brooklyn.

A large quantity of routine business was then taken up and disposed of. The Committee on Churches reported all in good condition, financially and otherwise, and that the membership had been largely increased during the past year. The Committee on Foreign and Home Missions reported that the work was being prosecuted with vigor and good results. The conference will hold no session tomorrow and will adjourn Monday.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Defrauding the Government in the South—The Daily Calendar.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The investigations of Revenue-Agent Powers, who was sent by Commissioner Evans to Pickens County to look into the alleged frauds against the Government by revenue officers, have unearthed thus far three instances of stills having been "planted" for the purpose of making out of the Government the fees incidental to the capture of an illicit distillery. It transpires that at least two Deputy United States Marshals are the instigators of these frauds. In neither case, however, has any revenue officer been implicated. The Deputy Marshals had promised a division of the profits with the parties who set up the stills. Instead, however, of profits accruing the stills were lost to the owners and destroyed, the jobbers in the frauds not happening to get the job of capturing the sham distilleries. The stills were put up and in due time reported, and were raided and captured by revenue officers. In one instance the fraud was at once discovered by the revenue officer commanding the raid, and in neither instance was there any reward by the Government.

Another matter that attracts attention as being of a crooked nature, is the large number of trivial arrests that have been made in Pickens of persons charged with violations of the revenue laws. It is stated as a fact, which will be substantiated by the evidence to be presented, that citizens have been arrested on one charge, examined, and allowed to go home on bail or otherwise; rearrested for violation of another section, examined, and sent home again, and immediately rearrested and reëxamined, when the different charges could all have been investigated at once, the multiplication of arrests being for the purpose of multiplying the costs. It is further stated that of twenty-eight cases brought before the Commissioner at Pickens in one recent month twenty were dismissed; that one-fourth of all the voters of Pickens County have at different times been arrested for violation of the revenue laws, and that many of the cases have proven utterly trifling and without foundation. The investigations are still in progress.

PETERSBURG, Va., Sept. 15.—The grave of Lewis Carter, who was executed at Southampton Court-House last June, was opened last night and the body carried off.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 15.—Anthony, better known as "Tony" Hale, and John W. Edmundson were today taken into the custody of the Government. It is alleged Hale and his accomplice have been engaged for weeks past in issuing notes and bonds, some of which they are alleged to have disposed of to brokers. They were held for further hearing. A lot of mechanical apparatus used in the manufacture of spurious notes is said to have been found in Hale's house.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The convict shot by Superintendent Kelby several days ago at Grant's convict camp while attempting to escape, the facts of which were wired THE TRIBUNE at the time of the occurrence, died at 11 o'clock last night. The last words that he uttered were to tell Dr. Raines that his true name was Henry Clay Holt, and that he was from Kentucky. He said that he has a brother who was a member of Congress from that State. Holt was serving a sentence of three years for burglarizing a bank in La Grange. The other convict that broke out of the stockade with Kilby has not been captured.

ALLEGED EVASION OF DUTY.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Several New York, Boston, and Chicago firms who have made it a practice to supply their Canadian customers with blank invoices to fill in at fictitious prices for the purpose of making customs entry have been detected in their game, and their names are likely to be published for the future guidance of Collectors of Customs at ports of entry where their goods may pass through. The black list on file at the Customs Department here contains the names of all such fraudulent dealers, and is quite an interesting document. The names of some of the leading wholesale houses in the United States figure conspicuously upon it.

CRUSHED BENEATH THE WHEELS.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—A young man named Follitte, an employé of a construction-train, fell between cars near Bigelow, on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, this noon, and was killed instantly.

You will receive a circular regarding Morgan Park, its beauties and advantages, showing why you should live there. Hopkinson & Silva, 125 Dearborn street, will take you to it.

EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother to the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

MESSRS. J. C. AYER & CO., Gentlemen:

Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor, affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent. stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA

Cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

THE HESING CASE.

SECRETARY FOLGER CONSIDERING THE MATTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Secretary Folger sets apart Saturday for the consideration of the cases which require continuous attention, and is not that day accessible to visitors. Today he took up the proposition to compromise the Hesing judgment. It is not known what conclusion he has reached, if any, but it is the impression of those who have given the subject most attention that he will decide to accept the compromise. He said to a gentleman within two days that the only embarrassment he has in the case is the proposition of Michaelis, and it was on account of this that in answer to the argument of Mr. Reed the other day, Secretary Folger, possibly in jest, suggested that it might be advisable for him to put up the judgment of the Government against Hesing for sale at the north door of the court-house. Secretary Folger has found three precedents in favor of selling the judgment, but it is denied that these precedents were themselves in accordance with the law. It is known, moreover, that the President has expressed himself very emphatically in opposition to the sale of a judgment, and has stated, as to the Hesing case, that it would be very undignified for the Government to sell the judgment. As that seems to be the only point in the case, and as the Administration is opposed to selling the judgment, the conclusion is that the compromise will be accepted.

TWO-CENT POSTAGE.

A LARGE LOT OF STAMPS ORDERED.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—For some time past Postmasters have held back their orders for postage stamps in order that they might be found with as few as possible on hand when the new law goes into effect. Lately, however, the requisitions for supplies have begun to come in, and the post-office authorities have been busy for a day or two in preparing the orders for the stamp agents. The order sent to the contractors today was the largest in the history of the the department. It included 35,000,000 stamps, 7,000,000 stamped envelopes, and 6,000,000 postal-cards, the total value of which is $950,000.

THE COREAN EMBASSY.

THEIR ARRIVAL AT THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The Corean Embassy arrived here this morning and was met at the station by Ensign Foulk, of the navy, who speaks the Corean language. Ensign Foulk with Lieut. Mason have been assigned to extend civilities to the visitors, and are in constant attendance upon them in full naval uniform. The Embassadors have been assigned quarters in the Summer House, adjacent to the Arlington Hotel. The Coreans were attired in their native costumes, and attracted considerable attention. One of the members of the Embassy is not well, the climate and food both seeming to disagree with him. They will not be presented to the President until after his return, he having left for New York last night before their arrival.

CHICAGO POST-OFFICE.

NO REASON GIVEN FOR REVOKING THE CARRIER ORDER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Postmaster-General Gresham has gone to Philadelphia on business of the department. Until his return the officials decline to give any reasons for revoking the order granting twenty-five additional carriers to the Chicago Post-Office. Mr. Hatton says that he does not know the order was revoked. He issued the order under instructions from Judge Gresham, who doubtless had some good reason for his action. "Had the expected deficiency in the receipts anything to do with the change in plans?" was asked. "No," replied Mr. Hatton. "The receipts can make no difference; we have the necessary money already appropiated. I think Chicago entitled to the extra carriers, but the Postmaster-General directed that the former order allowing them to be engaged be rescinded, and I obeyed his directions."

Mr. Gurley, Chief of the Free-Delivery Office, had no information to give on the subject, and suggested that Judge Gresham alone can explain it.

THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC.

PRESSING THE CLAIM FOR THE TEXAS LAND GRANTS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—C. P. Huntington, of the Southern Pacific, is expected to be here next week to make an argument before the Secretary of the Interior in the matter of the application of the Southern Pacific to the unearned grant of the Texas Pacific. Secretary Teller has returned to his desk, and doubtless the case will soon be taken up. There is excellent reason for the statement that the decision will be adverse to the claim of the Southern Pacific.

BITTERS.

IN THE WEST PEOPLE GET DRUNK ON THEM, AND IN THE EAST THEY ARE USED AS "MEDICINE."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The uncertainty regarding the classification of bitters and tonics caused by the recent action of the Internal Revenue Bureau has given Gen. Raum a harvest of clients, who wish to have their preparation exempted from the payment of a special license-tax. Two more cases were presented today for Commissioner Evans' consideration. In the argument of one of these Gen. Raum was confronted by an awkward obstruction in the shape of a decision of his own, recorded last April, classing it as a beverage. This preparation is known as a tolu tonic, and the formula on file shows that its principal ingredient is rice whisky. The ex-Commissioner was not prepared for this development, and withdrew his application in some confusion.

The second case was not much more satisfactory. A decoction known as Gilt-Edge Tonic, manufactured in New England, claimed exemption from tax. To meet the arguments of Gen. Raum Commissioner Evans produced a letter from a Collector in Wisconsin, who reported that the Gilt-Edge Tonic was used in that part of the country as a beverage; that it was sold for whisky, and that people got drunk on it.

On the other hand, the Collector at Hartford reported that the same preparation was in his opinion a medicine; that a visit to the laboratory where it was manufactured had convinced him of this fact; and that the machinery for making extracts of various well-known curatives was unsurpassed. These conflicting reports Commissioner Evans said proved that his ruling is the right one. In leaving these cases to Collectors the dealers were taxed or not, according to the manner in which the article was used. In New England the preparation in question would be regarded as a medicine because the Collector there believed it to be such. In Wisconsin it would be taxed as a beverage for the same reason.

DEPARTMENTAL GOSSIP.

BRIEF NEWS NOTES.

Secretary Teller resumed his duties yesterday.

Representative Cannon is expected tonight, and he will Monday present a candidate for Collector for the Champaign District. His candidate will be opposed by Senator Cullom, who presents Jake Wheeler. The contest will be a friendly one. Senator Logan, it is understood, will not take any part in it.

Secretary Folger was not able to attend the funeral of Mr. Hastings, although requested to act as pall-bearer, for the reason that, owing to the absence of the two Assistant-Secretaries, there is no official now sufficiently familiar with the duties of the Secretary to be designated to act in his absence, and, consequently, there is no one to sign the mail.

In the case of Recardo Vejor et al. vs. the State of California, involving the title to lands claimed to be within the limits of the Los Nogales Mexican grant, the Secretary of the Interior decided that applicants to purchase under the seventh section of the act of 1866 have no valid claim under such act, the lands being in no sense within the claimed limits of the grant.

The following is a statement of the condition of the Treasury:

Gold coin and bullion	$204,521,337
Silver dollars and bullion	118,927,337
Fractional silver coin	27,497,772
United States notes	54,172,592
Total	$405,119,035
Certificates outstanding—
Gold	$55,097,930
Silver	76,568,861

The report of the Commissioners of Emigration of the State of New York shows that 363,374 emigrants landed at the Port of New York from Aug. 3, 1882, to June 30, 1883, inclusive. Largest number landed in any one month, 69,593, was in May, 1883, and the smallest 8,343, in January of the same year. The duty imposed on the board of relieving paupers and persons unable to take care of themselves to the points whence they came has been carefully exercised, and a large number of undesirable persons have been sent back.

West Steever, of this city, counsel for Judge Robertson, of Louisiana, yesterday filed with John J. Knox, Controller of the Currency, a formal complaint setting forth the alleged violation of law by the New Orleans National Bank in substituting its name for that of the manager of the lottery company in advertisements which have appeared in various journals throughout the country. Steever says it is the intention of his client to test the question whether or not a National bank can lawfully go into the lottery business.

A FIST FIGHT

Indulged In by the Secretary of State for South Carolina and the Private Secretary of the Governor.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—In a corridor of the State House this morning a controversy occurred between James N. Lipscomb, Secretary of State for South Carolina, and John P. Thomas Jr., private secretary to the Governor, concerning the means resorted to by a newspaper correspondent to obtain information from the Executive Department. Lipscomb said that the correspondent would not scruple to surreptitiously procure information from private papers. Thomas disagreed with him as to the integrity of the correspondent, and then withdrew into his office. Lipscomb soon followed him, and said to Thomas that his remarks were tantamount to calling him (Lipscomb) a liar. The private secretary denied any such intention, but claimed the right to express his own opinion of the correspondent. Lipscomb insisted upon his construction of the remark, and forthwith slapped Thomas in the face. Lipscomb is a large, corpulent man of quick temper, strong prejudices, and is inclined to be domineering in his manner. Thomas is a small, bony young man of modest demeanor, yet he promptly showed fight and got in several blows about his burly assailant's head and face in rapid succession, retreating as he fought, until he picked up a piece of stove iron, with which he struck Lipscomb a heavy blow in the head, inflicting an ugly gash, from which the blood flowed freely. Gov. Thompson, who was in his private office, now appeared upon the scene and separated the combatants. The affair is the all-absorbing topic in the city this evening, and will be State gossip by morning. It is believed the end is not yet.

SHIPPING DISASTERS.

The Excursion Steamer William Harrison Cut to the Water's Edge—Other Mishaps to Vessels.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The excursion steamer William Harrison, on her first trip from Nantasket Beach this morning, collided with the iron steamer Prof. Morse, which was lying at anchor waiting for a chance to put to sea. It was quite foggy at the time, and the Harrison was going at full speed. When the Prof. Morse was sighted the engine was stopped, but too late to avoid a collision, and the Harrison struck the Morse in the bow. The shock was terrific and passengers were thrown from their feet. One of the Harrison's paddle-boxes and the stateroom next to it were smashed into kindling-wood, and a portion of the upper deck on that side was ripped up. Many of the settees were made useless, and the bow of the boat was smashed in, but fortunately the injury was above the water-line. The passengers, of whom there were about 150, were greatly excited, and put on life-preservers. Most of them caught the bowsprit of the Prof. Morse and crawled into the iron steamer. After an examination of the Harrison it was found that she could proceed to the city, and, her passengers being transferred to her once more, she came to her dock at Rowe's wharf.

FREEPORT, L. I., Sept. 15.—The steamship Independence, which is 112 metres long, was moved about her length this morning at high water by the Coast Wrecking Company, and later in the day was hauled off.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—The lightship anchored on Frying-Pan Shoals, off the North Carolina coast, which went adrift in the recent gale, and which it was feared might be lost, has been discovered and towed into a North Carolina port in safety, and the crew—ten men—all on board.

YELLOW-FEVER.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Sept. 25.—Pensacola is still healthy. There were three new cases, but no deaths at the navy-yard the last twenty-four hours.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Commodore English has received the following telegram from Lieut.-Commander Welsh, at Pensacola:

The 12th inst. I issued to the destitute about 1,850 rations which, I considered, was all I could do under the order of the department. I am reliably informed that a deposit of $4,000 is now in bank in Pensacola, subject to the check of the Reserve Relief Committee, and last night informed the Treasurer thereof that I thought I had done all I could at present under my orders. There were no new cases and no deaths among the naval forces.

The health officers were much exercised at the fact that a schooner laden with asphalt from Trinidad had passed the quarantine at Cape Henry and had anchored off Georgetown, without having been inspected. The vessel was immediately ordered to midstream until the health officers satisfied themselves that the crew was free from sickness and the vessel clean. Great efforts are now being made by all shipmasters to run by the Cape quarantine in the dark.

A GRAND JURY'S STARTLING REPORT.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The grand jury of the Criminal Court of this county adjourned today, and, as is the usual custom, made their report, to Judge Greer. The report although it condemns in the severest terms the quarters provided by the county for the care of the insane, also mentions that the drainage from that institution, together with the poor-house, empties into a small stream which finds its way into Wolf River, and it is this water that is now supplied the citizens of Memphis for drinking and other purposes. The city prison also comes in for a general raking-over on account of the poor accommodations it has for those unfortunates who are arrested in violation of the ordinances of the city. The new grand jury will be impaneled Monday, and Judge Greer will no doubt cause active steps to be taken towards remedying these evils.

FRANK HURD.

HE IS CONFIDENT OF DEMOCRATIC VICTORIES IN OHIO AND NEW YORK.

The Hon. Frank Hurd, member of Congress from the Toledo, O., District, reached the city yesterday and is at the Grand Pacific.

Mr. Hurd speaks quite hopefully about Democratic prospects in Ohio. He says: "The fact is, Hoadly is going to be elected. All this talk about Democrats being on the run, the party demoralized by local dissensions, and the old-liners disaffected is the veriest bosh, simply newspaper talk, which no one in Ohio pays any attention to. It has its effect outside of the State, as I found in New York, where the impression is current that we are already beaten out of our boots. Now, what are the facts: A local split in Hamilton County which will bring out a tremendous Democratic vote, all of which Hoadly will receive. Make no mistake on that point. The Ohio Democrats are all going to vote for Hoadly. I am an old line party man and was not in favor of Hoadly's nomination, but now I am for him red-hot. I think I know the German vote in our State, and since my return from New York I have taken pains to inquire into the status of the German voters. My information leads me to believe that seven out of every eight Germans in the State will vote for Hoadly. If they do this, as I am certain they will, he will have a good smart majority; if they don't, it will be close, as it has often been in the past, when the German vote, as a rule, was adverse to us. It is the colored vote which has kept Ohio from being Democratic for years. Figures prove this. In my Congressional district the Democracy were never better united, and Hoadly will run ahead of last year's vote."

"How about the Legislature?"

"Well, we have carried it before without Hamilton County, and we can do it again. I think the indications favor a Democratic majority even with Hamilton's large delegation Republican. But it is by do means certain that they will secure it. The unfortunate breach may yet be healed, and it is a question whether the reform ticket will draw sufficiently to defeat the McLean ticket."

"How did you find the New York Democracy?"

"Confident of carrying the State by a handsome majority. The State Convention will give all the factions in New York City representation. They will have to do it. The County Democrats can't expect the convention to shut Tammany and Irving Hall out; the experiment has already proved too costly. Do you know that I would not be surprised to find Roscoe Conkling with us next year? He has no home in the Republican party, and a man of his tastes and accustomed to political power must chafe under his present enforced isolation. A former lieutenant of Conkling's, who served with me in the Forty-sixth Congress, told me that if Conkling came over to the Democratic party he would draw a big following after him. This sentiment, coming from such a source, struck me as very significant."

"How do you feel about Tilden's nomination?"

"Just as I always did. If he should be our candidate his election would be over the day of the nomination, for no issues or no set of men could stem the tide of his success. With any other candidate the issue is uncertain till the ballots are counted, but not so with Tilden. But I question whether he will be a candidate. The Republican party is crumbling, it is manifest, and it will be a miracle if they beat us next year."

"Will the tariff be the issue?"

"It must be. We cannot afford to dodge the issue, and it is one that if properly presented cannot but grow in popular favor. The policy of straddling issues has not proved successful in the past, and why continue it? If we pronounce for a tariff for revenue with incidental protection and that sort of thing, we will get the credit of being free-traders. So why not come out boldly for what we believe to be right? Aggressive measures generally win. On the other hand a 'tariff for revenue only' platform would bring to us the support of all the intelligent free-traders of the land. I know of at least fifty men in New York who were for us in 1880, and after Hancock's letter shifted in disgust and voted for Garfield."

"Who is your choice for Speaker?"

"John C. Carlisle. I think he represents the dominant sentiment of the party, and his election will give us a positive position before the country."

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

MARTIN VAN BUREN EDGERLY PINS HIS PRESIDENTIAL FAITH TO BEN BUTLER.

Among yesterday's arrivals at the Grand Pacific was Martin Van Buren Edgerly, late Democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire.

A reporter for THE TRIBUNE had quite a long talk with Mr. Edgerly, and found him to be a rock-ribbed Democrat. Speaking of the nomination next year for President, he seemed to favor Butler. He said: "We must wait and see what Massachusetts does this fall. If Butler carries it this year he could do the same thing next year and a Republican campaign, with no hope of carrying such a State as Massachusetts, would be a farce. I saw Gov. Butler about ten days ago, and he then told me he was going to make the race. I have been a good deal in Massachusetts this year, and I tell you the popular sentiment is for Butler—they can't beat him. We New Hampshire Democrats were always for Tilden, but I guess he is out of the question; he won't be a candidate."

Mr. Edgerly said he had read the interview in THE TRIBUNE with William L. Scott, of Erie, and he thought it would be better to reverse his ticket. McDonald and Randolph would look better than Randolph and McDonald. McDonald he regarded as one of the purest and best men in the country, and he, too, would be a strong candidate. Senator Wadleigh, of New Hampshire, who had been associated with McDonald in the Senate, had told him that he was one of the finest men he had ever met.

Speaking of his defeat last fall, he said he would have been elected but for the use of money in Democratic towns. Buying votes was the curse of New Hampshire politics. As it was, he was beaten by 500, running several thousand votes ahead of his ticket.

Mr. Edgerly did not favor a "tariff-for-revenue-only" platform. He thought it would be unwise to make the issue too sharp. He believed in a conservative policy on this question. The present tariff would have to be modified, but the manufacturing interests of the country could not live if it was abrogated. Mutual concessions would have to be made by each side. He thought the Republican party would have as much trouble in handling the question as the Democratic.

OHIO.

THE HAMILTON COUNTY DEMOCRATIC FACTIONS.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The committees of both the Democratic factions met at the same hour this afternoon. At the meeting of the McLean committee it was reported that a sub-committee had conferred with a committee representing the reformers, in regard to securing harmony in the party ranks. They were coldly received, impolitely treated, and accomplished nothing. This report was made verbally by one of the members of the sub-committee. A quite different report had evidently been expected. Objection was made to the form of the report, and the Chairman of the sub-committee, who was not present, will be asked to prepare a written report of the so-called conference. Inquiry was made as to why Congressman Jordan was not present, and it was hinted that he had gone over to the reformers. At the meeting of the Reform Committee it was reported that an effort had been made by the McLean faction to bring about a conference for the alleged purpose of securing harmony of action among Democrats, but the proposition that a conference should be held was not of an official character and no attention had been paid to it. The reformers evidently placed but little faith in the sincerity of the request that a conference be held. An address to the voters of Hamilton County was agreed upon, which will be published in the morning. It is signed by the Reform Executive Committee and recites the reasons, which are already well understood, for placing a third ticket in the field.

VIRGINIA.

MAHONE ENDEAVORING TO ASSESS GOVERNMENT CLERKS AGAIN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The suicide of Congressman-elect Mayo, of Virginia, may somewhat disarrange Mahone's plans. Mayo was the Readjuster Congressman-elect, elected by a very narrow majority after a sharp contest, and it is by no means certain that the Readjusters can elect his successor. This makes two vacancies in the Virginia delegation, the other being caused by John Paul taking the United States Circuit Judgeship.

Meanwhile Mahone is making very determined efforts to collect money for campaign purposes from Virginia Government clerks, notwithstanding the Civil-Service law. The import of his circular to Virginia employés is a demand for money and an attempt to accomplish by indirection what is prohibited by the new statute. The eleventh section of this law forbids Congressmen from making any direct or indirect solicitation for such assessment, and it is by no means certain that the circular has evaded that section of the law. The course of the various Cabinet officers with regard to these circulars which have been sent to clerks in their employ will be watched with interest.

WERE THEY MURDERED?

Death of a Father and Two Sons under Suspicious Circumstances—An Investigation.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The people of Jackson Station, an Erie suburb, are excited over the suspicious death of Mr. George Irvine and his two young sons, all three of whom were attacked the other day by a malady indicative of poison. They died in horrible agony, their bodies being fearfully swollen. It is alleged that foul play has been at work, and a former lover of the wife is involved in the serious allegation. A detective will have the graves opened and the bodies examined for traces of poison.

BUSINESS.

The "Herald's" Money Article.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The Herald's money article says: Neither bulls nor bears troubled themselves much about today's market—or, as a vulgar Stock Exchange broker expressed it, did not get into a "sweat" over it. If there was any start of perspiration at all it was from the cuticle of the bears, who, during the final hours of the day, were made to perspire pretty freely. For the best part of the session stocks were practically higher—well sustained, but exceedingly dull. During the last hour they were decidedly more active, and at the very close, all owing to a small amount of leeway, the best prices of the day were made. Transactions were, however, pretty much confined to professional board-room traders. In a small way there were some orders to buy stocks both for home and foreign account, but they were not of sufficient importance to give a start to prices. About the only real fact that can be squeezed out of the day's transactions is that it is a good deal easier to sell stocks than to buy them. In other words, the demand exceeds the supply. Prices, hammered down at one hour, after a bent-twig sort of fashion recover the next, and in many cases even attain higher figures. There is no doubt of this fact, and upon it the bulls base their anticipation of higher figures. Items of interest were few and of little import so far as they influenced quotations. An attempt to break Oregon & Transcontinental was based upon a report that a prominent Boston firm had called in a loan of a million or so loaned to this company. Upon the Boston firm stating that the Oregon & Transcontinental did not owe them a dollar, and that consequently there was no loan to call, the string was taken out of the imputation and the price improved. Western Union, though quiet, was exceedingly strong upon reports that a foreign market had been found for large blocks of the stock, and that certain "cadets" of the Field and Dowd families had departed to Europe today as custodians of the same. There was increased activity and generally higher prices in the railroad bond market—strong intimations that people made of money are keeping their weather eyes open for what promises to be profitable investments.

The first vessel of the Union Steamship Company's Line to run in connection with the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad from Newport News sailed from Liverpool today with a full cargo of freight, thirty first-class passengers, and a large party of immigrants. She will, in addition, stop at the Azores and take on 200 Portuguese immigrants, who, it is presumed, will settle along the line of the road. This is rather a new "wrinkle" in the line of immigration.

AMBUSHED AND SHOT.

A Party of Five Young Men Fired upon at the Outskirts of Elgin—One of the Party Fatally Wounded.

ELGIN, Ill., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Last night five young men, Duff Provost, Charles Provost, and Charles Randall, of Elgin, "Goody" Hefen of Chicago, and a fellow named Munsie, giving his home at Cincinnati, repaired to a house of ill-fame located about two miles east of this city, over the Cook County border. They were drunk and very riotous at the house, and got into an altercation with two of the visitors at the place—Jim Stone and Charles Westphal. After a fight in which Westphal was brutally beaten by the others, he, in company with Stone, left the place and came to this city. The others remained at the house until about 7 a. m., at which time they started for home, all more or less intoxicated. They had just reached the outskirts of the city, when they were shot at from the undergrowth bushes at the wayside. The five young men were in a two-seated carriage, and immediately after the shot Duff Provost, seated with two others on the rear seat of the vehicle, fell over on the shoulder of one of his companions, and, with a groan of pain, exclaimed that he was shot. The team, startled at the shot, shied and overturned the carriage, breaking it badly. The wounded man was conveyed to the city and medical attendance summoned. It was found that he was seriously wounded, and the physicians say that he cannot possibly recover. The weapon used was a shotgun loaded with duck-shot and an extra heavy charge. The contents of the gun lodged in Provost's left side, immediately under the shoulder-blade.

Suspicion at once was directed towards Westphal, and he was arrested. He waived examination and was held in bonds of $1,000, which he furnished. He half admitted the shooting on being arrested, but afterwards denied it in toto. He admitted having had a fuss with the fellows, and being whipped by them. The parties can hardly be considered toughs. Some of them make pretensions to respectability, but are wild. Whisky is at the bottom of the affair. The matter has created a decided sensation.

EXPECTS TO BE LYNCHED.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 15.—Henry Mosier, alias Moore, who murdered James Knight and J. H. Wenzell on the prairie, three miles from Cheyenne, last Tuesday night, the object being to secure $53 in the possession of Wenzell, was today arrested at Louisville, this State. He made no resistance, and said he had to die but once. He predicted that he would not live five minutes after reaching Cheyenne, expecting to be lynched. The greatest indignation is manifested, and his prophecy will probably be fulfilled.

What Ought to Have Been Done in the Way of Forming Depots of Supplies.

AT WASHINGTON

THE CREW OF THE PROTEUS UNSKILLFUL AND COWARDLY.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—Commodore English, Acting Secretary of the Navy, has received the following dispatch:

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Sept. 15.—To Commodore English, Acting Secretary of the Navy: To charter another foreign ship with foreign crew for this duty to go north at this late season would simply invite fresh disaster. The Proteus was handled very unskillfully and the crew behaved shamefully at the wreck. The ship must be American manned and officered by the navy and thoroughly equipped. Unless winter quarters can be reached north of Cape Athol the attempt would be useless. This cannot be done. Melville Bay will be impassable by Oct. 1 at latest. The ship cannot winter at Upernavik and cannot sledge north from there.

F. WILDES,
Commander United States steamer Yantic.

GARLINGTON'S SUGGESTIONS.

The following dispatch from Lieut. Garlington was received at the Signal Office today:

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Sept. 15.—Chief Signal Officer United States Army: Stores were not left at Littleton Island because it was not in my program to do so. It was my intention to establish a depot at or near Cape Prescott and to the northward, as recommended by Lieut. Greely, and to fill the gaps caused by the Neptune's failure to get above Cape Sabine. See Greely's letter, Beebe's report, and my instructions. Five hundred and fifty-five rations were left at Upernavik by the Yantic for my party. Part of these met me at a point forty miles north of Tessusak. All have since been returned to the Yantic. The ultimate result of any undertaking to go north at this time is extremely problematical. The chances are against its success, owing to the dark nights now beginning in those regions, making ice navigation extremely critical work. There is no safe winter anchorage on the west shore of Greenland between Disco and Pandora harbor except, perhaps, North Star Bay, the winter quarters of Saunders. However, there is a bare chance, and if my recommendations are approved I am ready and anxious to make the effort. My plan is to buy a suitable sealer, take a crew from volunteers from the crews of the Yantic and Powhattan, now in this harbor, paying them extra compensation, Lieut. J. C. Colwell to command the ship, two Ensigns and one engineer to be taken from those who may volunteer. For the same ship I would also employ a competent ice pilot here. The ship must be under United States laws and subject to military discipline. I believe nothing can be done with foreign civilian officers and crew. In the event of not enough seamen volunteering the remainder to be enlisted here. Commander Wildes will communicate with the Navy Department. If anything is to be done it must be done at once.

E. A. GARLINGTON.

It appears from the above that if supplemental instructions were sent Garlington he never received them. Lieut. Garlington has been advised that the Secretary of War will not authorize the proposed expedition this fall, but will order one next year.

WHAT GARLINGTON OUGHT TO HAVE DONE.

The dispatches received today by the Chief Signal Officer and Acting Secretary of the Navy from Lieut. Garlington, of the Greely relief expedition, and Commander Wildes, of the United States steamship Yantic, have excited here much comment and discussion. The telegram from Lieut. Garlington, it is said, seems to reply to the categorical question: "Why did you not land your stores at Littleton Island or Life-Boat Cave on your way north?" The reply is: "Because it was not in my program to do so. See my instructions." This reply, it is argued, seems to indicate either that Lieut. Garlington never received the so-called supplemental orders to land his stores at Littleton Island on his way north, or if he received such supplemental orders he did not regard them as imperative, and did not suppose they were intended to supersede the earlier instructions, not to leave his stores at Littleton Island on his way north. It seems to be generally admitted here by those who discuss the subject that the landing of the Proteus' stores at the mouth of Smith's Sound before the ship herself encountered the perils of the heavy pack north of Cape Sabine was of the utmost importance.

Prudent Arctic navigators under similar circumstances have always endeavored to secure the safety of their food supply by getting the bulk of it on solid land as soon as possible after reaching their base of operations and before running the extreme risk which is necessarily involved in the attempt to penetrate any part of the great polar pack. The experienced Arctic navigator, Leigh Smith, on his last voyage to Franz Josef Land, two years ago, took the precaution to put a large part of his provisions ashore at the very earliest possible moment so as not to be entirely at the mercy of the ice. The wisdom of this course was demonstrated only a few days later by the crushing and sinking of his ship. If the bulk of the Proteus' stores and the ready-made house which she had on board had been landed in this way on Littleton Island or Cape Sabin as soon as the ship reached either of those points, it would not have been necessary for Lieut. Garlington to seek safety at Upernavik, 800 miles away, and the lives of Lieut. Greely's party would not have been imperiled as they now are by the insufficient supply of provisions at a point where they had reason to expect an abundance.

THE RESPONSIBILITY.

The responsibility for this fatal omission must rest, it is said, either upon the department which planned the campaign or upon the officer to whom was intrusted the execution of it. The department refers to its supplemental orders as evidence that it had foreseen and guarded against such a misfortune as that which befell the Proteus by directing that her stores be landed before she entered Smith's Sound. Lieut. Garlington, on the other hand, seems, it is said, to have had no knowledge of the supplemental orders and to have acted upon his original instructions, which were to land his stores on his retreat after he had tried to get through Smith Sound and had failed. This apparent misunderstanding between Lieut. Garlington and the department as to the most important step of the summer's Arctic campaign will doubtless be cleared up when further information shall have been received from Lieut. Garlington by mail. As the situation now stands Garlington seems to have been acting strictly in accordance with his original instructions, and his telegram today bears, it is said, no evidence of any knowledge of the modification of those instructions by the later supplemental orders.

Some surprise is expressed here today that Lieut. Garlington after the loss of his ship did not wait at Cape Sabine or Littleton Island for the arrival of the Yantic instead of undertaking the long and hazardous journey in open boats to Upernavik. July 23, when the Proteus was crushed, was near the beginning of the best season for Arctic navigation and was the hight of the Arctic summer. The shipwrecked crew would have had to wait for the Yantic, as events proved, only eleven days, and if the latter ship had not been obliged to search for Garlington and his men she might have remained two or three weeks longer at the mouth of Smith's Sound, and have given Lieut. Greely that much more time to reach there if he were on his way in boats.

After the receipt today of the telegrams from Lieut. Garlington and Commander Wildes the Secretary of War had a consultation with the Acting Secretary of the Signal Office, and it was generally decided that the sending out of another expedition this fall was impracticable and would only put more lives in imminent danger.

NO NEW DEVELOPMENTS.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Sept. 15.—The stories of Dr. Pavis' death, a mutiny in the Greely camp, and the murder of the whole party by Indians are merely reports of the Esquimaux, not substantiated and not reliable.

There are no new developments in relation to the Greely expedition.

A RASH ACT.

Suicide of Judge Robert Mayo, of Virginia—The Deed Predicated on Political Troubles.

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—This morning at 3 o'clock Judge Robert Mayo, of Westmoreland, committed suicide on the Baltimore Steam Packet Company's steamer Virginia. He shot himself near Point Lookout at the mouth of the Potomac River. His manners appeared to be so suspicious that a minister warned the Captain to watch him, fearing he intended jumping overboard. It was not known that he had a pistol. The watchman saw him draw the weapon, but before he got near him the unfortunate gentleman had sent the bullet through the skull. He died instantly. Col. Mayo was over 70 years old, and the father of Congressman-elect R. M. Mayo. A report was started that it was the latter who committed suicide. Two sons of Col. Mayo have committed suicide in the last ten years.

Judge Mayo related his trouble to an Episcopal clergyman of Norfolk who came from Baltimore with him. He said when elected Judge he did not agree politically with his sons, prominent Readjusters, and was told politics would not interfere with his duties on the bench, but recently he had been urged to make a removal and appointment which afterwards appeared in his opinion a violation of law. His political situation irritated him, and he said he felt like ending his troubles by blowing out his brains. He was widely connected, and an uncle of Commodore Mayo, U. S. N.

DAKOTA'S CAPITAL.

Text of Judge Edgerton's Decision Ousting the Capital Commissioners.

YANKTON, D. T., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The decision of Judge Edgerton in the quo warranto case against the Capital Commission appointed by the last Legislature was made public this morning, although judgment was pronounced in open court, at which the Judges and officers of the court were present, Aug. 27. After briefly giving the legal history of the case, the judgment of the court closes as follows:

It is, therefore, on motion of said District-Attorney and said attorney for plaintiff, ordered and adjudged that said defendant and each of them be and they are hereby forever ousted and excluded from said office of Commissioners mentioned in said act.

The full text of the judgment is as follows:

TERRITORY OF DAKOTA, SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT—In the District Court in and for Yankton County, Territory of Dakota—In the information of E. G. Smith, District-Attorney of Dakota Territory, plaintiff, vs. Milo Scott, Burleigh F. Spaulding, Charles H. Myers, Alexander McKenzie, George A. Mathews, Alexander Hughes, Henry H. De Long, John P. Belding, and W. D. Thompson, defendants: At a special term of the District Court within and for the County of Yankton, in the Second Judicial District of Dakota Territory, held at the court-house in the City of Yankton the 27th day of August, 1883, present, the Hon. A. J. Edgerton, Presiding Judge, and officers of said court, summons, with copy of complaint, having been duly and personally served on each of the above-named defendants, and said defendants having each duly appeared and served an answer to said complaint, and this cause having been regularly called for trial in its order on the calendar at the July special term of this court, and plaintiff appearing by E. G. Smith, District-Attorney for said Second Judicial District, and G. C. Moody, Bartlett Tripp, and Gamble Brothers, its attorneys, and defendants appearing by William F. Vilas, their attorney, and Alexander Hughes per se and for his co-defendants, and thereupon plaintiff by its said attorneys duly moved for judgment on the pleadings herein, and said defendants also duly moved for judgment on said pleadings, and by consent of said parties in open court both of said motions were thereupon argued together, and both of said motions duly being heard, and the court having listened to the arguments on behalf of the plaintiff by G. C. Moody, Bartlett Tripp, and J. R. Gamble, and said William F. Vilas on behalf of said defendants, and the court being advised in the premises, and having duly considered the same, the court overrules said motion for defendants and grants and allows said motion for the plaintiff.

It is therefore, on motion of said District-Attorney and said attorneys for plaintiff, ordered and adjudged that said defendants each of them be and are hereby forever ousted and excluded from said office of Commissioners mentioned in said act in the complaint described, and from all franchises and privileges named, enumerated, or included therein, and that the plaintiff have and recover of the defendants the sum of —— dollars costs taxed and allowed herein.

Done in open court this 27th day of August, A. D. 1883, by the court.

A. J. EDGERTON, Judge.

Attest: EDW. EDGERTON, Clerk.

Thus ends another chapter of a subject that has caused much excitement, and hard feelings, and severe criticism of all parties concerned, in a measure, for the last six months. While the court declares the law unconstitutional, Bismarck has paid $100,000, and the Capitol Building is under contract and building. Of course an appeal will be taken to the Supreme Court. The defendants have sixty days to make the appeal, but as the Supreme Court sits Oct. 2 the question is whether the argument can be made till the May term. Yankton people are elated, though they have felt all along reasonably sure of a favorable decision from Judge Edgerton. A public meeting was held tonight, when congratulatory speeches were made and resolutions passed expressing satisfaction over the result.

FREE FIGHT IN COURT.

A Missouri Justice and His Jury Knocked Out of Time by Friends of a Defendant, the Verdict of Guilty Having Been Passed.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Warrants were issued today for the arrest of a disorderly family living at Cheltenham, about seven miles from this city, and they, together with a host of relatives, were brought before the very Justice in whose court they had a few days ago knocked out the jury, lawyers, witnesses, and even the Justice in person. One of the good wives of the little village of Cheltenham, Mrs. Habusch, last Thursday swore out a peace warrant and secured the arrest of a neighbor, Mrs. Donovan. The court-room was crowded yesterday with villagers and personal friends of the two females, and the trial continued until evening, when it was plain that the jury would decide against the defendant. Mr. Donovan's ire was up; so was that of the defendant, her brothers, and brother-in-law, and it took but the word "Guilty" from the lips of the foreman to kindle that ire into a perfect blaze of anger. The Justice was knocked out by the wooden leg of Mr. Donovan, which he had unstrapped for use in case of an emergency. The foreman and the remaining eleven of the jury were thrown, some out of the doors, and others out of the nearest window. The aged attorney for the prosecution was menaced with a revolver, and then gently kicked under the table. The ladies involved and interested in the prosecution were treated to a shower of blows from half a dozen cudgels, and were found in an unconscious condition by a force of constables who arrived a few minutes too late. Physicians were sent out from St. Louis late last night to dress the wounds of the injured, and report all of the prosecution's participants badly used up, but none of them fatally injured. The next act of the "tragedy" will be played Monday. The parties arrested were all bailed out before night.

TWO MEN DROWNED.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Sept. 15.—Frank Foster, 21 years of age, and Charles Pray, 24, were drowned last night in the river by the upsetting of their boat. A man named Murphy was rescued in an exhausted condition.

The Strike at the South Chicago Rolling-Mills Ended at Last

Interview with a Delegate to the Late Labor Convention at Cincinnati—Satisfactory Results.

A Call for a National Meeting of Labor Organizations at Philadelphia Jan. 12, 1884.

End of the Strike at the South Chicago Rolling-Mills.

The strike at the South Chicago Rolling-Mills is at an end at last, and work will be resumed Monday morning, 24th inst. As had been arranged at the preliminary conference of owners and workmen Wednesday last, a committee of six workmen representing the employés met President Potter, Superintendent Parkes, and the two foremen of the rail-mill and converting department—Thomas Jewell and Thomas Crowe—at the company's offices in the Metropolitan Block yesterday. The various matters in dispute were fully discussed, with the results already stated.

Superintendent Parkes, in a conversation with a TRIBUNE reporter yesterday afternoon, said that the conference was of a most amicable and satisfactory character. As to the details of the settlement he preferred not to speak—the men were at liberty to disclose them if they cared to. The tonnage basis of wages versus the day or time basis—which had been the main point in dispute—had been, however, settled in accordance with the wishes of the company, and the time system would continue in force as heretofore. The relations in future would, he believed, be most pleasant. The agreement now made was for the remainder of the year.

It is the intention of the company to erect an additional rail-mill at Bay View, Wis., which will give employment to about 600 men, but nothing definite as to plans or date of erection has yet been decided on.

A TRIBUNE reporter visited South Chicago last night to learn the terms of the settlement as understood by the men. The scale of wages was found to be the same as that in force before the strike, and was to continue in force until Dec. 31. It was agreed that in all future differences a Committee of Arbitration, appointed by either party, should have authority to deliver an opinion binding upon either party. The men regarded this as a decisive victory, as heretofore no committee of the men had been recognized. The company agreed to hasten repairs as rapidly as possible, and will start up the mills Sept. 24 if it be possible.

A Returned Delegate from the Cincinnati Labor Convention.

One of the four delegates that represented Chicago at the Cincinnati National Labor Convention has just returned, and expresses himself well pleased with the results of the meeting. There were over 150 delegates present from nearly every State in the Union, but the strongest representation came from the West and East. There was no attempt on the part of the telegraphers to withdraw from the association, and the only action taken in regard to telegraphy was a resolution which was passed asking Congress to advocate postal telegraphy. The salary of the Grand Master Workman was raised from $400 to $800 a year, and the other officers proportionately. The society expended $32,000 last year. The new officers are: Grand Master Workman, T. V. Powderly, Scranton, Pa.; Worthy Foreman, Prof. Coffien, Illinois; Grand Secretary, Fred Turner, Pennsylvania; Secretary of Insurance Board, H. L. McGaw, Pennsylvania; Grand Treasurer, Richard Griffith, Illinois; General Statistician, Mr. Egan, Michigan. Executive Board—McClelland, New Jersey; Campbell, Pennsylvania; Foster, Massachusetts; Band, Michigan. Coöperative Board—Boyer, Kentucky; Bumont, New York; Sharpe, Missouri; Valle, Canada; Holcomb, New Jersey; Turner, Pennsylvania; Murray, Ohio.

National Labor Convention Called.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—The Independent Labor party has appointed a committee to issue a call for a National Convention of labor organizations to be held in Philadelphia Jan. 12, 1884. It also elected James F. Thompson a delegate to the Labor Convention at Rochester.

A BENIGHTED STATE.

Every Public School in Louisiana Closed for Lack of Funds.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—It has taken only six years now of Democratic control in Louisiana to eradicate the public school system from its scheme of Government. In the reign of carpet-baggers and negroes the school-house flourished in every country settlement; today not a public school is open in all Louisiana. The Hon. E. H. Fay, State Superintendent of Public Schools, in explanation of the situation has written a letter, which was furnished to the press today. The letter is addressed to Benjamin P. Edwards, President of the School Board, Oporta, La.:

DEAR SIR: Your favor of the 6th inst. reached me only last night, and I hasten to reply. You say people are constantly inquiring of me why they cannot have public schools, and ask me to state the reason. This I will now do in as few words as possible. First, the General Assembly of 1882 made little or no provision for their support, appropriating only $107,000 all told from July 1, 1882, to July 1, 1883, never before having appropriated less than $300,000 since the public-school system was first established. Out of this amount there was unconstitutionally appropriated $30,000 per annum for two years to three universities, one at Baton Rouge and two in New Orleans. Your Superintendent enjoined this payment, but was non-suited, the Supreme Court holding that he had no right to protect the interests of the public schools, even though he did it at his own personal expense. The apportionment of the State Superintendent, made Feb. 24, 1883, of the funds of 1882, was enjoined by the city School Board of New Orleans because they were not given so much as the parishes were, owing to an error in reporting funds on hand. The June apportionment of 1882 had to be canceled, but New Orleans had succeeded in drawing some 22 cents per capita of children, some $15,000, before the error was reported to the Superintendent's office. True, this overdraft of New Orleans was out of the funds of 1881, and would never be collected to pay the rest of the State 22 cents per capita from the New Orleans funds of 1882, and apportioned to the rest of the State to make up the amount in July, 1882, by New Orleans. New Orleans claims that, notwithstanding the overdraft of the fund of 1881, she is entitled to a pro-rata share of the funds of 1882, hence her injunction restraining the Auditor from issuing warrants on the funds of 1882. The case decided in the court in favor of the State Superintendent was appealed by the attorneys of the New Orleans School Board, returnable in February next. Your Superintendent has proposed that, if they will relieve those funds already appropriated from their injunction, and allow them to be paid out to the State, he will hold from the appropriation sufficient to satisfy their claim if decided a valid one by the Supreme Court in February, 1884, but can get no reply from them. Your Superintendent has exhausted all means in his power to give what little appropriations have been made to the public schools of the State. The effect of this litigation has been to close the doors of every public school-house in the State, and there is no prospect of their opening again until after the State election of April next.

COMPLAINTS OF THE OCEAN MAIL SERVICE.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Great inconvenience was experienced last winter, by commercial men especially, through the irregularity of the ocean mail service between Great Britain and Canada, which fact has been brought to the notice of the Dominion Government that the evil may be remedied this winter. The trips of the Allan Line of steamers which performed this service between Liverpool and Halifax varied from eight days and thirteen hours to fifteen days. The average was ten days and twenty-three hours. The Government is asked to insist on an average speed for each steamer instead of an average for all. This would prevent the employment of slow boats, such as those now on the route.

WIRE-FENCE CUTTERS SHOT.

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—For some time past ranchemen have been greatly annoyed by the malicious cutting of wire-fences around their pastures. The trouble has been so serious that the State Rangers have been called in to protect the pastures. This morning, near Post Oak, one man was killed and two wounded. Butler, the leader of the gang, received twenty shots. They were run upon by the pasture patrol. This is the first instance of stopping the violations. Much excitement prevails over the trouble and the ranchemen have armed themselves and repaired to the scene.

Close of Mme. Modjeska's Brilliant Season in Chicago.

Why Her Acting Is Always Charming as Well as Effective.

THE DRAMA.

Review of the Week.

Modjeska concluded last evening with a performance of "Twelfth Night" her brilliant engagement at the Grand Opera-House. For two weeks she has portrayed before crowded houses such characters as Rosalind, Camille, Mary Stuart, Adrienne, Viola, and Imogen. It is not too much to say that this accomplished actress has justified her reputation and hightened the appreciation with which she is regarded by the Chicago public. Fascinating in every rôle which she essayed, in some she created an impression which will be deep and lasting. She is grace itself on the stage; her motion is poetry. She shows herself an artist particularly in this that, while elaborating every detail of a part, she never mars her work by overdoing it, and where she is most effective she is self-contained, and leaves the impression of reserved power. Her temperament is plastic, susceptible of every touch of emotion; her imagination vivid, but not lurid; her execution never spasmodically thrilling, but harmoniously complete. The glaring colors of violence disfigure no portrait which she draws. She develops a character as gracefully and as naturally as Nature evolves a flower from a bud. In portraying Shakspeare's heroines, while truly revealing the idea, she misses many of the beauties of the verse; but what eye can detect the most delicate lights and shades in the word-pictures of a strange tongue? Shakspeare's master touch is often not in a sentence, not in a line, but in a single word—a single word in which the heart of the idea throbs. But though it may be desired that Modjeska should catch the hidden music of the poet's language, one would not willingly lose the naive charm of her accent. Charm it surely is, as any one who has heard her in Dumas' "Camille" must admit. Her acting in the scene of the sacrifice, where she abandons Armand with hysterical laughter, illustrates her exquisit artistic taste. The passage, as she renders it, is intensely affecting; were it overdone by a hair's-breadth it would be painful. And here is the difference between the real and the ideal. Nature makes hysterics painful to behold, but art reveals the glowing soul of passion without the sting of pain. There is no cruelty, no discord, no harshness in true art. Not suffering itself, but the glory of suffering is what it shows. If one may object to Modjeska in Camille it is that she is self-conscious in love passages demanding self-abandonment. A scruple is unworthy of an artist. The climax of Sara Bernhardt's power was when in the last scene she threw herself upon Armand, like a tempest-driven wave upon a rock, with an inarticulate cry of despair, and love, and death, making one instant of fulfilment an eternity of bliss.

Modjeska played Rosalind in that delicacy of taste which is the inheritance of a lady, but of which Shakspeare's light-hearted heroine is so often robbed. Rosalind was surely the poet's ideal of a charming girl—a girl as enamored of life as a song-bird—but whose blush was like the sunrise. The play is a pastoral poem, not a realistic piece of fiction. It is full of that human sympathy and joy in Nature which once peopled the happy woods with fauns and dryads. Its symplicity and ideality elude the ungentle touch of ordinary artists who overlook the beauties as cattle in green pastures overlook the flowers. Hence the dreamy Jaques, who "can suck melancholy out of a song as a weasel sucks eggs," is such a delightful companion in the library but so tiresome a fellow on the stage. Modjeska gave a refreshingly romantic interpretation of the part of Rosalind, happily uniting joyousness of youth with innocence of heart, and bringing back the golden age when the world was young enough to laugh. From her sportive wit shams flew away like bats from sunshine. What a vindication of human nature that play is! The hand that wrote "As You Like It" is one of those hands which would never hide the brow of womanhood behind the veil of Islam.

"Mary Stuart" was by no means the best of Modjeska's interpretations, but it was a rich artistic treat—a page of history illuminated like the leaf of some old missal.

Maurice Barrymore supported Modjeska ably, and the frankness and freedom of his acting deserve recognition. But he is a careless student; his emphasis in Shakspearean parts is not judicious, and his inflection is annoyingly artificial, making it a mannerism. He should remember that a voice, however resonant, if pitched in one key will grow as monotonous as an instrument of music with one string. But he is a magnetic, pleasing actor, and when he realizes his possibilities will deserve the graceful compliment which Rosalind pays to Orlando:

> Sir, you have wrestled well and overthrown
> More than your enemies.

Margaret Mather, who leaves McVicker's after a three week's engagement—too long an engagement by at least one week—is a premature star, but by no means lustreless. Her genius has the ring of true metal, but it is genius of narrow calibre. The high standard of art which has been fixed by the great ones of the stage, she must reach—it cannot be lowered for her. She may overcome physical deficiencies—for the physical is the superficial, not the essential in art—but she must acquire a wider culture which will quicken her sympathies, refine her taste, and polish her methods. Her imagination must be stimulated, not alone by a close study of her parts, but by the inspiration of poetry, of pictures, of music, of every branch of art in which there is a revelation of high ideals. She must, indeed, learn the meaning of these words of the poet, "Art is long and life is fleeting"—or, rather, she must remember that "art is long" and life still lies before her.

John T. Raymond cannot congratulate himself upon the success of "The Rocket" at Haverly's. The plot is as flimsy as that of Robertson's "School," which it slightly resembles, and the dialog is not half so bright. Whatever enjoyment there may be in the comedy is due entirely to the actor's individuality and eccentric conceptions rather than to the piece itself. The farcical coarseness in the second act was an unpardonable blemish. It is not flattering to the good taste of an audience nor complimentary to the keenness of their sensibilities to amuse them with witticisms too coarse to be repeated, and with humor broad enough for the variety stage.

At the Academy of Music there has been presented a Western play called "Carrots"—the dramatization of a story written by Joaquin Miller for a second-rate New York magazine. That any one should consider one of Miller's stories worth adapting for the stage is something which baffles comprehension. Miller is one of those imitators of Bret Harte, without Bret Harte's delicacy, who have flooded the stage with those coarsely-drawn romances in which the scoundrel is always distinguished by clean linen and the hero in the red shirt is recognized by his bowie-knives, his execrable English, his oaths, and slang. Women are introduced, of course, and they have about as much womanliness in them as mustangs. And the authors of this fragrant school palm off the maudlin sentimentally of desperadoes and bushwhackers as an evidence of the inherent nobility of human nature. Slang is as indispensable to these plays as red shirts and revolvers—slang, which is the smartness of the vulgar, the figurative language of the ignorant, is held up as the admirable diction of a rough-diamond civilization. Lovers of the stage will breathe a sigh of relief when this cowboy literature is relegated to its proper place in yellow-covered novels.

Program of the Week.

McVicker's—Esmeralda.
Haverly's—Enchantment.
Hooley's—Edouin and Sanger's "Sparks."
Grand Opera-House—My Partner.
Academy of Music—Her Second Love.
Olympic—Hyde & Behman's consolidation.
Lyceum—Variety attractions.
South-Side Dime Museum—Curiosities.

Attractions to Come.

The cast of Mrs. Burnett's "Esmeralda," which will be presented at McVicker's this week, will include Benjamin Maginley and Joseph Wheelock, both of whom are favorably known in Chicago. Annie Russell will make her first appearance this season as Esmeralda. The change of scenes will be accomplished in more remarkably quick time than last season. The stage manager of the New York Madison Square Theatre will superintend the presentation, and the original scenery from New York will be used. McCullough will open at McVicker's the 24th inst. with a "revival" of "Virginius."

Maud Granger, supported by Lewis Morrison, will produce a new sensational drama entitled "Her Second Love," by John A. Stevens, at the Academy of Music Monday evening.

The Kiralfy Brothers will produce "Enchantment," one of their gorgeous spectacular plays, at Haverly's this week.

Edouin and Sanger's "Bunch of Keys" will occupy the boards at Hooley's, and a satire entitled "Front" will be presented.

Messrs. Aldrich and Parsloe will produce Bartley Campbell's "My Partner" at the Grand Opera-House.

At the Lyceum, Olympic, and Criterion Theatres variety attractions will be presented, and the South-Side Dime Museum will offer new and interesting curiosities.

Dramatic Gossip.

Janauschek will open her season at Detroit Oct. 1.

Mrs. Langtry opens her next American season at Burlington, Vt., the 27th of October.

Clara Morris, who is expected to appear in Chicago in a few months, will confine repertory to "Camille," "Miss Multon," and "Article 47."

Edwin Booth says that Shakspeare's plays are better known and better appreciated in America than in England. He does not favor spectacular revivals of the legitimate drama.

Salvini will begin his next season at the Salvini Theatre, Florence, in the first week in October, and after playing for a month in Italy will make a tour of Spain with his Italian company.

Henry Irving will open a two weeks' engagement at Haverly's Jan. 7. He is now resting in Holland preparatory to his tour. The Lotus Club, on his arrival, will give him a banquet in New York.

Mr. Isenstein's German dramatic company will appear this evening at McVicker's in a new society drama by L. Von Saville entitled "Der Advocat Seiner Ehre" (The Attorney of His Honor), which has achieved a great success in Berlin and Vienna.

Mr. Terriss, the leading man in Henry Irving's company is likely to make a good impression in America. His real name is William Lewin, and he is a nephew of Grote, the historian. He is said to have a capital voice, with clear, distinct elocution, which captures an audience by its manliness and infectious enthusiasm. He is one of the reigning favorits in London.

John Stetson will bring from England soon Mr. Coghlan and Miss Gerard. Miss Gerard as an actress is credited with the delicate methods of the Comédie Française. When Booth appeared as Hamlet in London her portrayal of Ophelia won the warmest praise. Her personal character has gained for her in England a respect like that in which Mary Anderson is held in America.

Gilbert's refusal to permit Miss Anderson to play "Pygmalion and Galatea" in England is attributed to the fact that her performances of the piece in America were given without the formality of asking his approval. But the paying American patronage of "Patience" and of "Iolanthe" might have consoled Mr. Gilbert for the absence of an international copyright law.

The theatrical profession is indebted to the John B. Jeffery printing-house for a work that is invaluable to them—the John B. Jeffery Guide and Directory. Five editions of this work have already been published and the sixth edition is now out. It is improved and enlarged. Mr. Jeffery devoted months of constant labor to make the book as complete as possible, and he seems to have entirely succeeded. The volume contains a list of all the theatres and halls in every town in the United States and Canada, and gives all other information which theatrical managers require.

MUSIC.

What Is Going On at Home.

The first rehearsal for this season of the Apollo Club will take place tomorrow evening at Apollo Hall.

The rehearsal of the festival chorus takes place next Friday evening at 8 o'clock sharp in Farwell Hall.

Mr. M. L. Bartlett, the conductor of the Mozart Society, will lead the annual convention of the Trumbull Musical Association, which will take place in Mesopotamia, O., this week.

Miss Amy Fay, of this city, has been invited to give "piano conversations" in New Orleans, Minneapolis, Michigan City, Indianapolis, and also before the State Normal School of Music in Ada, O.

Mr. Chris I. Balatka, Prof. Hans Balatka's piano-playing son, announces a grand musical soirée to take place Thursday evening next in Weber Music-Hall. He will be assisted by Mrs. A. McGuire, Mr. Julius Cardes, the Weber Quartet, and the Balatka Quintet Club.

The first of a series of trio soirées, to be given by Mr. Emil Seifer, the violinist, assisted by Mme. Irene Harrath, the pianist, and Mr. Emil Winkler, the violoncellist, will take place Tuesday next at Weber's Music-Hall. The program contains a trio in B flat, op. 15, No. 5, by Mozart; a trio in F major, op. 42, by Niels W. Gade, and Haydn's Hungarian trio in G.

The Duff Standard opera company will open the Chicago opera season next week at the Grand Opera-House. "Lakmé," by Leo Delibes, will be given during the week, an opera which has created the greatest furor in France. The company, which made many friends here in Chicago during last season, has been considerably strengthened, and its season is likely to prove a highly enjoyable one.

Arrangements have been completed for the holding of weekly primary classes of the children's chorus to be formed by Mr. Tomlins for the May festival, as follows: South Side, Monday; West Side, Wednesday; North Side, Friday; down-town, Saturday. With the exception of the latter, which will be held at 11 a. m., all classes will begin at 4 p. m. The places of meeting have not yet been decided on.

Manager Isenstein's German dramatic company, which performs Sunday nights at McVicker's, will shortly produce Weber's "Freischütz," Lortzing's "Waffenschmied," Strauss' "Der Lustige Krieg," and other operas and operettas. Mr. Isenstein claims to possess in his company several excellent singers, especially a fine tenor, and has had a large chorus in training all summer under the direction of Mr. Adolf Rosenbecker.

There was a musical feature connected with the German-Austrian-Sobieski celebration in North-Side Turner-Hall last Wednesday evening—which, by the way, is likely to be repeated for the benefit of a deserving charity next Saturday evening—calling for more than a passing notice. It was the musical setting given by Prof. Hans Balatka to the four magnificent tableaux illustrating the siege of Vienna, the distress of the beleaguered, and the grand victory of the united Christian forces over the Crescent. The tableaux being immovable, it was left to the music to supply the dramatic connection. The first tableau represents the Grand Vizier surrounded by his Generals after a council of war giving directions to begin the siege. The music written for this tableau is entirely original and expressive of the anticipated victory of the Turkish hordes. Its character is unmistakably Turkish. The second tableau, which shows the distress of the beleaguered, the springing of a mine, and an assault by the Turks on the walls of Vienna, is accompanied by an intermezzo founded on the well-known march from Beethoven's "Ruins of Athens." The combination of this joyous battle music with a theme descriptive of a fierce struggle and the change of the joyful tone to one of impotent rage is very effective and its harmonious treatment by Mr. Balatka highly interesting. The third tableau, showing the beleaguered succored in their greatest extremity by the valiant Poles, is accompanied by a strong and effective intermezzo built upon a Polish national air, and the accompaniment to the fourth and last tableau, the thanksgiving after victory, is a happy elaboration of the Ambrosian hymn. Considering that Mr. Balatka had to score his work for an orchestra of only seventeen pieces, he has succeeded in producing very strong musical effects which justify commendatory mention of his efforts.

Musical Notes from Abroad.

Some months ago Mr. Ferdinand Wachtel, the second son of the great tenor, made a successful début as tenor at Kroll's Opera-House in Berlin. He has lately been joined by his older brother August, who has won praise as a baritone.

A very interesting lecture has been given by Mr. Frank I. Sawyer before the College of Organists in London on Mozart's organ works. But few organists have known that Mozart had written fifteen organ-sonatas, which were mentioned in Köchel's "Thematic Catalog of Mozart's Works" as unpublished. Breitkopf and Heartel, of Leipzig, have printed them recently in their complete edition of Mozart's works.

The Chevalier Anton de Koutski, composer of "The Lion's Awakening," and a pianist who lately repeated his European triumphs before Boston audiences, will accompany Miss Emma Thursby on her concert tour between Oct. 1, 1883, and May 1, 1884.

Miss Helen Braga, whose fine voice and high dramatic talent have made her the favorit of opera patrons in Berlin as well as in Vienna, has accepted an offer from Manager Amberg for an American tour. She will probably join the Geistinger troupe early in January.

Remenyi, "The Fiddler," as he delights in calling himself, has just finished a tour through Colorado, where he gave fourteen concerts. He is now going through Kansas, and will be in Atchison Sept. 19. From Kansas he will go into Missouri. It is unnecessary to state that M. Remenyi is doing a good business.

The father of Karl Reinecke, the famous Leipzig composer and Professor of music, died a few days ago in Alsace shortly after having celebrated his 88th birthday. He was an excellent musician and teacher, and to his thorough knowledge of the musical art his son Karl owes much of his success.

A great musical festival will be given in Leeds from Oct. 10 to 13, under the direction of Sir Arthur Sullivan. "The End of the World," a new oratorio by Raff; "Elias" and "Hymn of Praise," by Mendelssohn; "The Crusaders," by Gede; "King David," by Macfarren; and "Stabat Mater," by Rossini, are the principal works to be performed.

The announcement that Herr Neumann, of "Nibelungen Ring" celebrity, has taken proceedings in the German courts against Wagner's heirs for close upon £10,000 has created some stir in Germany. It seems that Wagner sold his French and Italian rights twice over. Herr Neumann made arrangements to produce "Lohengrin" in Paris, but was stopped, and when he went to Milan to produce "The Nibelungen Ring," his properties and scenery were seized by process instituted by the real owner of the copyright. Herr Neumann undoubtedly suffered loss on each occasion, and, as Wagner sold Herr Neumann rights he had previously sold to somebody else, the action for damages is quite intelligible.

The annual festival of the Worcester (Massachusetts) County Musical Association, which will be held in Mechanics' Hall, Worcester, from Monday, Sept. 24, to Friday, Sept. 28, promises to be a notable musical event. Among the works to be performed are Gounod's "St. Cecilia Mass," selections from Handel's "L'Allegro e Il Penseroso," Schubert's symphony in B minor, Berlioz's "La Damnation de Faust," Bruch's "Fair Ellen," selections from Wagner's "Lohengrin," Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony," and Handel's oratorio of "Samson." Among the soloists are Mme. Minnie Hauck, Mme. Amy Sherwin, Miss Hope Glenn, Miss Winant, Mlle. Martinez, Mr. Werrenrath, Mr. Reinmertz, Mr. Whitney, and others, besides the pianist, Chevalier de Koutski. Mr. Carl Zerrahn will be the conductor.

The Bijou Theatre in Boston, under the management of Mr. Hastings, is to be a permanent house for light opera. Its stock company will hold the stage with operetta performances for the entire season with the exception of the six weeks ending Nov. 19, which are to be given up to the Wyndham Comedy company. The stock company will bring out "Virginia," then Stephens and Solomon's "White Sergeant," to be followed by an English version of "Die Fledermaus" (The Bat), by Strauss; Adamowski's opera, "A Regiment of One," and Laraller and Sage's "T. L. Q.; or, Settled at Last." The stock company will include among its members James Edmonson, Clara Poole, Rose Stella, Blanche Corelli, Elma Delaro, W. H. Fessenden, Signor Brocolini, and Gus Kammeriee. Mr. John I. Braham will be the conductor. Aside from the French opera company in New Orleans this will be the only operatic stock company in the United States.

MOSTEL'S MISERY.

A Romantic Story of Seven Years of Suffering.

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 14.—Morris Mostel, a travel-worn and melancholy German, reached here today in search of his wife. He relates the following sad story: Seven years ago he arrived in New Orleans from his native land. Shortly after his arrival he was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Weber. The day following this event he was drugged, robbed, and carried aboard a German vessel bound for Cardiff, England. The vessel was eleven months reaching that port. He went to the German Consul at Cardiff. He had never taken out naturalization papers. There the Consul sent for the Captain of the vessel and compelled him to deliver Mostel to the German authorities. He was pressed into the army at Berlin to serve three years and nine months. At the expiration of three years and six months he deserted and returned to New Orleans to find that his bride had left the city soon after his mysterious disappearance, and gone no one knew whither. He started out to search for her. After wandering over the greater part of the United States and Canada and writing hundreds of letters, while in San Antonia Wednesday he received a letter from her at Dallas. She told him that she had given him up for lost and had married Edward Kronan, but that she would leave Kronan and live with him. He took the next train and arrived today. He met with another disappointment on reaching here, for Kronan a few days ago removed to Abilene. The indefatigable Mostel took the train for Abilene tonight, and it is expected that there will be a scene in Kronan's house when he reaches his destination.

YOUNG VAGRANTS.

Two Brothers Run Away from Home and Build a Hut on a Common, Where They Are Found by the Police.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 15.—August Peckson, aged 17, and Tauscha Peckson, aged 13, two brothers, were arrested by the police yesterday morning on complaint of their mother for vagrancy. They had been in the habit of running away from their home, No. 185 Humboldt avenue, and sleeping at night in a hut on a common on Eighteenth street, which they had erected with timber gathered by them. They made their living by stealing what they could lay their hands on and by committing depredations on freight cars. The mother, who has had a great deal of trouble with her wayward sons, laid the case before Roundsman Culver, who has charge of the juvenile criminal department of police work, and he discovered their hiding-place. The hut was found to be comfortably arranged, but the culprits were missing. An officer was detailed to keep watch of the hut and at 2 o'clock yesterday morning found the boys sleeping in it. They were locked up, and a complaint for vagrancy was made against them. The younger of the two, who was enticed away from home by his elder brother, was given a lecture by Justice Miner, who said he would give him another chance, and turned him over to his mother, who agreed to endeavor to reform him. The older one is a hardened youthful offender, and has served several terms in the House of Correction. He told Roundsman Culver that he did not care whether he was sent back to prison or not; only he did not like to go there so early in the season, as he knew he would spend the winter there. He was committed for trial.

A SUIT FOR LIBEL.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 15.—Counsel for Mrs. Regina Haas and her three daughters entered proceedings in libel today against the Evening News Company, with damages fixed at $10,000. The prosecution grows out of articles published in the newspaper stated relative to the incarceration of Frederick Haas, aged 70 years, in the Norristown Asylum for the Insane. The complainants allege the articles in question stated that the wife and three daughters formed a conspiracy to get rid of Haas by having him placed in the Norristown institution. Haas was taken to the Norristown Asylum the 31st of last month by an order of court based upon the certificates of two physicians. After one week's incarceration he was released by Dr. Chase, the Superintendent, who pronounced him sane.

ILLINOIS SUPREME COURT.

OTTAWA, Ill., Sept. 15.—Yesterday afternoon the court heard very interesting arguments in cases 115 and 116.

This morning there were no announcements.

MOTIONS.

44. Rosenthal, Pub. Admr., vs. Prussing, admr.; appellee asked leave to file briefs instanter, and Pence, for appellant, asked for ten days to reply. As this is a case of public importance the court took the motions.

117. Kadish vs. Bullen; argued orally by Woodbridge. This is a case involving the question of options in the Board of Trade. The defendant having won in the court below, it has been brought here to settle if possible whether a Board of Trade contract comes under the head of gambling.

Two choice corners, 180x100 feet, corner of Thirty-first street and Vernon avenue, and 96x164, corner of Vernon avenue and Thirty-third street, will be sold at auction Monday, 3:30 p. m., on the ground by Layton, Thayer & Co.

AMERICAN SOCIETY.

Unpropitious Weather at the Eastern Resorts Sends Crowds Back to New York.

The Reception of Lord Coleridge at Newport—A Long List of Approaching Weddings.

Marriages and Marriage Anniversaries in Chicago—The Week's Record of Social Events.

Eastern People.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—[Special.]—So unpropitious was the weather during the early part of last week that gay people in the country were almost persuaded to flee in a flock to the city and leave the country to the frosts, the rain, and the gales. Not a few did come, and windows are being opened in the city mansions and the glitter of carriages increases in the up-town avenues.

The arrival and reception of Lord Coleridge at Newport, the coming of Lord and Lady Rosebery, the round of pleasant gatherings at Lenox, and the Baltimore Oriole—which had its feathers sadly bedraggled by the severe storm—have been the features of the social week. The people at Lenox appear to have got the most enjoyment out of the seven days in spite of the rain clouds. Beginning with Thursday there was the tennis match at Mrs. Henry Chauncey's in the morning, and Mrs. Burton N. Harrison's reception in the afternoon, at which Mrs. James Brown Potter and Mrs. Cary assisted the hostess, and music and recitations by the Misses Leavitt and Mrs. Potter were enjoyed. Then came the high tea for young people at Mrs. Goodman's, and the dinner parties at Mrs. Henri Braem's and Mrs. Lanier's. Thursday was also a sample, when the beautiful home of Mrs. Robinson, of Boston, and also Mrs. Frank White's cottage saw groups of ladies at luncheon-parties. Mrs. Lanier's 5 o'clock tea was also crowded. Friday, however, brought the pleasantest gathering at Mrs. Harrison's tableaux. People came from Pittsfield and Stockbridge to listen to the annual musical party of the Lenox Club. It was a brilliant audience, and it greatly encouraged those who took part—Mrs. Schermerhorn, Mrs. John Kane, Miss Leavitt, Mrs. White, Miss Wolgueros (daughter of the Portuguese Minister), Messrs. Bowditch, Schlesinger, and others. Thence people drove to tea at Mrs. Edwin Parsons' and Mrs. Charles Brown's, and rallied again at Sedgwick Hall in the evening for the Second Assembly ball, at which the display of fair faces and handsome dresses was remarkable. The wedding of Harry Shaw, of Boston, and Miss Grace Rathbone, of Albany, will take place on the 20th, and it and Mrs. Harrison's play are awaited with eagerness. The town is full of people, and all the cottages have guests, so that Lenox is in its autumn glory.

A good many people appear to be yet among the Green Mountains, the Equinox House at Manchester having among its guests A. P. Puillard, G. E. Tainter, Gen. Abner Doubleday, Mrs. W. E. Dodge, Miss Van Rensselaer, A. P. Stokes, and Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Tainter.

Lord Chief-Justice Coleridge has been entertained at Newport with proper and deserved cordiality. Rain could not keep away the many who wished to meet him at the reception Thursday. A dinner was given to him by Mrs. J. V. L. Pungh Wednesday, and he has otherwise been the recipient of Newport hospitality.

The week at Newport closed with an incident which gave much pleasure—the reception of Miss Wolfe at her new villa on Ochre Point. The beautiful house and grounds, perhaps the finest in Newport, were admired by a large company, who lingered in and around it during the afternoon and seemed loath to leave such luxury.

One by one the summer residents are leaving Newport, among them Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, who has gone to Oakdale, on Long Island, and Mrs. William Astor, who has gone to her country house on the Hudson. Still there is much life in the place, and when the cottages have a dull week they try to run an election though they are on the whole poor politicians.

Next week there are to be theatricals at the Casino under Mrs. Hunt's management, the money to go to the town churches. Then should the President come the season by the sea will take a new lease of life.

The social tide at Far Rockaway is rising again, now that the hunters have returned from Newport and elsewhere. The first german was given at the Kennel's Club Friday evening. The attendance was not very large, but the dancing was spirited, and the number of tickets sold being largely in excess of the number present, the proceeds for the benefit of the club and its polo grounds were handsome.

One of Rockaway's hunters, Pierre La Montague, is said to be about to take the hurdle of matrimony, his engagement to Miss Kate Patterson, of Baltimore, being announced. Other engagements which have been announced are those of Isaac Lawrence and Miss Lee Guyun and J. Morgan Wing and Miss Josephine Ireland. A notable engagement in Philadelphia is that of Charles Stewart and Miss Mary Drexel. The reported engagement of Mr. Arthur Mason Jones to Miss Waldo is denied by the friends of the parties. The autumn weddings are begun, that of J. Joseph Alexander, of this city, and Miss Nathalie Edsall, of Locust Valley, S. I., having taken place last Tuesday at Clifton, L. I. It was a quiet ceremony, with only a few relatives and friends present. Other quiet weddings have taken place, among them that of Miss Ella Tucker and A. H. Dayton.

Among recent entertainments in the vicinity of New York there was a tea at Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan's West Point villa, where a large company was gathered. Mr. and Mrs. William Jay were recently the guests of the Duke of Beaufort at Badminton. Miss Oelrichs was with them.

The incoming-steamer lists have been large this week, and have included the names of Mr. and Mrs. W. Butler Duncan, Miss Butler Duncan, Isaac Bill, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Dinsmore, the Rev. Mr. Rainsford, Andrew D. White, Robert Collyer, and other well-known people.

Chicago.

There has been a notable absence during the last week of other social occurrences than marriages and marriage anniversaries. Tuesday evening Mr. R. Gordon Ellis was married to Miss Rose Groverman. The ceremony occurred at Grace Episcopal Church, the Rev. Clinton Locke, D. D., officiating. Mrs. Mary Groverman attended the bride, and Messrs. Col. Wheeler, F. W. Dummer, R. C. Clark, and J. F. Titus were the ushers. Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Ellis repaired at once to their future home at Englewood. Mr. M. A. Loring, of the Clifton House, was married in New York Tuesday evening to Mrs. Mattie A. Balch, of that city. After a sojourn at the coast Mr. and Mrs. Loring will settle in Chicago. Col. and Mrs. Alexander F. Stevenson, No. 378 La Salle avenue, Tuesday evening entertained a company of friends in honor of Miss Nora Perry, of Boston. Music and supper enhanced the pleasures of the evening.

Wednesday evening at St. James' Episcopal Church Mr. Frank H. Case, of Utica, N. Y., was married to Miss Josephine Maude Buell, daughter of Seth Buell, Denver Colo. The bride was supported by the Misses Ida M. Shufeldt and Minnie Clybourn; Messrs. Dr. Tabor and Lieut. J. Shufeldt, U. S. A., attended the groom. The ceremony was followed by a reception at the residence of Mrs. W. T. Shufeldt, No. 200 Cass street, after which Mr. and Mrs. Case left for an extended Eastern tour. Their future residence will be Galesburg, Ill. At the residence of Charles E. Piper, No. 3443 Paulina street, Wednesday evening, occurred the marriage of the Rev. T. M. Findley, President of the Southern Dakota Presbyterian College, Pierre, Dakota, to Miss Lou M. Gregory, late of the Simpson College, Indianola, Iowa. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. S. J. McPherson, of the Second Presbyterian Church of this city. The presents were numerous and costly. After a brief tour Prof. and Mrs. Findley will arrive at Pierre in time for the ensuing collegiate year. Wednesday evening Miss Otis, of Prairie avenue, gave a riding-party in honor of Mr. Meldrum, of Louisville. After driving through Lincoln Park the company repaired to the residence of Miss Otis, where supper, music, and dancing were contributed to the evening's entertainment.

At their residence, No. 693 North Clark street, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Linn Wednesday evening entertained a company of friends, the occasion being the fifth anniversary of their marriage. The host and hostess were the recipients of many costly and appropriate presents.

Thursday evening Mr. Holbert G. Brooks and Emma J., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Hinchman, were united in marriage. The ceremony occurred at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 149 South Morgan street, the Rev. W. S. Crow officiating. Owing to the illness of the bride's father the affair was quiet. Dr. William J. Maynard, of this city, was married Thursday last to Miss Nettie Hadley, of Albany, N. Y. The event was celebrated at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Edgar Cottrell, No. 172 State street, Albany. Dr. and Mrs. Maynard will visit Saratoga and the White Mountains, returning to Chicago the latter part of September, when they will be at home to friends at No. 435 West Van Buren street. Thursday evening, at Grace Episcopal Church, the Rev. Clinton Locke, D. D., united in marriage Mr. Isaac E. Wade, of Pittsburg, Pa., and Mrs. Florence Kingsworth Redington, of this city. Following the ceremony, which was witnessed only by the intimate friends of the contracting parties, Mr. and Mrs. Wade left for the East. Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Bigelow, No. 741 North Park avenue, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of their marriage. The presents were appropriate to the occasion.

Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Wheeler, No. 462 Wabash avenue, celebrated their golden wedding by entertaining their friends. Mr. Wheeler was united in marriage in New York City Sept. 14, 1833, to Miss Julia Smith, the Rev. Eli Wheeler officiating. Among the guests were the five sons of Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler and their families. At 6 o'clock supper was served, followed by toasts and congratulations to the bride and groom of half a century.

The marriage of Dr. W. H. D. Lewis, Hyde Park, to Miss Annie Gossage Hempstead will take place Monday, Sept. 17.

Mr. and Mrs. Hempstead Washburne will hold their receptions Thursdays, the 20th and 27th of September, at No. 73 Maple street. Cards are also out for the marriage of Miss Hattie J. Richardson and Mr. Henry F. Harvey, and Miss Evangeline White and Mr. John B. Adams.

ART AND ARTISTS.

The Pope Collection in Gallery "C" at the Exposition.

One of the main attractions of Gallery "C" at the Exposition is a collection of thirty paintings belonging to Mr. N. Q. Pope of this city. With few exceptions the canvases are quite small, but nearly all bear the signature of a modern master. In the truest art sense the most of the paintings do not possess the value attributed to them; yet all have an intrinsic worth for their display of technique and color. In few of them is there any indication of motif, of that spirituality which is always the companion of creation, and without which there can be no creation. As a whole, they must be regarded as clever examples of the genre school, free from inspiration, but marvels of mechanical excellence. "The Charge of the Gauls" (190), by Luminais, seems to be the original sketch of a portion of a battle picture, and is a very vigorous study of a couple of barbarian cavalrymen. In composition and quality, though not in quantity, of color it is suggestive of the manner of Salvator Rosa. "The Council of War" (187), by Adolph Schreyer, is one of those Arab cavalry pictures with which the flaneurs of the art galleries have of late years become very familiar through the means of engravings and photogravures. Correct drawing, an artistic handling of draperies, clever composition, and a good eye for dramatic effect are the distinguishing features of Schreyer's work, which may be summed up as the acme of imitation, but which certainly can never lay claims to inspiration. His horses have perfect anatomical proportions, stand, walk, or gallop, but they have no individuality of character. They are all of one type—an appeal to the feeling of the beautiful. "The Orphan Chick" (188) by Mary Smith (deceased) is an excellent specimen of almost microscopic detail. It is so highly finished that a magnifying glass only brings out what the average vision fails to discover.

In "Preparing for School" (191), by F. C. Sierig, is exhibited a love for children and a simplicity of life. The figures are drawn with grace and a certain freedom, which is full of expression, and the gray tones are carefully handled. The scene being a cottage interior, with the blinds closed, affords an excellent opportunity for differentiating the quality of shadow, which the artist has improved with gratifying results. "The Lost Kid" (192), by J. G. Brown, represents a newsboy holding up a yellow kid-glove, which he has picked up on the street. Pleasing in color and with a little more force in handling than is usually observed in his work, the picture is barren of invention, and for its sentiment is dependent on its title. "Mischief-Makers" (194), by Portirlje, is a genre of some pretensions. The scene is a village barroom. An old gentleman has fallen asleep in a chair, and the loungers proceed to have a little fun at his expense. The ringleader tickles the old man's ear. The others shake their sides with merriment. The figures are well drawn, the color is good, but the composition loses its force by want of compactness. The figures are too much scattered. Meissonier is represented by a very small canvas, "The Departure" (204). It is simply a cavalier walking down stairs. It shows the artist's wonderful talent for drawing. There is not a wrinkle of the draperies missing, and the effect is one of photographic completeness. Of a similar character is the "Reverie at an Inn" (205) by Hermann. Beautifully natural is Jacque's picture of country life—"The Shepherdess and Her Flock at the Pond" (207). Sheep, girl, and landscape, form a picture that the spectator will carry in his mind for days. It is a poem transcribed in color. Munkacsy is represented by a single figure—"Accepting the Challenge" (208). It is the original study of one of the figures in the "Wrestlers," which he painted a number of years ago. The athlete is vigorously painted, but the drapery lacks character, and the parallel folds in the fall of the skirt are rather inartistic. Rosa Bonheur is represented by the study of a stag roaming through the forest at Fontainbleau (209). It is rather sketchy in handling, and gives no idea whatever of the artist's powers. "A Hunter's Yarns" (211), by David Col, is a pleasing little genre. The self-sufficiency of the hunter as he relates his surprising adventures and the half-concealed incredulity of the listener are well expressed. A clever study of still life is the "Consolation" (212) of W. M. Harnett. A pipe, glass of beer, and newspaper tell the story with sufficient directness. "The Zenana of the Sultan" (213), by Roybet, is simply a study of color. The technique throughout is very good, but the composition tells no story. "Soldiers and Sweethearts" (214), by Fichel—a scene at a country inn in France a century and a half ago—is a drapery study, to which a little action has been given so as to elevate the picture above a "still life." The drawing is good, the draperies nicely handled, and the general effect rather pleasing. Vibert, par excellence the painter of cardinal red, is represented by a very small picture showing a red-hatted dignitary of the church bending over a small fire. He, like Meissonier, draws with wonderful fidelity, and for this techinal quality only has the picture a positive value.

"Austrian Prisoners Forced to Work" (199), by Horace Vernet, is the transcription of a frequent scene in France during the Napoleonic wars. An Austrian soldier, slightly wounded in one hand, is compelled to labor in the field. He walks by the side of a yoke of oxen, directing their steps so that the plowman behind can make a straight furrow. The soldier has evidently been used to the life of a peasant, and his soul revolts at being obliged to work in the field. The plowman, who is without doubt the master of the soil, is a hard taskmaster, and, with anger depicted all over his face, threatens the guard-house as a punishment for the unwillingness to labor. The picture is full of expression, and the story is pathetically told. The drawing is vigorous, the figures are well painted, and the central action is reënforced by somewhat similar scenes in the background.

FIGHTING FOR LIFE-INSURANCE.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The famous Wackerle case is about to be reopened again. The petition for a rehearing was filed in the office of the United States Circuit Clerk on behalf of the Mutual Life-Insurance Company today, and an effort will be made to secure a reversal of the recent decision giving Mrs. Wackerle $6,200. The story of Mrs. Wackerle's fight for the insurance on her husband's life excited interest everywhere, as the claim was made that the husband was still living, and that the body passed off as Mr. Wackerle's was that of another man.

The painting of Niagara Falls, on exhibition at the Stevens Art Gallery, 24 and 26 Adams street, is attracting a great deal of attention, and large numbers visit it daily. It is a great creation and should be seen by admirers of art.

ONLY ONCE.

"There Was but Once a Dog's Fair at Buda."

The Quaint Origin of a Familiar Hungarian Proverb.

Remenyi's Story of the Shepherd, the Miser, and the King.

Written for The Chicago Tribune by Edouard Remenyi.

"There was but once a dog's fair at Buda." The originator of this proverb, King Mathias Corvinus, was the great monarch of Hungary. He was a genius, and Hungary's mightiest monarch, and reigned in the fifteenth century. He was young when he died, and in spite of his youth the people exclaimed at his departure: "King Mathias dead—justice is dead." From this one saying of the people we can judge the King. In fact, hundreds of proverbs originated directly with him. Even now, when we Hungarians want to say that something very good has happened, and is not likely to happen again, we use this saying, which became a proverb: "There was but once a dog's fair at Buda." My duty as a narrator is to tell how it originated. It is quite a story, and, if the kind reader peruses these lines with the same pleasure that I take in writing them, we will be even.

ORIGIN OF THE PROVERB.

At the time of our just and great King Mathias lived a poor and very good shepherd in the southern part of Hungary. Good as he was, his landlord was just as wicked, and, above all, a great miser. The shepherd fulfilled his duties well. The flocks were always cared for, and all the landlord had to do was to find his sheep multiplied and in the very best order. All the goodness, however, was on the side of the shepherd; all the wickedness on the side of the landlord. The wicked rich man never acknowledged any service. He took everything and gave nothing.

Such a state of things can last, but not forever. Even the shepherd had enough of it. So the poor fellow studied for a good while how he might ameliorate his wretched situation. After thinking many days upon his sad condition, suddenly a happy idea struck him. He heard of the young King's goodheartedness and justice, and he heard also that the poorest man could go to him and tell him his grief, and, if it were in the King's power, he surely would find some means of doing justice. After many days of sorrow he went to his landlord, counted the sheep, which were found in good shape, and told him that his intention was to leave him and to look for another situation. All he had to say was that he hoped the landlord might find another faithful shepherd just as patient and submissive as he. The landlord did not even thank him.

The shepherd went his way, followed by his five dogs. He started towards the Capital of Hungary, where the King lived, towards Buda. The journey lasted many days, but finally he arrived. The poor fellow was tired and lay down in a ditch, surrounded by his dogs, and fell asleep. How long his sleep lasted we do not know, but we do know that he was awakened by a very handsome young man in whose eyes goodness beamed, and who apostrophized him as follows:

THE KING AND THE SHEPHERD.

"My dear shepherd friend, what are you doing here in the ditch with your five dogs around you? You must be tired to find no better resting-place than this."

"O, yes, I am tired, and I have come a long way," was the shepherd's reply.

"Where do you come from?" asked the young man.

"From the southern part of Hungary, and I have walked all the way. Now you can well understand how tired I am; but what care I? I am young and I come to tell the King my grief. I know he will give me good advice and tell me how to redress the injustice done me."

"Well, my dear friend," replied the young man, "I am a special friend of the King's, and you might as well tell me your grief, and you may rest assured I will lay the matter before him. He is still young, but he knows what he is about."

The shepherd did not quite see why he should confide his griefs to another, knowing well that everybody was admitted into the presence of the King, no matter who he was. So he simply said: "No, it is useless. I will tell all to my King himself, but I thank you all the same for your kindness."

"Do as you like; but I can assure you, my dear friend," replied the young man, "that it would greatly forward your interests if you would tell me at once all your sorrows, as the King has a great deal to do, and has to listen to many grievances; and I, as his friend, make it a special duty to tell him all such matters which, by chance or otherwise, come to my knowledge from different sources. So the King knows many matters beforehand."

"Well, then, I will tell you all, and frankly." The shepherd began his story.

THE SHEPHERD'S STORY.

"You see, my dear sir, that I am even younger than you are, but youth does not exclude the sense of duty, and, although only a simple shepherd, I had charge of a large flock of sheep belonging to a rich landlord. This selfish, miserly landlord cares for nobody and for nothing but for himself and his own wealth. Always faithfully doing my duty, I never had any reward, and my life was wasted on an unworthy and ungrateful being. Hearing how wise and just our young King is, and that he admits his humblest subject into his august presence, in a happy moment I made up my mind to lay my troubles at his feet, and so I have come all the way to Buda, hoping to see him."

"Yes, my dear friend, you shall see him," said the young man. "Proceed with your tale."

"It is a simple one," said the shepherd. "My honesty and my five dogs are all I have in the world, so I hope the King will give me to a kind and good landlord, to whom I will be faithful indeed. I have nothing more to say. That is all."

"You say," my friend," answered the young man, "that is all; but this all is your all. Depend upon it, you shall have help, and, in the meantime, until this evening, when I shall see the King, I propose to buy your five dogs."

"Then spake the shepherd: "They are worth nothing to you, my good sir, but I don't mind parting with them, being very poor."

THE REWARD.

Thereupon the young man took from his pocket a purse full of gold and handed it to the shepherd. "There," he said, "take that. The dogs belong to me, and, as I told you, I am a special friend of the King's. Bring those dogs to the King's palace tomorrow morning, and orders will be given to all the guards not only to admit you to the interior of the palace, but to the very throne itself. Good night to you."

"God bless you."

I leave it to the reader to imagine our shepherd's delight.

Next morning he went up to the King's palace, followed by his five faithful dogs. Arriving at the gate, he was immediately shown to the throne-room. The doors were thrown open and he found himself in the throne-hall. Bewildered and blinded by the magnificence and gorgeousness before him, he saw neither the brilliant body-guard nor the King upon his throne. He gazed about for his friend of yesterday, who was nowhere to be seen. At last, scarcely believing his eyes, he recognized in the King his friend of the previous evening. His Majesty, King Mathias Corvinus, benignly beckoned to the shepherd to approach. He obeyed tremblingly, and fell on his knees, remembering how familiarly he had treated the King. His Majesty from his throne, with his usual simplicity, spake thus:

"I told you last evening that I would tell the King your story. You see I have done as I promised. Now return in peace. Take your faithful dogs. I do not need them. If thrifty and industrious, the money I gave you is enough to insure your fortune. Your truthfulness served you yesterday. Let it ever be your strength. Tell all that King Mathias has but one aim—to be just to all. Farewell."

The shepherd shed grateful tears and was dumb. Returning home, a happy man, he spoke of nothing but the young King's justice and generosity.

THE MISER BARRED OUT.

And, of course, with all the world, our miserly landlord heard of the shepherd's good luck. "Why should not I do as well?" he soliloquized; and, disguised as a shepherd, with three times as many dogs, to Buda went he. The ditch was there, the old miser laid himself therein, the fifteen lean curs all around, and, to complete the picture, he feigned sleep. Peeping from the corner of his eye, he watched for the young man. By chance, a handsome, lordly man approached. The fifteen famished curs stared at the newcomer, hoping for some food, and knowing only too well not to look to their master for anything to eat. The lordly stranger stopped and instinctively smelt a rat; still, he stopped and inquired after the old man's purpose. The miser repeated the shepherd's story word for word.

The King—for it was he—listened attentively, but with an ironical smile in the corner of his eye, as if saying, "Go on, old man, you certainly will not fool me," patiently waited till the end of the story. When the old man uttered the last word of his made-up tale the young man retorted with his usual simplicity, thus:

"Go. Return in peace. Say to all whom it may concern that you told King Mathias your story, which is only a story, and that King Mathias lets it be known to you and to all Hungary, that 'There was but once a dog's fair at Buda.'"

The King went his way, laughing heartily, and here my story ends. Are you pleased?

EDOUARD REMENYI.

A HARMLESS DUEL.

Policeman Elliott and Private Watchman Hallinan, of Louisville, Exchange Shots Without Effect.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 15.—Robert Hallinan, of 1524 West Chestnut street, employed as a private watchman, and proprietor of a shooting-gallery at Hugh Burne's place on Sixth street, opposit the Exposition, and Policeman Thomas Elliott exchanged five harmless shots in front of Hugh Burne's saloon on Sixth street at 5 p. m. yesterday. It seems that a dog had bitten a small boy, and that the owner of the dog had been pointed out to Hallinan, who gave chase and tried to capture the boy with the dog, but did not succeed. When he came back he remarked jocularly that he ought to have fired upon the boy. Elliott heard the words and said: "You wouldn't shoot a boy for a dog, would you?" Rough words followed, and Hallinan invited Elliott to pull off his uniform and step into the yard and fight it out. Somebody stopped the dispute at this moment and Hallinan walked back into the saloon. In a few minutes Elliott accosted Policeman Montgomery and told him to tell Hallinan that he could whip the s— of a b—, and if he wanted a fight to come out. Hallinan heard the remark and went to the front door. He had a pistol in his hand, and fired twice upon his enemy, both times taking aim, but missing his mark. Elliott fired three return shots before the police arrested him. None of his shots took effect. This is the version of the affair as given by Hallinan and eye-witnesses. Both men were taken to the Central Police Station, and a charge of shooting without wounding registered for them to answer.

A PASTOR'S FALL.

Dismissal of the Rev. Mr. Stern from the Pulpit of the German Baptist Church at Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 15.—The German Baptist Church on Campbell street, near Broadway, is minus a pastor. Until last Monday the Rev. A. Stern filled the pulpit, but upon that day the congregation held a meeting and discharged him. The reverend gentleman was accused for having in his house for three nights during the absence of his wife a lady who should not have been there. It is said that he did not deny the charge, nor did he admit it; he simply said, "Wait and we shall see." Mr. John Krazeise, proprietor of a millinery establishment at No. 502 East Market street, and Mr. J. T. Berghard, a dry goods merchant at the corner of Brook and Market, were members of the congregation until recently, when they withdrew on account of the pastor's alleged ungodliness. Others of the congregation were also highly incensed, but it seems that the exposé of the pastor was the work of the Rev. Mr. Pfeiffer, of Rochester, N. Y. This gentleman, it is said, was engaged in marriage to the lady who is implicated. When Mr. Pfeiffer was advised of the alleged liaison he effected the institution of the investigation, which resulted in the fall of his reverend rival.

FOWLER'S PANTHER-SKIN.

The Thirteen Coincidences That Endear It to the Thirteen Club.

[New York Sun.]—The Thirteen Club has many precious relics in its rooms at Capt. Fowler's Knickerbocker Cottage, but its most precious relic is a panther-skin, which the Captain shows with much pride. Yesterday the Captain gazed fondly into the glass eyes, stroked the fur lovingly, and said:

"Sept. 13, 1870, I was hunting on the Mamakating Barrens, up in Sullivan County. I wasn't looking for panthers, not by a long shot. Deer was what had enticed me out there, and I was in shape not to raise any objections to a bear if one should come my way. One of my barrels was loaded with thirteen buckshot. Ever been up on the Mamakating Barrens? No? Well, they're pretty well up, being, by actual measurement, 1,313 feet above tide.

"I'd been tramping over the Barrens this particular day, and hadn't seen anything that would indicate that there had ever been even as much as a chipmunk prowling around there, when suddenly I heard a big noise off to my right. I turned and looked, and there was this panther tearing straight for me. I just up with my gun and whanged away with my thirteen buckshot. The panther gave a yell that made me turn pale, but he stopped, and stopped for good. I always step just three feet when I walk—always. I never knew it to vary an inch. I walked toward the dead panther. I remembered afterward that I took just four of my steps and not quite the length of my foot over to where the panther lay—thirteen feet. My foot is just thirteen inches long. Queer, eh? Well, of course I was a little upset by my adventure, but pretty soon I began to haul my big game out to the road. It was a tough pull, but finally I got him off the Barrens. At the place where I struck the road there was a small house. I managed to get a horse and wagon there to carry me and my game in, as my rig wouldn't be along till toward night. After we had loaded the panther in the wagon I asked the boy who was to drive me in how far it was to Wurtsboro.

"'Plumb thirteen miles, and we've got a hill for every mile,' said he.

"We got to Wurtsboro, and when I looked at my watch I found that we had been thirteen minutes over three hours coming in. I began to find fault with the boy for taking so long. 'Well,' said he, 'that's a tough road, and I think I've done first-rate, bein's as this horse was thirteen years on the canal before we got him, and that was thirteen years ago this month, just the time I was born.'

"Of course the panther and myself created a big excitement, but it wasn't until I counted the panther's teeth, and found there were only thirteen left, and then found he measured just thirteen feet from tip to tip, that I began to think about the singular thirteen business connected with the killing of this animal. Let's see—13th of September, 1,313 feet above tide, 13 buckshot, panther with 13 teeth and 13 feet long, dropped dead with 13 buckshot in it 13 feet from me, 13 miles to Wurtsboro, 13 hills on the road, boy 13 years old driving horse that had been 13 years on the canal, and 13 years with the boy's family. If you don't call these singular coincidences I don't know where you going to get 'em. And——"

The Captain suddenly stopped talking. An expression of concentrated awe appeared in his face. Then he struck his fist on the sideboard and said:

"Why, holy smoke! Sept. 13, 1870! That's just thirteen years ago next meeting day of this club! Gentlemen, come!"

There were thirteen bulging-based corks on the sideboard an hour later when the visitors adjourned.

POPULATION OF GERMANY.

There has been a remarkable diminution in the population of Germany of late, the number having fallen between Sept. 1, 1880, and June 6, 1882, from 45,234,061 to 45,213,907. This decrease, however, is spread over the country in an unequal manner—there being in some parts of Prussia, such as Westphalia, Brandenburg, and Berlin, a slight increase to the amount of 8,749 inhabitants; while, on the other hand, Posen has lost 37,780, East Prussia 31,617, and Pomerania 22,232. Bavaria, which in 1880 possessed 5,284,778 people, has now lost 23,180; Würtemberg has lost 14,052 out of its 1,971,118, and the Grand Duchy of Baden 11,787 out of 1,570,254. The Kingdom of Saxony has been more fortunate, and has received an accession of 42,017 to its population in 1880 of 2,972,805. Alsace-Lorraine has suffered a heavy loss in proportion to its numbers, there having been in eighteen months a decrease of 27,090 out of its 1,566,670 inhabitants in 1880.

THOMAS BRENNAN.

REVIEW OF WORK ACCOMPLISHED IN WISCONSIN.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The departure from the State of Thomas Brennan, Secretary of the Irish National League, furnishes occasion for an analysis of the results of his work here. And a candid, honest comment on the fruits of such analysis is found to be much to the credit of the young patriot. The first impression produced by his appearance was disappointment combined with much surprise at the man's seeming extreme youth for one who has played so important a part before the world in the modern drama of Irish nationalism. But this feeling wears away when he speaks in public and it is remembered that he entered the arena of his country's agitation at the early age of 19, and has been for ten years the object of Ireland's admiration and of England's wrath. Mr. Brennan in his personal bearing and in his method of treating Irish affairs presented a striking illustration of the newer and really more advanced thought connected with the Irish movement. Compared with the other orators and agitators who have appealed to the people of this city and State, he stands out as the most potent figure of them all. Parnell raised the Irish-Americans of Wisconsin to a tremendous pitch of enthusiasm, but it was because he was Parnell, and not because of anything he said or did here. Dillon was received with every demonstration of hospitality and approval, but it was because of his record and because he was regarded as the representative of an idea, and not because of his words or acts among his people in this State, and neither he nor Parnell left the impress of any special present influence exerted. A. M. Sullivan was one of the best conservative Irish speakers that ever addressed a Milwaukee audience, and he left a pleasing impression because of that fact. The "fiery Finerty" wins more applause than any other speaker on Irish affairs before the people of Wisconsin; but, while he sweeps his audience with powerful waves of tumultuous enthusiasm by his keen and penetrating eloquence, he arouses a certain degree of antagonism and leaves an influence in the direction of an inquiry why he does not carry his ideas into practical effect by leading a storming party against the "Castle walls." Mr. Egan made no pretense to oratory, but gave the impression of being a clear-headed, business-like patriot. President Sullivan, of the league, attracted much attention because of his official connection with the movement, and spoke acceptably, but exerted no special influence. Mr. Donnelly, Milwaukee's leading Irish-American orator—the most eloquent man in the movement in the State—would probably exert great influence away from home, but in his efforts here suffers from the disadvantage which always attaches to a "prophet in his own country." When the power for good exercised on the people of Milwaukee and of Wisconsin in connection with the Irish National movement by all these men is summed up it will not equal that possessed in the single person of Mr. Brennan. The result of his words and his work has been that he has "set people to thinking:" and, added to this, he has appealed more forcibly and more successfully to the active sympathies of other classes than the Irish-Americans than any of his predecessors. He has wasted no time in lauding the Irish people or flattering their vanity. He has not "kissed the blarney-stone." While possessing powers of eloquence, he has not exerted those powers in the simple turning of well-wrought figures of speech to catch applause. But, while portraying in strong colors the wrongs and evils under which the Irish suffer, he has turned the mirror of truth full in their faces, and shown that to a great degree they themselves are responsible for the situation. "The day has gone by," he says, "when Irishmen can believe that columns of men, marching under a harp-adorned flag of green and rending the air with huzzas, can shake the English throne. The potency of holiday celebrations and the influence of millinery displays will never win a nation's freedom." And, more than any other man, Mr. Brennan has aided, in this city and State, in leveling the barriers between sects and factions of men of Irish birth and Irish blood. His call for cool, calm, earnest, organized work on the part of all friends of an oppressed people has met with a ready response here, and he has left a potent, lasting influence behind him.

THE POLES.

SUGGESTIONS ARISING FROM THE SOBIESKI CELEBRATION.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The brief dispatch which the lateness of the hour at which the Sobieski celebration in this city closed allowed conveyed no adequate idea of the proportions or of the significance of the affair. With but few exceptions, the street parade and the public meeting constituted the most imposing public display ever witnessed in this city. The procession was immense in proportions, the streets were thronged with thousands upon thousands of people, bonfires and fireworks blazed in every direction, thousands of torches flared in the evening air, the meeting in the monster Turn-Hall on the West Side was an immense gathering, the exercises were, in the main, interesting, and the whole affair was conducted in such a manner as to reflect credit on all concerned. Fifteen years ago there were only thirty families of Poles in this city. Today, on the South Side alone, there are over 2,000 families of Polish people, and the total number of men, women, and children of Polish antecedents in the city is in the neighborhood of 18,000. A thorough canvass of the 2,000 families on the South Side shows that 97 per cent own their own homes, and a similar condition of affairs exists in other parts of the city. In the First Ward the Poles, who constitute a large element of the population, have taken organized steps for their higher advancement in social and educational matters. They have formed a society, and among the first steps of its members have been practical arrangements for the correct registration of Polish-American voters and for the better education of Polish-American children. Two matters which lie directly in the way of the progress and elevation of these people here are the facts that, politically, they act almost in a mass, and, as a rule, they vote together for one party's candidate; and, secondly, that, as a rule, they send their children to Polish private schools. Politically, the great body of the Polish-Americans here are enslaved by blind adherence to party ties and the dictation of leaders; and, educationally, they are depriving themselves of the benefits of the public schools, from the influence of which latter course they cannot recover for at least a generation. Some of the shrewder and wiser of their number begin to see the folly of such a policy, and the movement in the First Ward is in the direction of a better course. The Sobieski meeting was conducted by Capt. Francis Borchardt, commander of the Kosciusko Guard, and Lieut. Schubert, of the same company, acted as Chief Marshal of the parade. Capt. Borchardt is a Justice of the Peace and a rising attorney, and Lieut. Schubert is an efficient Deputy-Sheriff and popular young man. In connection with the present interest in the affairs of the Poles of this city a controversy of considerable magnitude has arisen in which the Poles have taken a decided stand. For many years one of the thoroughfares of the city has been called Sobieski street. Yielding to the whim of an Alderman, a few weeks ago the City Fathers changed the name of the street, giving it some fancy name. The Poles regard this as an insult, and demand that the old name be given to the street. In this connection a good story is told of a high-toned lady in the First Ward. In early times a wealthy gentleman interested in property here named several streets in honor of Harvard College scholarships. One of these streets was called "Dane place." The lady in question, living on the street, made a personal appeal to the Hon. Ed Wall, then a member of the Common Council, to have the name of the street changed, as she said it "sounded to much like them Polacks."

STATE LANDS.

EFFORT TO CREATE POLITICAL CAPITAL.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—An effort is making among certain would-be Democratic leaders in this city and State to create political capital out of certain alleged irregularities in the recent public sale of State lands. It is charged that a combination was effected among purchasers whereby the lands were sold for lower prices than would otherwise have been the case; and that therefore the State was defrauded. In order to give the matter a political bearing some Democrats at Madison, in their search for something out of which to create a sensation that would react in favor of their party, have charged that the alleged fraud on the people of the State is directly traceable to the present Republican Administration. The charges and accompanying efforts at agitation have not attracted any special or profound attention on the part of the people of the State; but as a sample of efforts in the way of political agitation they merit analysis. Last evening Lieut.-Gov. Fifield—who is Acting Governor during the absence of Gov. Rusk with the Villard party—called in THE TRIBUNE correspondent and made the following statement in regard to the matter—a statement which covers the whole ground:

"The fact is, the sale was perfectly straight and legal. All charges and assertions to the contrary are false, and are merely efforts to get some sort of political capital. The allegations of fraud made at Madison and the stories sent out to State papers are a mere political bubble, and it is easily pricked. The public sale was advertised in due form, and was carried on in legal, proper style. At the outset it was apparent that would-be buyers were bidding against each other and running prices up far above the real value of some of the forties. It is said—and the statement appears reasonable—that some of the buyers finally combined to purchase at as low figures as possible and then divide the purchases instead of bidding against each other. I do not know that this is a fact, but it appears to me that that is just what you, or I, or any other business-man would do. The lands were for sale. These men wanted to buy them. It is natural to suppose that they wished to buy at the lowest possible figure. There is nothing illegal in that. There is no suggestion of fraud about it. It's a simple, straight, business consideration. Now, so far as the results of the sale are concerned, the State is justified in congratulating itself. I know that country well. It has been looked over for years by lumbermen, and most of the best portion has been taken long ago. For most of the land just sold I, as a business-man well acquainted with the situation, would not pay the prices which the State received at public auction. The efforts of the Democrats to get any political capital out of the matter are weak and ridiculous."

STATISTICS.

WORK OF THE NEW STATE BUREAU.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 15. — [Special.] —Mr. Frank Flower, the head of the new Bureau of Statistics and Labor of this State, is in the city today. In a chat with THE TRIBUNE correspondent he gave the following outline of the work thus far of his bureau: The whole business was new, and all the preliminaries for practical work had to be learned. The first effort was in the direction of obtaining a list of all the manufacturers and their works in the State. This was a work of no small proportions. Of course the results of the United States census takers was utilizes; but they were not sufficiently perfect and correct in detail to meet all the requirements of the case; and added to this, new establishments and changes in the management of old are so numerous that the work of making a really correct and accurate list well-nigh approaches an impossibility. The next step was the preparation of papers and blanks, to be filled out by the manufacturers themselves. These papers are copied after similar documents sent out by the Massachusetts Bureau, and are intended to secure information in regard to the number of men, women, and children employed, the precise nature and value of articles manufactured, etc. They are held back for the present, and will be sent out as soon as the cheap postage regulations shall go into effect. The blanks must be filled out, under oath, and returned to the bureau. The result of all inquiries will be tabulated and otherwise arranged for convenience or matter of reference. When this work shall be completed another set of similar blanks will be sent out, and the results arrived at by a comparison of the replies to the two sets will constitute the basis of the first official report of the bureau, to be issued in February, 1884.

In response to inquiries concerning the truth of the charge that he has failed to conform to the law in the matter of instituting proceedings in the matter of infringement of the statute in relation to the hours of labor for women and children, Mr. Flower said: "I have no official information that there is any such infringement, and I cannot have any till I receive replies to the papers which I am about to send out. These papers include questions on this very point, and as these questions must be answered under oath I shall, on receipt of the answers, be in possession of facts on which to institute proceedings, if necessary."

SOCIAL.

MARSHAL FINK'S MARRIAGE—SILVER WEDDING, ETC.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—United States Marshal Fink was married this week to Miss Rosa Blankenhorn. The ceremony took place at the residence of Mr. Erntkremoe, brotner of the bride, and was performed by the Rev. C. H. Loeber, pastor of St. Stephen's Lutheran Church. Bride and groom left the city at once on a short bridal tour.

Mr. W. W. Colman, publisher of Der Herold, and his wife celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding this week. Mr. Colman's establishment is, with one exception, the largest German newspaper enterprise in this country. The proprietor, from a very small beginning, has amassed a handsome fortune. The silver-wedding celebration took place at Mr. Colman's magnificent house in the Seventh Ward.

The announcement of the failure this week of Col. H. S. Benjamin was the occasion of the extension of much sympathy to that gentleman. He was, during the War, an officer of cavalry, and made a brilliant record. He has been one of the leading business-men of the city for the last ten years, and universally respected. His hospitable home on Prospect avenue has been for years the scene of much social life. The Colonel and his wife numbered among their list of warm friends many literary people in various parts of the country. It is believed that the property of the Colonel will be found sufficient to enable him to pay dollar for dollar, and the business and social circles of the city hope to see him on his feet again at an early day.

Peter McGeoch has returned from his trip to the Far West much refreshed by his vacation. He says the effect of his recent business complications have worn away, that he feels like a new man, and is now ready to start again in a vigorous way.

The Rev. Mr. Titsworth, the new pastor of Plymouth Church, has organized a novel movement among the young people of his church. They now have a regular service of weekly meetings at the church parlors, at which, in addition to brief religious exercises, a program is arranged for discussion, study of parliamentary law, and other subjects, literary exercises, etc. The movement proves very popular, and, it is believed, will greatly increase the interest in the church. Mr. C. G. Stark, Superintendent of the Sunday-school, has just returned from a trip to Europe, and will resume his post tomorrow.

A ball is in progress this evening at the West Side Turner-Hall for the benefit of such of the striking telegraph operators as were not taken back by the Western Union Company after the strike.

In accordance with a request from the Philadelphia committee, a meeting of German organizations has been called by the local committee to be held this Saturday evening in Pfleger's Hall, 457 East Water street, to make arrangements for an imposing demonstration and festivities in Milwaukee Garden, Oct. 8, the duo-centennial of the landing of Germans on American soil at Germantown, Pa.

By the direction of the Iowa Conference, which has jurisdiction over this State, the Rev. R. Holley has arrived here to take charge of the African M. E. Church of this city. The number of colored people in this city is very small, and, consequently, the church membership is not large. But the church is just now out of debt, and Mr. Holley, who is a man of energy and ability, proposes to do all that is possible toward elevating the social, moral, and religious condition of his people. The colored men of this city have a Masonic lodge, and Mr. Holley is a member of this order. The new preacher will officiate for the first time here today.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

AFFAIRS AT THE EXPOSITION—THE THEATRES, ETC.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The Exposition this year fulfills the prophecy and promise of success held out at the opening. Although the exhibits were in a wonderful degree of completion at the very opening, it may be said that the Exposition is only just now in perfect running order. So many additions have been made to the exhibits, and so many improvements completed, that even the seemingly perfect condition of affairs at the start have given way to something still more perfect and beautiful. The management has arranged a large number and variety of special features in connection with this year's displays. For instance, today is "Racine-Day," and the people of Racine are here in a body, being received at the depot and escorted through the city by bands of music, etc. Next Wednesday will be "Editors'-Day." The editors of the State are all invited, and many of them will be present. The special exercises of the day will include a fine banquet, at which John Plankinton, President of the Exposition Association, will preside, and toasts will be answered by the Hon. Horace Rublee, Lieut.-Gov. Fifield, George W. Peck, Dr. J. H. Senner, Capt. D. W. C. Wilson, Prof. Rockwood, John R. Goodrich, and others. The 25th—"Soldiers'-Day"—a grand demonstration will be made, and other special "days" will soon be announced. The receipts at the Exposition this year bid fair to exceed those of any preceding year.

At the new Grand Opera-House Gus Williams drew large houses the early part of the week, and Mr. and Mrs. Nat Goodwin are doing an immense business at the close. Next week Margaret Mather will play an engagement, opening in "Romeo and Juliet." Miss Mather is a great favorit here, and the advance sale of seats for her engagement shows that she will have large houses. At the Academy of Music John F. Ward, Irish comedian will appear tomorrow, to be followed by Mattie Vickers next week. The new Dime Museum is doing an enormous business; a change of attractions is announced. A faked-up organization called the "New Orleans Minstrels," with a semi-lottery gift enterprise attachment, went to pieces at the Academy of Music this week.

NOTES.

MINOR MATTERS ABOUT TOWN.

The new nail-mill at Bay View will be built at once. This fact is the occasion of great joy to the workmen now out of employment. The first cost for building and machinery of the new enterprise will be about $100,000.

The teachers in the public schools of this city held a meeting yesterday and organized a Teachers' Institute for the purpose of fitting themselves to teach bookkeeping in the upper grades. Principal Spinney, of the Fourteenth District School, will have charge of the institute.

The organization of a new engine company, to be known as No. 8, and several removals and resignations of members of the fire department, has necessitated the appointment of fourteen new men to the force and the transferring and promotion of a number of the old firemen.

A special from Rochester, N. Y., announces the sudden death at that place of Joseph Curtis. Mr. Curtis was one of the original proprietors of the Evening Wisconsin, which, in company with William E. Cramer, the present senior proprietor and editor-in-chief, he founded in June, 1847, on the ruins of the old Evening Courier.

The County Supervisors have been furnished a special car for their excursion next week by the St. Paul Company and are therefore happy, as they will enjoy a long ride free of cost. The excursionists will leave the Union Depot for Chicago Monday morning and will remain in that city during the day. In the evening they will go to Rock Island, then to Davenport, Ia. From the latter place they will go to Council Bluffs and Omaha and will then return home, reaching this city about Saturday.

The so-called "Liberals" of this city find themselves in a very pretty muddle in connection with the approaching "congress" of their co-workers to be held in this city. Several abortive attempts have been made to arrange for the forthcoming meeting on a scale in harmony with the supposed importance of the gathering. At last a hall has been secured and a committee of arrangements appointed. But the same meeting which appointed the committee of arrangements adopted a resolution declaring that Liberals of the city disclaim, in advance, all responsibility for the forthcoming congress for its acts. This resolution is based on the action of a former meeting of the National League, by which it "was unqualifiedly committed to the repeal of the laws of Congress excluding from the mails obscene publications and merchandise"; and it is declared that "such action is repugnant to the moral sense of the great mass of Liberals of the country, and has alienated them from the Liberal League."

M'VICKER'S THEATRE.
ABOUT ESMERALDA.
What about this play?
Do you mean Esmeralda?
Yes; it ran 350 nights in New York City.
Where?
At the Madison Square Theatre.
Who wrote it?
Mrs. Burnett and W. H. Gillett.
What is it all about?
Esmeralda Rogers is a poor but awfully sweet girl, and she is in love with Dave.
Who is Dave?
An honest young fellow whose farm joins Esmeralda's father's.
Why doesn't she marry him?
Because her mother bosses the family and wants her to marry some rich man.
What does her father say?
He wants her to marry Dave.
What next?
A mining-speculator comes along; discovers rich ore on the place.
Well, does he steal it?
No; but he buys the farm, and Mrs. Rogers takes the whole family to Paris.
Does she pay the bills?
Of course she does. She sold the farm for a fortune and a percent on the profits of the mine.
How does Esmeralda like Paris?
Not at all, particularly when her mother insists on her marrying a scheming old Marquis.
Does she run away?
No; but she refuses to marry Mr. Marquis, and presently she discovers that Dave is in the city searching for her.
Who pays his bills?
Nobody; he doesn't eat.
What does he live on?
Love. (Goodness gracious!)
Is there any fun in the play?
Lots of it. A jolly nice fellow who took a fancy to Esmeralda and her father in North Carolina brings the girl and her lover together in a Paris studio.
Is anybody ailled?
Mrs. Rogers wants to die when she sees Esmeralda in Dave's arms.
What does she say?
She is too mad to speak, and she does not know of the fun they are having at her expense.
Explain yourself.
The ore on her farm has just disappeared.
Where is the vein found?
On Dave's farm.
Did he know it?
No, not until the funny man told him.
Isn't that delightful?
That is what the audience say.
Then there is more fun?
Elucidate, please.
When it is discovered that Dave has secretly been sending Mrs. Rogers money to live on.
Why is it funny?
Because she thought it came from her mine.
What becomes of the Marquis?
He turns out to be a villain without money.
What does he do? Elope with the old lady?
No; but he marries a rich girl, who discovers his wickedness too late.
Is this all?
Oh, no! Dave tells Mrs. Rogers that he will forgive her and divide his property with her.
Does she accept?
She can't help herself.
What becomes of the funny man?
He marries a daisy of a girl, and they both make sport of Mrs. Rogers.
How does the play end?
Just as it ought.
How is that?
Dave takes Esmeralda to his heart, and they all go back to North Carolina.
To what part of North Carolina?
To their farm at the foot of old Bald Mountain.
What! where an earthquake was reported a few years ago?
The very same place.
Was this play a success in New York?
The greatest hit of last year.
How do the audience like it?
They laugh and cry.
I shall take my family.
You are a sensible man.
Thanks.
Don't mention it.
Good-by and pleasant dreams.

POSTAL TELEGRAPH.

The Strong Words of Postmaster-General Howe in His 1882 Report.

The Power to Employ the Telegraph for the Postal Service Clear and Complete.

Advantages of Combining the Two Services—The Civil-Service Objection Refuted.

The Danger of Leaving the Control of the Telegraph in the Hands of Stock-Jobbers.

The following extract from Postmaster-General Howe's report for 1882 will be timely and interesting reading just now. After referring to and advocating the establishment of a system of postal savings-banks, the Postmaster-General says:

Another and a broader field of activity not yet occupied by our postal establishment is that of the telegraph. In almost all countries save this telegraph service is conducted by the postal authorities. Presidents, Postmasters-General, and committees of both Houses of Congress have heretofore urged that the Post-Office Department of the United States should have exclusive possession of that service. Already Congress has provided a mode of adjusting the terms upon which the United States may purchase all telegraph lines, either for postal or other purposes.—[Rev. Stat., Sec. 5,267.]

After the fullest consideration I have been able to give to the subject I am forced to the conclusion that the time has fully come when the telegraph and postal service should be embraced under one management. The whole subject has been argued in former years. I shall do but little more than summarize that argument.

TELEGRAPH BUSINESS THE SAME AS THE MAIL.

The business of the telegraph is inherently the same as that of the mail. It is to transmit messages from one person to another. That is the very purpose for which post-offices and post-roads are established. The power to establish is not limited to any particular modes of transmission. The telegraph was not known when the Constitution was adopted. Neither was the railway. I cannot doubt that the power to employ one is as clear as to employ the other.

ADVANTAGES OF UNITING THE TWO SERVICES.

If the union of the two services did not improve that of the telegraph at all, I think it would improve the postal service in some important respects. It would necessitate the employment of telegraph operators for Postmasters in many offices. That would result in giving to the administration of not a few offices men who have learned to do one thing in place of those who have never learned to do anything. If the two offices were united, whenever a mail did not arrive on time the public thronging the post-office would learn, not merely that the mail had not arrived, but when it would arrive.

ECONOMY OF A JOINT DELIVERY.

Again, the necessity for delivering messages would facilitate and gradually draw after it the free delivery of mails in places where free delivery in itself is impracticable.

But a union of the two services would, I believe, improve the telegraph more than it would the postal service.

I prefer no accusation against the administration of the former service. Admitting it to be honest and efficient, the fact remains that it is not cheap, and under corporate control it cannot be cheap. Rent for both services would cost but little more than the cost for one. So of fuel and of light. Where there is now a free delivery of mail, telegraph messages could be delivered at less cost by the post-office than by a corporation. Besides, if the business was controlled by the Government there would be but a single management for the whole. The business is now charged with the cost of many different managements. One director is cheaper than several.

THE GOVERNMENT DOES NOT DEMAND EXCESSIVE INTEREST ON CAPITAL.

Again, corporations will seek, and ought to have, not only a remuneration for cost of administration, but interest on the capital invested. Telegraph companies seek and secure a large interest on their capital; and what is still more burdensome to the public is the fact that the aggregate outlay of the companies is always greatly in excess of the actual cost of their property.

The office of the telegraph is not indispensable in the sense that air, water, and food are; but it is so essential to social, political, and commercial life that it must be had. If it cannot be obtained at one price it will be at another. No one corporation has been or will be allowed quietly to monopolize the business. No one set of men will be permitted exclusively to sell services which all must have. And yet, while monopoly will not be permitted, competition beyond a certain point cannot be tolerated.

"PARALLELING" THE PRIVATE TELEGRAPH.

When competition profits the public who purchase the service it becomes injurious to the companies which sell. When it becomes injurious to the companies the competition is extinguished by the purchase and absorption of the competitor. The price paid for the franchises of a rival concerns the purchaser but little; it concerns the public deeply. The people must pay the fees which will yield dividends on the new and on the old capital. So it has happened that the one corporation which has built most miles of telegraph has been the largest purchaser of telegraph property. It must continue to be so. No matter how rich a company may be it is powerless to prevent the organization of new and competing enterprises. Its sole protection is to buy when the new rival proves hurtful. No matter how conservative or just may be the management of the purchasing company, it will demand from the public dividends on the capital invested to extinguish the rival. The only security capital can have against these recurring raids is to surrender the business to the Government. The only protection the public can have against these multiplied exactions is for the Government to assume that exclusive control over the transmission of domestic messages by electricity which it now has over the slower methods by steam and stage-coach. Safety for those who sell and those who buy telegraph service is promoted by the same measure.

PRIVATE TELEGRAPHS POTENT FOR EVIL.

But a stronger reason still why the Government should control the telegraph is found in the fact that it is as potent for evil as for good. Like Government itself, it is too terrible to be wielded by others than representatives of the whole people.

In the great commercial centres public stocks, corporate and mining stocks, bonds, and the staple products of agriculture are bought and sold daily to the amount of thousands of millions. In all those markets one great telegraph company wags its tongue incessantly. For all those commodities it is the arbiter of prices. Prices go up or down according to its inculcations. Whoever controls its utterances may at pleasure buoy a market in which he wishes to sell, or break one in which he wishes to buy. That is an agency much too dreadful to intrust to private hands.

IT IS PRUDENT TO REMOVE TEMPTATION FROM JAY GOULD.

I am far from asserting that a use so malign ever has been made of this agency. I speak of its capabilities, not of its history. Knowing that it can be so abused, it seems to be the dictate of prudence not to wait until it is so abused. It is manifest that even when the Government controls the telegraph a falsehood which may sink a stock or float it may still be sent over the wires. But truth will have equal freedom on the lines. In Government hands the telegraph will maintain an exact neutrality between the two fierce parties which, day by day and year by year, contend for supremacy in the markets. In private hands it may become the mere creature, as malignant, as mighty, of that party which its owner from time to time chooses to join. If he choose he may give free course to falsehood, and if he choose he may imprison the truth. Who else can trade in a market dominated by such a power?

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

It may be objected, and has been, that the measure proposed would largely extend the roll of Federal officials. That increase has, doubtless, been exaggerated. At a very large percentage of the offices the telegraph operator would not supplement the Postmaster, but would supplant him. Besides, I know of no law but necessity limiting the employment of officials. The Government is not wise which employs a single officer not needed. It is unwise if it refuses to employ thousands when they are needed.

Within the life of this generation this Government employed more than two and a half million of officers. They were all armed. They did not destroy the country; they saved it. It is not difficult to find individuals who employ a thousand men, and find profit in it. It does not become 50,000,000 to shrink from employing a hundred thousand if they have need for their services.

T. O. HOWE, Postmaster-General.

TWO MEN DROWNED.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Last night a man named Murphy, accompanied by Frank Foster, aged 21, and Charles Pray, aged 24, started down the river in a small lap-streak boat for Leach's Island, intending to pass today in shooting. The night was very dark and foggy and a heavy tide was running. In passing through the narrows the boat upset and Foster immediately sank to the bottom. Murphy clung to the boat, with Pray clinging desperately to him, and thus they drifted some distance, loudly crying for help. Murphy was finally obliged to free himself from Pray to save his own life, and the latter then sank and was seen no more. Murphy's cries were heard at the navy-yard, and a boat from there reached him just in time to save his life.

CONFLAGRATIONS.

Destructive Fire at Casey, Ill.—$30,000 Damage Done.

MARSHALL, Ill., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The Town of Casey, situated sixteen miles west of here on the Vandalia Railroad, was the scene of a disastrous conflagration last night. The fire started at about 10 o'clock in Haugh's restaurant, supposedly by the explosion of a lamp, though nothing is certainly known of the cause. Kelly & Bros'. livery stable on the south was destroyed. Loss, $2,500; fully insured. The building was owned by Mary Long, and was valued at $500; no insurance. Haugh Bros'. loss was $1,100; no insurance. The building belonged to the estate of J. H. O'Boyle, deceased, and was valued at $1,000; fully insured. J. K. Gilkeson's clothing store was next. Loss, $1,500; insured for $1,000. M. G. Cochenour's furniture store followed. Loss, $400; fully insured. The Frank Payne restaurant was next. Loss, $200; no insurance. The two buildings occupied by these men were owned by M. Sanford & Son. Loss, $2,500; insured for $1,000. H. B. Lees' double-store brick, occupied by a stock of general merchandise, was next swept away. Loss, $14,000; insured for $10,500. Next came C. Fuqua & Son's two store-rooms, the first occupied by Owen Wiley with a stock of dry goods and groceries. Loss, $1,500; fully insured. Fuqua & Son occupied the remaining room with their bank and stock of clothing, boots, and shoes, etc. Loss on building, $7,000; insured for $5,000; on stock, $1,000; fully insured. Fuqua's Hall occupied the upper story, and the fine furniture, stage, scenery, and all was entirely destroyed. Loss, $2,000; no insurance. There were several minor losses by different parties. The entire loss was something over $30,000; total insurance, $20,000. Lee and Fuqua will build at once. Casey had hardly recovered from the disastrous conflagration of February, 1882, when this last disaster came.

A Blaze at Canal Winchester.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—A fire tonight in the hardware store of Charles Rees, at Canal Winchester, a station on the Hocking Valley & Toledo Railroad about seventeen miles south of this city, caused a loss of $10,000. The Odd-Fellows' Hall was in the upper story of this building. The building is a total loss. The insurance on the stock of goods was $2,000 in the Phœnix of Hartford, and on the building $10,000 in the Louisville Underwriters. The Odd-Fellows had a policy of $1,100 in the Cooper of Dayton, and their loss will be $1,600. The fire was caused by the igniting of gasoline from a lamp in the hands of William Hart, a son-in-law of Mr. Rees. Hart's arms were badly burned, and at the present time it is doubtful about the ability of the physicians to save them. Assistance was asked for from the city, but before they could get the engine ready they were telegraphed not to come. There is no fire-engine at Canal Winchester.

A Steam Bakery Destroyed at Cedar Rapids, Ia.—Loss, $25,000.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The large steam bakery and cracker factory of Shauer & Davis was totally destroyed by fire at 2:30 this morning. Loss about $25,000; insured for $20,250, as follows: Newark of Newark, N. J., $1,250; National of Hartford, $2,000; Royal of Liverpool, $500; Fireman's of Dayton, O., $1,500; Standard of London, $1,500; Sun of London, $2,500; Westchester, $2,500; German-American, $2,500; Milwaukee Mechanics', $2,000; Merchants' of Newark, N. J., $2,000; German of Buffalo, $2,000. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Other Fires.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 15.—The fire at Casey, Ill., last night destroyed eleven business houses and several offices, causing a loss of about $80,000, notwithstanding some of the losers saved part of their stock.

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 15.—The grain elevator at Elmore, O., owned by Magee & Pofenbach, was destroyed by fire this morning, together with its contents, consisting of 4,500 bushels of wheat, 2,000 bushels of rye, and 200 bushels of corn. Loss, $10,000; insured for $7,500.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 15.—Fire at Delphos, O., this morning at an early hour entirely consumed the extensive works of the Pittsburg Hoop & Barrel Company. The night-watchman, whose name could not be learned, was in the building at the time, and was burned to death. Loss, $70,000; insurance, $30,000.

ELKHART, Ind., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The large barn of Philip Manchester, together with all its contents, consisting of a large amount of grain, was destroyed by fire this afternoon. A number of hogs were burned. The loss is over $5,000. No insurance.

HOLLAND, Mich., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—At 12 o'clock last night the brick residence of Jacob Lievense, seven miles northeast from here, was totally destroyed by fire. But very little of the furniture was saved. With the greatest danger the lives of the children were saved. The fire commenced in the kitchen. The loss is estimated at $2,500; insured in the Ottawa & Allegan Farmers' Mutual for $1,200.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The Germania Theatre and summer garden, owned by Albert F. Bendemonn, were destroyed by fire this afternoon, causing a loss including the damage to his residence and saloon of $2,500, on which there was insurance of $700 in the German Mutual of New York. The flames spread to the adjoining property and destroyed three dwellings belonging to Mrs. Caroline Winger, whose loss amounts to $11,000, on which there is insurance of $3,500 in the German Mutual. The theatre closed its season last Sunday night. The fire is attributed to incendiarism.

Chicago.

A fire, the origin of which is unknown, broke out about 6 o'clock yesterday morning in the engine-room of the three-story brick building No. 320 South Clinton street owned by J. H. Graham and occupied by W. C. How as an organ factory. An alarm was turned in from Box 275 and promptly responded to. The flames were not extinguished until considerable damage had been done to both building and stock. The damage to the building and machinery will probably reach $2,000. This loss is covered by the following insurance: German, of Peoria, $500; Firemen's, $1,000; Allemania, $500; New Orleans, $500. Mr. How's loss by fire and water will doubtless reach $2,500, and is not covered by any insurance at all.

AFFECTED BY DROUTH.

The Dry Weather Beginning to Close Manufactories in Massachusetts.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The drouth is seriously affecting manufacturing interests in Massachusetts. Today every manufacturing corporation in Lawrence is closed. The city is in holiday attire, while the river is lower than yesterday. Owing to the cessation of operations at the mills, the pond from which the Essex company gets its supply is rising rapidly, and there is no doubt that all the mills here will be in partial operation Monday. All will open their gates. At the Upper Pacific two Buckeye and Corliss engines furnish power. At the Atlantic Mills a double-cylinder Corliss will be principally used, thus affording the Lower Pacific, Washington, Pemberton, Duck, and Everett mills a greater supply of water. Unless heavy rains fill the Merrimac at its headwaters there appears no doubt that the Lawrence mills will be seriously embarrassed. Yesterday was the monthly pay-day at the mills. But few were seen on the street today and business is almost at a standstill; an unusual occurrence here.

MEXICAN NICKELS.

Laredo, Tex., is protesting against the Mexican nickel five-cent coin. A writer says: "It is all very well as small change; but when a man calls with two or three donkeys loaded with it to pay a debt, and all hands in the store lose their much-needed siesta and consume a day in counting the stuff, even the patriotism of Mexicans—who do not highly value time—wanes in the operation."

NOW IN NEW YORK.

Mr. Julius A. Kohn, formerly with H. A. Kohn & Co., of this city, is now a member of the firm of J. A. Kohn & Co., bankers and brokers, No. 19 Broad street, New York. Mr. Kohn is a member of the New York Stock Exchange, and deals largely in foreign exchange, bonds, stocks, etc. The other members of the firm are David and Moritz Ochs.

COUNTY POLITICS.

An Important Meeting of Prominent Republicans Last Night.

A Plan of Organization Submitted and after Discussion Recommitted.

"The Enforcement of All the Laws" Plank Creates a Slight Breeze.

A conference of Republicans, called by the sub-committee of the County Central Committee, to consider a plan for a thorough organization, was held in the Appellate-Court room last evening. Among the 100 present were Senator Logan, the Hon. George E. Adams, Frank Easton, F. Q. Ball, James Stuart, Col. Clark E. Carr of Galesburg, E. F. Cragin, Canute Matson, Maj. Brockway, Thomas Sennot, Eli B. Smith, M. A. Farwell, Philip A. Hoyne, D. Harry Hammer, John M. Smyth, James P. Root, Frank Gilbert, L. C. Collins, Pliny B. Smith, William Bross, Ald. Hull, Herman Benze, W. K. Sullivan, Senator Condee, A. C. Hesing, Henry Hertz, Jacob Gross, Representative Stimming, George B. Swift, George H. Harlow, George White, Col. Sexton, ex-Ald. Quirk, Arthur Dixon, E. B. Cook, and Ald. Simons.

The gathering was called to order by John M. Smyth, who said that suggestions had been received by the sub-committee at previous meetings, and they had agreed upon a plan, which would be submitted to the County Central Committee Monday night for action. He read the plan, which provides for a "Republican Central Club of Cook County." All good and law-abiding citizens who believe in the advancement and success of the Republican party can join. The principles are: "A strict adherence to those laid down by the National Republican Convention of 1880," and the objects (1) to obtain fair elections and an honest count of the ballots; (2) an honest and economical administration of public affairs; (3) an enforcement of all laws, both municipal and State; (4) the elevation to offices of trust and honor of none but citizens of known honesty, ability, and fidelity; and, the recognition of personal liberty in the widest sense, free from meretritious license and consistent with public order. The officers, a President four Vice-Presidents—three from the city and one from the county—Recording Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, and Treasurer—to be elected annually the third Monday in September. An Executive Committee was provided for, to consist of one from each ward for every 200 votes cast at the latest Presidential election, the ward and town clubs to elect one for every five members until their quota is full. This committee to be the governing body, the members to pay a fee, which was left blank.

DISCUSSION.

William Bross was then elected Chairman, and spoke of the necessity of perfecting organization. Mr. A. J. Stone was chosen Secretary.

Mr. Hoyne moved that the plan be adopted.

Mr. Root thought so large an Executive Committee—200 or 300—would be such an unwieldy body that it would break down in six months.

Mr. Swift was in favor of a large committee. Republicans protested against having politics run by half a dozen men.

Mr. Decker said they ought to decide first whether they should have a Central Club, and made a motion to that effect.

A substitute of Mr. Elliott that the plan be considered by sections was agreed to, and a protracted talk followed. There was a difference of opinion on many points in the constitution, and a dozen changes were suggested.

Arthur Dixon said that views simply should be expressed and the plan recommitted. Some Republicans thought there were too many clubs. In the "good old victorious days" there were none, and, as a consequence, no factions.

Mr. Hesing remarked that it was too late for the "Central Club" to do anything, and such an organization would defeat the party anyhow. They should talk about how to go to work to elect honest men for County Commissioners this fall. He wouldn't care if one or two Democrats were put on the ticket. The Republican organization now didn't amount to anything. Clubs created dissensions. In the "old days" meetings of citizens were called and they organized the wards.

Mr. Sullivan wanted the Executive Committee called the campaign committee. There should be precinct clubs, they to elect a ward committee, and the latter to choose members of the Campaign Committee.

SHOULD COME FROM THE PEOPLE.

Mr. Root said a central club should emanate from the people; no other would be a success. Members of the proposed organization would be able to do nothing except elect the officers.

George White's experience was that too many ward clubs did more harm than good. The members instead of fighting the enemy on election day fought each other, and settled their differences at the polls.

A motion of Mr. Sullivan that it was the sense of the meeting that the Executive Committee should consist of one from each precinct, the manner of selecting them to be left to the Central Committee, was agreed to.

Mr. Hoyne didn't think they could accomplish anything, and moved to recommit. Only a few voted for this.

A motion to make the membership fee $5 was offered by Mr. Hesing, and the blank was stricken out.

"PERSONAL LIBERTY."

Mr. Hesing asked for an explanation of the third object. Did it mean the enforcement of all the laws? Was he to be prohibited from publishing his paper or buying a glass of beer Sunday? If that section remained, "good night."

Col. Sexton asked what amendment he would suggest.

Mr. Hesing replied that every man would try to enforce the laws that suited him. [Laughter.] He referred the gentlemen to the fate of the Law and Order party.

Mr. Swift said the "object" didn't amount to anything and ought to be struck out.

Mr. Harlow believed it was the duty of every citizen to enforce the laws, no matter who was crushed. If the laws were not enforced the Republican party and the country would be ruined.

Mr. Hesing got excited, and said the people could not be put in a strait jacket. There were 300,000 people in Chicago and 1,000,000 in the State who believed, after worship in the morning, they could drink a glass of beer in the afternoon without committing a sin, although the State law said it was.

Mr. Condee was in favor of law and order, and didn't think the Republican party had become so degraded as to say otherwise, even inferentially. He was also in favor of personal liberty, but it should be within the bounds of the law. He hoped the "object" would be adopted.

Col. Easton thought all the objects were glittering generalities, and wholly unnecessary.

The plan was finally referred back to the committee, and the meeting adjourned, Arthur Dixon saying, "We have had a good time, anyhow."

AN ELEVATOR FALL.

An Unaccountable Accident at the Boston Store—Two Men Injured.

A very serious elevator accident, and a very singular one withal, occurred about 9 o'clock yesterday morning at the Boston store, No. 120 State street. Fortunately it was a freight instead of a passenger elevator which was at fault, otherwise the results would doubtless have been much more calamitous. The freight elevator at the Boston is run by a young colored man named Louis Spencer. He started up from the basement with the elevator at the hour named without any load and stopped at the fifth floor. Here he took on James Hannah, a delivery-wagon driver, and Herman Albert, a young man employed in the wholesale millinery department of the store. The three then started down and at the fourth floor took on Charles Grashauser, an employé of the Merchants' Parcel Delivery Company. A second stop was made at the third floor, where two hat-cases, weighing about twenty-five pounds each, were taken on. When Spencer endeavored to start the elevator again—this is his story—he found that it would not respond to the cable either one way or the other. Accordingly, he got off and told the three passengers to follow him. Hannah did follow him, and the two started for the stairway, intending to walk down to the basement. Albert and Grashauser, however, saw fit to remain on the elevator and endeavor to start it up again. It responded to the pull on the cable, but just as the fifth floor was reached it suddenly dropped to the basement, a distance of about seventy-five feet. The wire caging was badly shattered by the force of the fall, and the two luckless passengers were painfully injured. Grashauser's left shoulder was dislocated and his spine badly injured. Albert sprained both of his ankles and received dangerous internal injuries, although he had strength enough left to walk out of the elevator alone. He was removed to the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, while Grashauser was taken to the County Hospital. It is thought that both will recover, although Albert's condition is considered critical. The latter is about 25 years old and single, and his home is at No. 2016 Butterfield street. Grashauser is about the same age and single, and boards at No. 171 West Lake street.

Inquiry developed the fact that the large iron drum around which the double cable of the elevator winds had been torn from the cast-iron stand on which it rested. Not only was the stand screwed to the floor, but the iron shaft of the drum was covered with a cap, tightly screwed down. The drum, weighing about a ton, was lifted up several feet, the heavy iron stand breaking into different pieces, and this, of course, allowed the elevator to drop. What caused the unusual strain, however, is a mystery. The elevator was not heavily loaded, and the machinery, having been lately thoroughly overhauled, was looked upon as perfectly sound. Several elevator men visited the scene of the accident, but all were at a loss to account for it. The elevator was one of the Miller patent.

PROFESSIONAL IRISHMEN.

The Secret Society Bosses and Their Modes of Working—An Indignant Protest.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I am an American and a Democrat. I sympathize with the Germans in their struggle against prohibitory legislation, and rejoice to see great numbers of Europeans, Germans, Swedes, Italians, etc., come and make their homes here, and willingly vote for them to hold office. I have never had the slightest tendency towards Know-nothingism. But there is one class of foreigners against whom I have at present a very decided antagonistic feeling. Not because they are Catholics and came from Ireland, but because they are all closely banded together in their secret societies, which exercise almost despotic power over their members, and constitute organizations as effective and secret as the Jesuit Society ever did in Europe. The masses of the Irish unlettered and patriotic have the welfare of Ireland at heart, but the bosses, shrewd and unscrupulous, think and work for nothing but their own welfare in the lucrative offices in the United States. While on their feet before their societies they talk only of Ireland's wrongs, but when together on the street-corners or in the back office they talk only about fixing slates for the next convention or working upon the Common Council, Board of Commissioners, or School Board. The bosses are all doing well and getting fat at public expense. It is all right so far as they are concerned collectively and individually. No one can blame them. One would pity their dupes, who are like wax in their hands, but they are so used to being duped and bled that pity would be thrown away.

Neither can the Irish secret society bosses blame us—the large element who are not bosses—if we become restive under their rule and try to break it. For the last two years the muttering has been increasing and the feeling more intense, but their power is so great and so effective that no Democrat of influence has dared or now dares to open his mouth against them. They even compel against their wishes and through fear alone (I am told by men who know) two of our Judges to drag their judicial ermine through the mire of local politics, a thing which hitherto we have never seen in Cook County, bad as it has been at times in other political matters.

When THE TRIBUNE boldly took the matter up it nowhere met such a responsive feeling as among Democrats. I voted to break up the Hesing rule years ago, and I purpose hereafter to put a vote where it will help break the Irish secret society ring. Let the Republicans nominate good men who are liberal on the saloon question for Commissioners this fall and they will sweep the city. Germans, Italians, Scandinavians, Bohemians, and Poles all find a powerful organization trying to control them. They ought in self-defense to band together in opposition. While the Irish are resisting English rule in Ireland they ought to resist Irish "boss" rule in America. The professional Irishman must go.

Coal freights are more active and rates were fairly steady at former quotations. Engagements for Chicago—Schooners Our Son, Moonlight, coal at 60 cents. For Milwaukee—Schooners G. C. Trumpff, Pathfinder, Marengo, David Vance, coal at 60 cents. The steamer T. W. Palmer and consorts Emma L. Coyne and Ogarita were chartered for ore from Escanaba to Ohio ports at $1.50, and left tonight light, the Watson joining the tow as far as Toledo. The schooner S. H. Foster, which arrived last night with wheat from Toledo, left light this evening for Escanaba, she having two more $1 ore cargoes to bring down. The schooner M. W. Page, of the Edwards tow, with coal for Chicago, started up alone this evening. The Edwards and Golden Age are both coal-loaded, but will not get away before Monday. The delay is caused by alterations being made on the Age's rudder. The Edwards went under the terminal elevator yesterday morning at 8 o'clock, discharged 54,000 bushels of corn, and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon had in 1,350 tons of coal. The new harbor tug Lorenzo Rimick has been sold by Thomas Ryan to James Ash and J. Johnson for $8,700, each having a half interest. The steamer St. Louis, owned by the Union Steamboat Company, and running in the Lake Superior Transit Line, is due here Tuesday from Duluth. She will then be hauled off the line, and her place will be taken by the Newburgh, now here, which is owned by the same company, and has been running between this port and Chicago. The St. Louis has had bad luck this season with her machinery, it having broken down three or four times. Canal freights declined a half cent, and were weak at that. The ruling rates were 6 cents on wheat and 5½ cents on corn to New York.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Cleared—Propeller Rochester, merchandise, Chicago. Shippers were inquiring for vessels to load coal for Chicago, Milwaukee, Bayfield, Marquette, and other ports yesterday, but there were no vessels offering. Charters—Schooners Walter Sherman, Ham Mills, and Hungerford, coal to Port Arthur at $1.35. The schooner Henry P. Baldwin was released from the rocks at Kelley's Island today and towed here. Two steam pumps were aboard. Part of the cargo was lightered in releasing her. She is leaking, but one pump keeps her free. She will be docked tomorrow. The wreck report places the damage on the tug Sprague at $850.

Vessels Passed Port Huron.

PORT HURON, Mich., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Passed down—a. m.—Propeller V. H. Ketchum with schooners Lizzie A. Law and St. Lawrence, 10:20; David W. Rust with D. K. Clint, L. C. Down—Propellers Sanilac, 5:15; Oakland and barges, 8:30. Wind southeast, gentle; weather fine.

Lake Huron.

PORT HURON, Mich., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—There has been light south winds for three days. Vessels that were reported in the Straits Monday have not arrived yet. The work on the Winslow is going forward with great rapidity. Her topmasts have been struck, and her anchors and other weighty articles have been removed to lighter her up. The tugs moved her two feet and expect to have her off tomorrow. The schooner R. Halloran completed her repairs and left tonight. The wreckers have nine feet of water alongside of the Winslow. She slid down the bank about two feet last night and righted up over five inches from her port side, showing that the sand was cut from under her considerable. The tugs A. J. Smith and Michigan expect to have her inside tomorrow.

CHEBOYGAN, Mich., Sept. 15.—[Special].—Departed—Schooner Van Valkenburg, propeller Champlain, steamer City of Cleveland. The wreckers have not yet succeeded in releasing the Pensaukee. Wind northeast, moderate; weather fine.

Milwaukee Matters.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—About 1 o'clock this afternoon a serious row occurred on the schooner G. H. Warrington, discharging a cargo of coal at the gas-house dock, between the non-union crew and a gang of union sailors. Two of the crew were terribly beaten, but the others escaped from the vessel. According to the statement of John Moore, one of the crew, who had his eyes blackened and nearly closed from blows, and who received several bad cuts in the head, a gang of union sailors boarded the vessel and requested the crew to join the union, and in case they refused threatened to raid the craft. The crew, fearing violence, decided to leave the vessel, but avowed that they would not join the union and notified the Captain, who told them they could have their pay at 1 o'clock today. When the crew returned for their money they were followed by about twenty union sailors, who beat them most unmercifully and then dragged them on the dock and proceeded to beat them until they made their escape. Physicians had to be called to care for two of the men. No arrests have been made. The officers of the Seaman's Union claim that the outrage was committed by dock laborers.

Lumber freights have advanced 12½ cents, and rates are now on a basis of $1.37½ to Muskegon. Cleared—Steam-barge J. M. Glidden and consort G. H. Warrington, steam-barge C. Hurlbut, for Escanaba. Arrived—Schooners Angus Smith and Annie M. Peterson.

Canadian Ports.

COLLINGWOOD, Ont., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Sailed—Schooner Pomeroy, Bay City, logs.

PORT DALHOUSIE, Ont., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Passed up—Barge D. D. Colvin, Kingston to Cleveland, light; barge Chieftain, Kingston to Cleveland, light; propellers Lake Michigan, Montreal to Chicago, general cargo; Saginaw Valley, Ogdensburg to Chicago, general cargo. Passed down—Propellers Tecumseh, Chicago to Kingston, coal; Lake Ontario, Toledo to Montreal, wheat; Roanoke, Chicago to Ogdensburg, general cargo; Active and barges, Toledo to Kingston, coal; schooner E. Blake, Chicago to Kingston, wheat.

Lake Michigan.

ESCANABA, Mich., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Arrived—Steamers W. L. Brown, Decora, Woocken, Business, schooners Monitor, B. Calkins, John Westey, F. Howland, San Diego, W. H. Vanderbilt. Sailed—Steamers Business, Woocken, Alcona, W. L. Brown, schooners Young America, San Diego, F. Howland, J. Westey, B. Calkins, Monitor, W. H. Vanderbilt. Wind south, light.

Lake Superior.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Arrived—Anna Smith, with James C. King; Havana with Helena. Cleared—Havana with Helena. Passed down—Propeller Japan.

CLUBBED BY A POLICEMAN.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—Last night two young men were quarreling in a saloon in Maitland, Holt County, when a man named David Williamson interfered. The Constable, John Lawson, ordered them to desist. Williamson refused to obey, and threatened to handle the officer, but the officer was too quick and struck him a blow across the back of the head with his club which felled him to the ground. He may survive, but the chances are decidedly against him. The impression prevails that the officer was justified in the act, as Williamson is a powerful man and wicked.

NEW HAMPSHIRE LEGISLATURE.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 15.—The session of the Legislature which closed this morning is the longest ever held in the State. The members of each House receive 102 days' pay. It will require upwards of $100,000 to settle their per diem. Nearly 375 bills and joint resolutions were passed.

Teeth without plates, patented March 15, '83, by Dr. J. E. Low, First Nat'l Bk. Bd., 164 Dearborn.

THE CITY.

The Probate Court will open tomorrow.

Miss Annie Russell (Esmeralda) is at the Palmer.

The Rev. and Mrs. D. L. Moody are at the Grand Pacific.

County-Clerk Ryan has gone East to remain two weeks.

Judge A. Boaman, of New Orleans, is at the Grand Pacific.

Bishop John Ireland, of Minnesota, is at the Grand Pacific.

Col. and Mrs. George L. Andrews, U. S. A., are at the Leland.

The Rev. John McElligot, of Wheeling, W. Va., is at the Palmer.

Commander G. C. Wiltse, U. S. N., and family are at the Leland.

The Rt.-Rev. John J. Kane, Bishop of West Virginia, is at the Palmer.

The Hon. Charles A. Eldridge, of Fond du Lac, Wis., is at the Tremont.

S. D. Fisher, Secretary of the State Board of Health, is at the Sherman.

Gen. John Lawler, of Prairie du Chien, Wis., is at the Grand Pacific.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Shuman went East last night for a three-weeks' visit.

Scarlet-fever has broken out in the Foundlings' Home. The many friends of the institution who have donated so liberally in times past will remember the little ones now.

The case against George Winters, the young collector who was accused of abducting a 16-year-old girl named Delia Bowen, was dismissed by Justice Scully yesterday for want of prosecution.

Henry Fuller Jr., President of the Chicopee National Bank, Springfield, Mass., and First Vice-President of the Massachusetts Mutual Life-Insurance Company, is stopping at the Grand Pacific.

Justice Foote yesterday held Mrs. A. M. Schomhorst and her son Carl to the Criminal Court in $300 bail each for selling liquor to a habitual drunkard—a woman who is the wife of a laboring man.

The temperature yesterday, as observed by Manasse, optician, 88 Madison street, TRIBUNE Building, was as follows: 8 a. m., 70; 9 a. m., 74; 10 a. m., 77; 11 a. m., 80; 12 m., 82; 1 p. m., 84; 3 p. m., 85; 6 p. m., 81. Barometer, 8 a. m., 29.10; 6 p. m., 29.53.

Col. M. V. B. Edgerly, Democratic candidate for Governor of New Hampshire in the fall of 1882, and Second Vice-President and Manager of Agencies of the Massachusetts Mutual Life-Insurance Company, is stopping at the Grand Pacific.

The notorious Mrs. Laura Dura, who was put in jail not long ago for malicious mischief—destroying a carpet—was brought into the Criminal Court yesterday and released upon her own recognizance, with the understanding that she was to leave the city within twenty-four hours.

At the meeting of the Directors of the Open Board of Trade yesterday Mr. C. H. Lunt's resignation as Chairman of the Clearing-House Committee was accepted, and the present Secretary, Mr. A. Eaton, was appointed to fill the vacancy. Mr. C. H. Lunt has accepted a similar position with the Board of Trade.

E. W. Blatchford was selected some time ago to represent the Chicago Board of Trade on the commission which is to investigate the hog-raising and packing industry in this country. Prof. C. F. Chandler, ex-President of the New York Board of Health, will probably represent the New York Chamber of Commerce.

The Pilgrims of Apollo Commandery, who have been doing Knightly service in Europe, will arrive in the city by the Michigan Central Railroad at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow, and will be received by their less fortunate brethren who remained at home. The rendezvous is the Asylum of Apollo, and the hour is 9:30 a. m.

A number of residences on Vernon avenue, near Thirty-fourth street, were visited by burglars early yesterday morning. At No. 3405, occupied by Mr. T. S. Gillett, they made away with six silver napkin-rings, some silver spoons, an overcoat, and two hats. Miscellaneous articles were also taken from the residences Nos. 3417 and 3419. The police were notified.

John Bailey, of the Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, met his sister here yesterday who has been in China for twenty-one years. Her husband was the owner of the first American ship that was ever in Chinese waters. She is visiting the United States in the interest of a claim which her husband has against the Government. She accompanied her brother to St. Paul.

At the annual meeting of the Working-women's Association yesterday afternoon the accounts of the last year were audited and other routine business disposed of. A petition has been prepared requesting the Burlington Railroad Company to allow inmates of the new home at La Grange to travel over the road at reduced rates. The home is reported to be in a good condition, and its facilities are being extended.

A person in the dress of a priest, representing himself as the priest of St. Mary's Church, of Racine, Wis., is practicing a swindle by purchasing a bill of goods and giving a check on the Blackstone National Bank, of Boston, for a larger amount than the bill and receiving the difference in cash. The check proves to be bogus, and inquiry at Racine develops the fact that no such person as the Rev. F. Walsh has ever been known there. By his dress and manner he is calculated to deceive.

Justice Russell yesterday rendered a decision which is likely to attract considerable attention. There came before him by a change of venue three cases wherein the defendants were charged with obstructing the street. Each case had been brought on a city summons which had been served by a police officer. The Justice decided that a police officer had no authority to serve such a summons, although having a right to make arrests, and accordingly dismissed all three cases. J. Cogswell, the furniture man, was one of the defendants.

Mr. D. L. Moody, the evangelist, spent Friday night with his married sister, Mrs. Dr. Washburn, in Racine, Wis., and returned to the city yesterday morning, leaving Mrs. Moody at Evanston to visit her sister, who resides there. He was present for a short time in the Y. M. C. A. lecture-room at the noonday exposition of the Sunday-school lesson by the Rev. Mr. Blanchard, but took no part in the meeting. The rest of the day was spent visiting different friends, particularly his sister, Mrs. William Holden on West Monroe street. He will be a guest at the Grand Pacific until after the convention.

A correspondent complains that there is not sufficient police protection on the West Side, and to prove his assertion cites a disgraceful row that occurred Thursday about 2 o'clock in the morning. From his statement it appears that six roughs became involved in a quarrel in front of E. Jennings', No. 403 West Madison street, and during the disturbance a large rock was thrown through a $150 plate-glass window. One man was severely wounded, and lay on the sidewalk for half an hour before an officer put in an appearance, and then no arrests were made. The correspondent says that the same thing was repeated Friday night, when another fight occurred and another plate-glass window was broken.

A lacrosse match for the championship of the United States between the Calumet Lacrosse Club of this city and the St. Paul Lacrosse Club came off at the Base-Ball Park yesterday. The St. Paul team, though in excellent form and playing a first-class game, were unable to come up to the Calumets, the result being a victory for the home club. The St. Pauls won the first "go" in three minutes; the second, third, and fourth "goes" were won by the Calumets in thirty minutes, forty-five minutes, and thirty seconds respectively. The St. Louis Lacrosse Club will play the victors on the same ground Saturday next.

Thursday Sheriff Hanchett received a telegram from Sheriff Grover, of North Platte, Neb., saying that William White and John Enfield, alleged horse-thieves, were on the train due in Chicago that afternoon, and asking that they be arrested. Chief-Deputy Gleason telephoned to Capt. Gahan at the Stock-Yards, and he caught White, who was alone. He said Enfield had got off the train in Iowa for the purpose of going to Broadwater, Wis. A telegram was sent to the Sheriff at Monroe, Wis., and yesterday an answer was received stating that Enfield was under arrest there. Sheriff Grover is on his way to this city with the necessary extradition papers.

Mr. Leander Stone writes to say that in the excavations now making for the walls of the Indiana Club-house, near Thirty-fourth street, a tree or immense slab of oak has been exposed, lying about three feet below the surface of the ground and directly upon an old beach of large, wave-rolled pebbles. The tree lies at a slight angle with the horizon—just about such an angle as the lake waves make in a storm on a wide, sandy beach. It is decayed into a black, mucky substance on the surface; but there is a core about a foot in width of hard, black, carbonized wood, which has been preserved, and will probably be discussed at the next meeting of the Chicago Academy of Sciences. The tree was evidently washed up on the last gravel beach of that region, and left to be covered by sand either from the action of the water or of winds. If the time which it takes for such a piece of wood to become changed as this has been can be accurately guessed it may be ascertained when that portion of the Fourth Ward was submerged under the waves of Lake Michigan.

Lena Gottlieb filed a bill for divorce Saturday from Aaron Gottlieb in which she sets up a rather novel state of facts. She avers that they were married Feb. 17, 1883, by Justice John P. Murphy, but have never lived together. The reason for this is that Jewish ecclesiastical law does not recognize any marriage unless it is performed by a Rabbi, and it is the custom for Jews to have a marriage by that functionary performed before they live together, even if they have been previously joined by a civil and legal contract. This second and ecclesiastical marriage Aaron has steadily refused to consummate, although Lena says she has been willing to enter into it up to the last two weeks. But now she has discovered that he is a frequenter of a disreputable house on Clark street, below Harrison, she consequently desires to have the legal ties that bind them broken.

Information having been received that Mr. Arthur W. Leslie, of Lincoln, Ill., eloped last Friday with Miss Alma Lacy, of the same town, and that they had come to Chicago, a reporter for THE TRIBUNE looked the happy couple up, and found them at the Palmer. In response to inquiries on the subject Mr. Leslie, who seemed to be an intelligent though beardless youth of not to exceed 22 summers, said that it was not strictly speaking an elopement. He had been keeping company with Miss Lacy for some time, but Mrs. Lacy had strenuously opposed their union. Last Thursday a chum of his was married, and he had come to the conclusion that it was as good an opportunity as he could get, and so had done likewise. After the ceremony he had called upon the bride's mamma and pleaded his offense, but not to her satisfaction. They had then come to Chicago for a little trip, and would return today. Mr. Leslie said he was in the commission business with his father, who was perfectly reconciled to the match.

THE STATE FAIR.

The preparations for the State Fair are in good shape and will be completed, it is confidently expected, by Saturday next. Of the very large tract of building space there is not more than fifty feet now undisposed of. The space in the centre field, covering several acres, is all taken up. The only way in which exhibiters who have not already entered can be accommodated will be by crowding the present entries. In some sections this crowding has already begun. Mr. Conrad, the Acting Secretary, informed a TRIBUNE reporter yesterday that the Fair would be fully double the size of any former State Fair ever held in Illinois, both in the space occupied and in the number of exhibits. Some 200 or more horses are on the ground now, but the exhibits will not begin to arrive until about the latter part of the week. The grounds will be open Thursday next for the reception of all stock and goods for exhibition. All animals and articles for exhibition must be in place in the several departments not later than Tuesday, the 25th inst., at 9 o'clock a. m. The Fair will last from Monday morning until Saturday evening of next week—Sept. 24 to 29.

VINA VINDICATED.

Vina Fields, whose house is at No. 134 Fourth avenue, thinks that an injustice has been done her in the report of a case tried before Justice Meech two or three days ago, wherein she was accused of keeping a disorderly house. The charge was brought against her by Fred Hammer, from whom she rents her premises, and she says that he commenced the prosecution because she would not vacate before her lease expired in order to make room for a disreputable tenant, who had offered to pay more money for the house. She was promptly discharged by Justice Meech, who stated that the prosecution had evidently been brought with a malicious intent. Vina alleges that Hammer has been an unsuccessful hanger-on at her house, and that he brought the prosecution in order to get even.

CITY-HALL.

The city has advertised for lots near the vicinity of Aberdeen and Madison streets and Twenty-seventh and State streets, and a lot near Huron and Clark streets, the latter to be exchanged for city property on Dearborn avenue, between Huron and Superior streets. The sites are desired for engine-houses.

Complaints have been made, especially in the southern part of the city, that the supply of water was not sufficient, and that there was not enough power to force the water up into the upper stories of buildings. Commissioner Cregier says the supply is entirely sufficient, and he sees no cause for complaint. The works are now pumping from 74,000,000 to 76,000,000 gallons a day.

The recent reduction made by the rival gas companies to $1 per 1,000 for gas will not benefit the city until next January, as the contract was made until that date at $1.60 per 1,000. Mr. E. T. Watkins, President of the Chicago Gaslight & Coke Company, said yesterday: "The contract of our company with the city for gas expires Jan. 1, 1884, and our reduced price goes into effect Nov. 1, 1883, so that the difference between the prices for that length of time will not be a very great matter. Nothing has been said by either party about allowing the city the reduced price for those two months."

Mayor Harrison's plan of utilizing the police-patrol boxes for advertising purposes, by which he claims the city can obtain a handsome revenue, has been given a trial, and the boxes at the corners of Quincy and La Salle and Clark and Randolph streets have been decorated with many cards of brilliant hues. There are 400 boxes in the city and 3,200 panels, and it is claimed that by renting these spaces a net annual revenue of $50,000 can be secured—enough to sustain the patrol system. The order authorizing such disposition of the boxes is still pending in the Council.

THE TRIBUNE a short time ago exposed the expensive and loose manner in which Gen. Lieb was conducting the Water-Office, and pointed out how it could be more economically run by discharging a number of useless employés. It would appear that Commissioner Cregier had heeded these timely suggestions and profited thereby, for yesterday he took the first step toward reorganizing one branch of that department. There have been thirty men employed who were divided into three gangs, and whose duty it was to attend to breaks, to locate pipes, and to shut off water. All of these men were discharged yesterday. About fifteen of the best ones will be re-engaged, and will attend to all of the work, which they can easily do.

The tenement and factory inspectors last week examined 229 houses, thirty-eight factories, made seventy special examinations, served seventy-three notices, and abated seventy-eight nuisances. No. 676 Noble street is reported to have defective drainage and to be in a very filthy condition. Nos. 52 and 54 North Peoria street are also in unsanitary condition, the sewers being choked, and stagnant water having accumulated under the houses. Of No. 71 George street the Inspector says: "This lot is built up solidly with houses the occupants of which are principally Poles. There are about twenty families in all, averaging about six to each house. The waste-pipes are not properly connected with the sewer. The stagnant water lodges under and in front of the houses, and, with the garbage that is thrown in the street and gutter, makes it one of the worst places in the Fourteenth Ward. Occupants seem to take pleasure in living amidst filth that an animal would take exception to."

SETTLING TRADES.

THE CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE CLEARING-HOUSE TO BE INAUGURATED TOMORROW—THE RULES.

Charles H. Lunt has been appointed manager of the Chicago Board of Trade Clearing-House, an institution which will revolutionize the methods of doing business on 'Change, and which, no doubt, will afford suggestions to the business men of other cities. Tomorrow all members of the board are expected to send their addresses to the Clearing-House rooms, No. 126 Washington street, the offices formerly occupied by President Hobbs. The institution will bring about a new mode of settling trades and will facilitate the payment of balances. A large number of trades may be settled by a single payment or collection. All collections and payments will be reduced to one item for each house. Instead of the old involved system, known to the Board of Trade men as "ringing"—and the "ring" was often "busted," bringing heavy loss to some one—a man will now have to deal only with those with whom he directly trades, and will not be dependent upon third or fourth parties for his money. The clearings of the banks will be heavily reduced. The Clearing-House will be able to detect anything wrong whenever the credit of any firm is shaken.

The following regulations of the Board of Trade Clearing-House, which will be distributed in the Board of Trade tomorrow, will be read with interest not only by Chicago business-men, but by those in other cities where the clearing-house system may be adopted.

I. The style and address of all business houses making clearings must be registered at the Clearing-House and any subsequent change in address reported.

II. Printed reports to show the net balances, as provided in General Rules No. 23, Sec. 6, paragraph 2, must be obtained at the Clearing-House.

III. Parties whose reports shall show a net balance against them shall accompany the report with a check for the said net balance made payable to the order of Chicago Board of Trade Clearing-House, all such checks to be certified. No money will be accepted, but the checks of the Clearing-House may be used in payment of balances.

IV. All reports must be in the clearing-house by 11 a. m. of each business day, under penalty of a fine of $10 and the posting of the delinquent party on 'Change at 12 m.

V. Parties having no items to clear must so report in writing, and parties whose reports may be equal on both sides, and those whose reports show a credit balance, must put them in the clearing-house under penalty as provided in Art. IV. above.

N. B.—To insure accuracy and expedite the clearings parties must be sure the amounts claimed are mutually agreed upon as correct. A penalty of $1 will be collected of any party claiming from or allowing to another party a wrong amount, and also for each error in footing or subtraction. All doubtful items must be excluded from the report.

VI. In case of the payment by the clearing-house to any party of an amount claimed by said party, but which amount has not been received by the clearing-house, the amount must be immediately refunded upon receipt of notice to that effect.

VII. In case a party in his report allows another party an amount in excess of that claimed by the second party the excess will be refunded to the first party.

VIII. The charge for clearing, as provided by the rules, has been fixed at one-half cent for each item in each report, the same to be paid monthly on presentation of the bill by the clearing-house. Fines to be paid at time of notification that the same have been incurred, under penalty of the withholding of the next amount due such debtor, or reporting the delinquency to the Board of Directors.

IX. Parties going out of town or ceasing to transact business must leave notice thereof at the clearing-house and withdraw the notice on their resumption of trading.

X. Parties whose reports may show a net balance in their favor may call for checks after 1 p. m.

XI. No reports shall be amended after 11 a. m.

XII. Office hours shall be from 9 a. m. to 2:30 p. m.

EDUCATIONAL.

A PAPER BY SUPERINTENDENT HOWLAND ON "ELEMENTS OF GROWTH IN SCHOOL LIFE."

The meeting of the Educational Institute yesterday was numerously attended. The Superintendent, Mr. Howland, stated that Dr. Scouler, of Pontiac, would deliver the next address. Mr. Howland followed the announcement with the reading of his paper on the "Elements of Growth in School Life." It was exhaustive and received the very closest thought of the institute. It abounded in suggestions which the teachers who heard it will doubtless be glad to adopt, and with success. The important things which he admonished them to adhere to were to teach children how to observe, to think, and to do. The scholar should be taught how to tell in his own simple way what he has learned. Efforts should be made to disabuse the mind of the idea that mental study was drudgery. If labor was that, it was aimless and fruitless. He had often had occasion to note the value of a kind word or a recognition for work honestly and faithfully done. The blending of the thought and the word should not be overlooked. It has too often been the case that words were hurried over while the thought was remote. He had noticed that the arab of the street and the cherub of the house never misapplied a slang word. Their thoughts and words blended. The bane of the school-room, especially as regarded mathematics, was the set rule by which pupils were sought to be instructed. He would admonish teachers to see that in this respect especially pupils should be taught to do something themselves in order to have the proper impressions made. The purpose of this was intellectual growth. In conclusion, the children should be taught quicker perception, clearer judgment, logic, and taste—how to observe, how to think, and how to do. The true man was the self-made man.

The paper was indorsed by Prof. Parker, who said it was the most instructive to which he had listened. The grandest study in the world was the child mind.

Mr. Kirk thought the paper was so full of ripe suggestions that he moved the appointment of a committee to secure a place in which Superintendent Howland could read it for the benefit of all the teachers of the city. This was adopted, and the institute adjourned.

ST. JAMES' PARISH.

WHO SHALL SUCCEED FATHER RIORDAN?

The people of St. James' Roman Catholic Parish continue to be very considerably worked up about the question of a pastor to succeed the Rev. P. W. Riordan, who is to be consecrated Coadjutor Archbishop of San Francisco today. It is probable that a large majority of the parishioners would prefer to have the Rev. D. J. Riordan, brother of the retiring pastor, to any other, but it is not likely that he will be appointed. It is said that he wishes to remain where he is as pastor of St. Elizabeth's. He has just purchased a church lot, and is about to commence building thereon. His parish is new and not yet well organized, and it is believed he feels it his duty to remain there at least until his church is built and everything in good shape.

Among the other names mentioned in connection with the parisher are those of Fathers Noonan of St. Edward's, Hodnett of St. Malachi's, Dorney and Cashman. Those who mention these gentlemen are but guessing, however. A few days ago a prominent lay Catholic of the parish who has the confidence of the Vicar-General and the Archbishop said that it was quite likely that the Rev. Dr. Tighe, pastor of the Holy Angels' Church, would be a good man. He is a good business man, an excellent pastor, and, having served as assistant pastor at St. James' at one time, is thoroughly acquainted with the people. He would be entirely acceptable. Next to the appointment of Father D. J. Riordan, his would give the most satisfaction. In case Father Tighe is made pastor of St. James', Father Scannell, late Vicar-General of the Diocese of Nashville, a man of high repute for scholarship and administrative ability, will be appointed to succeed him. This selection would in some measure compensate the Catholics of the Holy Angels' Parish for the loss of their present excellent pastor.

VACANT BISHOPRICS.

THERE ARE THREE AT PRESENT IN THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

"There are three vacant Bishoprics in the Methodist Episcopal Church at the present time," said one of the leading Methodist pastors in the city yesterday. "Bishop Levi Scott, Bishop E. H. Haven, and Bishop Jesse T. Peck have all died since the last General Conference met, and their places will be filled by the General Conference that meets in Philadelphia next May. Bishop Matthew Simpson also is quite aged and feeble, and may possibly be retired at that time, and in that case there will be another vacancy to fill."

"Who stands the best chance to fill one of these vacancies?"

"Dr. W. X. Ninde, President of the Garrett Biblical Institute, at Evanston," said the gentleman addressed. "He is the unanimous choice of the Detroit conference, of which he is a member, and from which he is certain to be elected a delegate to the General Conference. He is all the talk in the East and in the West. I had a talk with an ex-Governor of Connecticut lately, who is a very prominent Methodist layman, and he told me that Ninde was all the rage in the East. I suppose he is sure to be elected."

"Who else is spoken of for the position?"

"Dr. C. H. Fowler, the missionary secretary; Dr. J. M. Buckley, editor of the New York Christian Advocate; Dr. C. H. Payne, President of the Wesleyan University at Delaware, O.; Dr. J. M. Walden, of Cincinnati. I can't say which of them stands the best chance, and I do not know of any other candidates. I do not think that Dr. Hatfield or Dr. George has any show."

A LOST PLAY.

A DRAMATIC AUTHOR SUES TO RECOVER THE VALUE THEREOF.

David Belasco, an aspiring dramatic author, commenced a suit yesterday against J. M. Hill, the theatrical manager, to recover $5,000 damages for the loss of a manuscript play entitled "The Lone Pine." Belasco says he handed the manuscript of the play to Hill for criticism, and, of course, subsequent acceptance. After waiting a reasonable time, without any tidings, he suggested that if the play was not acceptable he would like a return of his manuscript. He was put off from time to time, and finally the last part of the play was returned, Hill saying that was all he could find. The prospective prospects of the play Mr. Belasco figures at $5,000, and brings suit to recover that amount.

A TRIBUNE representative saw Mr. Hill last night and obtained from him a story of the transaction, which differs very materially from that given by Mr. Belasco. According to Mr. Hill's story he met Mr. Belasco in New York about two years ago, when the latter submitted to him the plot of a play, "The Lone Pine." Mr. Hill was favorably impressed with it, and made a contract with Mr. Belasco to produce the play provided it was completed by the following February, Denman Thompson to play the leading part. Mr. Belasco, after waiting a long time, wrote the first two acts, which were acceptable. They were sent to Mr. Thompson, but the third act was not written until about the time the contract expired, and the last act was never written at all. Mr. Hill considered the contract broken, of course, and when Mr. Belasco demanded the manuscript of the incomplete play he was unable to get hold of it at once. None of the manuscript was ever returned to the author, but Mr. Hill claims that he is the one who has a good cause of action for damages, Mr. Belasco having broken the contract.

SOUTH WATER STREET.

PEACHES, GRAPES, MUSKMELONS, ETC., IN ABUNDANCE.

Peaches! Peaches! was the burden of the song of the South Water street merchants yesterday, the sidewalks being more heavily burdened with this fruit than any previous day the present season. The Michigan orchards furnished over 10,000 baskets, and Maryland and Delaware were represented to the extent of about 3,000 half-bushel baskets and almost as many more half-bushel boxes. The Michigan fruit was mostly small and hard, a very small proportion of it being fit for table use. The frosts of a week ago interfered seriously with the ripening of the peaches in that State, and their progress toward maturity since has been very slow. Yesterday's receipts were, however, in a fair condition for preserving, and many were bought for that purpose. The demand for shipment has tended to keep up prices, which ranged at 50 to 75 cents per peck-basket. Next week will witness larger receipts, and it is anticipated that lower prices will prevail. The peaches coming from Maryland and Delaware appeared to be the last run of the crop. Picked before they were fully ripe, they had become wilted and specky in transit, and many half-bushel baskets were sold at $1, the dealers being glad to get even so much. Some few choice lots sold at $2 per basket. Those coming in boxes were in many cases in a worse condition, and sold at 75 cents.

Grapes were very plentiful, coming from almost every point of the compass, the Concords being in large majority. Prices ranged much lower than last week, the sales being at 4 cents to 7 cents per pound, the lower price for the less desirable varieties.

Apples have shown heavier receipts within the last few days, Southern Illinois and Michigan furnishing most of this fruit. Good, bright table apples could be bought at $3 to $3.25, and the cooking varities sold at $2 to $3.

Pears continued comparatively scarce, and were selling at 50 cents to $1 for Eastern grown, while Californias were held at $2.75 to $3.50 per forty-pound box. Muscat grapes from California sold at $3.75 to $4 per twenty-pound box.

Watermelons are about out of the market, but muskmelons were so abundant yesterday that a bushel crate could be bought for 25 to 50 cents. Michigan furnished most of these melons.

There were some large damson plums from Western New York, but they had deteriorated sadly in transportation, and could be bought, the best of them, at $1 to $1.25 per twelve-quart drawer.

AN AUCTION MUSS.

NEUFELD'S ANSWER TO THE CHARGES PREFERRED BY MOORE.

THE TRIBUNE recently published the bill of Walter H. Moore against Nathan Neufeld. The answer of the defendant denies that Walter H. Moore had any interest in the property of Neufeld & Moore, auction and commission company, except to the extent of $500, which Moore deposited with Neufeld to secure one-half of the losses of the business, which Moore was to bear. He says the corporation did business for three months, and in that time incurred losses amounting to $3,145.84. He denies that he sold out the stock of the corporation at an inadequate price in the absence of Moore, and claims that Moore drew $323.21, and that Moore's share of the losses amounted to $1,572.92, and that after allowing Moore the $500 he had deposited and $300 wages there would be a balance due from Moore to the company of $1,096.13. He charges that Moore has frequently appropriated to his own use the money and property of the corporation, and that he has not, as he agreed, attended to the business. He says he disposed of the stock because the corporation had matured liabilities and no money to pay them with; that $250 was due for rent, and that $2,700 losses had been incurred, and he concluded to sell the remaining stock, inventoried at $1,638, for $1,275. He alleges that during the existence of the corporation he repeatedly loaned it money, sometimes as much as $800, to keep it afloat. He claims that he invested $3,000, of which he will probably recover $470.58. He denies that he withholds any money of the corporation, but says he has applied the money to the payment of the corporation indebtedness. He admits that he still holds $70 to cover outstanding liabilities. He denies that he, for the purpose of injuring the corporation, or to depreciate its stock, opened up a pretended auction for the sale of cigars at the corporation's place of business, so as to bring it into disrepute. He admits that he carries on an auction business at such place, but denies that the lease, fixtures, and money involved belong to the corporation or to Moore, and denies that Moore is entitled to any accounting for the profits. He claims the city license was issued to and paid for by him, and that he did not procure the revocation of the license for the purpose of defrauding the stockholders. He admits that he sold Moore's $500 worth of stock, but only after demanding from him the payment to him of one-half of the losses. He claims that he dissolved the corporation by virtue of a provision of the contract of May 3, 1883. He avers that the stock of Moore, when sold, was of no value, as the whole capital amounted to $3,500, and the losses to over $3,100, half of which Moore was liable for. He denies that the loss was caused through any fault of his, but was partially caused by Moore's inattention to business, and that Moore had been guilty of fraudulently appropriating to his use the money of the corporation and of an attempt by fraudulent letters written to fictitious persons to defraud Neufeld.

THE COAL TRADE.

A DISTRIBUTING STATION TO BE ESTABLISHED IN SOUTH CHICAGO.

Mr. A. B. Meeker, who is largely interested in the coal trade in this city, was asked yesterday if any arrangement had been made regarding the proposed distributing station in South Chicago which had been referred to in yesterday's TRIBUNE. He said it was the intention of the coal shippers to have a general distributing station built at the earliest possible date, and that South Chicago had been selected as the most suitable place, that being the connective point between the Belt Line and the Calumet River. No definit plans had yet been made, however. It was only Friday last that the leading coal shippers had visited South Chicago for a preliminary investigation. They had gone down there on his invitation in the tug Calumet. The party included representatives from the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Company; Lehigh Valley Railroad and Coal Company; Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron Company; Pennsylvania Coal Company; W. L. Scott & Co., Erie, Pa.; Erie Railroad Company; Andrew Langdon, and J. Langdon & Co., of Buffalo. The party represented the leading coal interests in the country. They were most favorably impressed with South Chicago, and it was informally decided that the distributive station should be built there. A frontage of 3,000 to 4,000 feet would be required. The exact location had not yet been fixed upon. Owing to the rapid increase in the trade in this city a central station of this kind had become an almost imperative necessity. The distributive territory centering in Chicago extended south to St. Louis and northwest along the Northern Pacific line to Western Dakota, and covered all the intermediate territory for an equal distance. The increase in the trade was especially great in a northwestern direction. A cheap and ready means of transfer from vessels was wanted for this great country business. At present there was no regular system—each firm had to make the best arrangement it could, with each separate railway company. The coal-yards were located at or near the various depots, but no railroad company would give storage or accommodation to the loaded cars for another line. All the lines were friendly to the belt system, however. Each shipper could keep his stock at his own dock at the distributive station. There would be a saving of the expense of switching, hauling, cost of transfer, and in various other ways. The station would be run in connection with the Buffalo distributing station: the coal from all the Eastern mines would be sent to Buffalo and brought here by water, instead of being delayed waiting for empty grain-cars as at present. Each shipper would have his own dock here, as at Buffalo. He wished THE TRIBUNE to contradict a false report which had appeared in another morning paper yesterday to the effect that the Retailers' Association had waited on the Anthracite Coal-Shippers' Association for the purpose of getting an abatement of prices. Nothing of the kind had been spoken of. THE TRIBUNE report of the matter was correct. The retailers asked that the shippers stop selling coal at retail—that was the sole object of the conference.

ALLEGED SMUGGLING.

THE CASE AGAINST MRS. PARISH DISMISSED.

The case of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Parish, of No. 864 West Indiana street, came up before United States Commissioner Hoyne yesterday. The defendant was charged with smuggling goods from Europe, $800 worth of silks having been seized a short time ago by Special-Agent Keefe, and the prosecution was brought by that official. Mrs. Van Norman, who has been under an indictment for aiding in procuring an abortion, testified that Mrs. Parish was her partner in a lying-in hospital at No. 203 Evergreen avenue, and had stated to her the nature of the smuggling business. Mrs. Parish stated that she had made thirty-two trips across the ocean, and each time had brought goods to this country without paying duty. The defendant is said to have disposed of a large amount of contraband goods in Chicago, St. Louis, and Boston. Col. Keefe considered that he had a very strong case against her, and was very much surprised when Assistant United States District-Attorney Baldwin announced that he should abandon the case, as no evidence had been offered at the continued examination. Col. Keefe was very indignant, and intimated pretty plainly that the attorney for the prosecution was acting unfairly. He afterwards criticised the attorney severely. Mr. Baldwin says the case was abandoned for want of evidence. Commissioner Hoyne also dismissed the case of Walter H. Moore, charged by his employer, N. Neufeldt, with using the United States mails for fraudulent purposes.

RECEIVER WANTED.

THE SIGWALT SEWING-MACHINE COMPANY IN TROUBLE.

A bill was filed yesterday in the Circuit Court by Frederick A. Arnold and Conrad Furst to close up the affairs of the Sigwalt Sewing-Machine Company. They represent that the company was incorporated in 1878 with a capital stock of $75,035, of which 50 per cent was paid in in cash, and the remainder by the declaration of a stock dividend of 50 per cent. The present stockholders are as follows: De Witt Campbell, 155 shares; Frederick A. Arnold, 150 shares; Malck A. Loring, 102 shares; L. B. Clark, 140 shares; Myron A. Decker, 73 shares; Charles Sigwalt, 50 shares; Conrad Furst, 40 shares; John Sigwalt Jr., 11 shares; Frank McCabe, 9 shares; Benjamin S. Giblin, 4 shares; Samuel Shayer, 15 shares; and J. W. Corey, 1 share. The officers of the corporation are De Witt Campbell, President, Treasurer, and Superintendent; F. A. Arnold, Vice-President; and L. B. Clark, Secretary. The office of the company is at No. 387 Wabash avenue, and its factory at Arlington Heights, in this county. For the last two years, by reason of close competition in business and the bad management of the President, the company has been doing a losing business, until now its capital has been entirely sunk, and it is insolvent.

Campbell, as is charged, holds a $5,000 mortgage on the factory and several judgment notes, all of which are overdue. Under threats of entering up judgments and ruining the company at once he has compelled the other stockholders to elect him President, Treasurer, and Superintendent. The Superintendent ought to be a skilled mechanic, and to spend all his time at the factory, but Campbell stays in the city, while the factory is left to run itself. The result has been great waste and unnecessary expense. The stockholders have often remonstrated, but have only been met with anger and profanity, and threats from Campbell that he would, if interfered with, foreclose his mortgage; that he owned the institution entirely, and would do as he pleased; that nobody had any right to say a word, and he would brook no interference. The 31st of July last an account of stock and assets was taken, showing the liabilities to be $123,789.82 and the assets about the same sum. The complainants, however, charge that the items of real estate, machinery, patterns, book accounts, tools, and manufactured goods are largely overestimated, so that the whole capital stock has been swallowed. Some time ago two of the experienced employés of the company offered to make a contract to run the business at a saving of $25,000 a year, but Campbell refused to allow anything to be done. Since then the business has gone at a constantly-increasing loss, until now not even the most skillful management can retrieve the company's affairs. The company has about $20,000 out in judgment notes, $15,000 of which is held by the Commercial National Bank, and also has $50,000 of floating indebtedness. The complainants therefore ask for the appointment of a Receiver to close up the company's affairs and for an injunction to prevent Campbell from further interfering with its affairs, or entering up judgments on his judgment notes, or foreclosing mortgage.

ILLINOIS CLUB.

RECEPTION LAST EVENING AFTER THE SUMMER VACATION.

The Illinois Club house on Ashland avenue was opened last night by a reception to members only, no ladies being present. During the summer months the rooms have been newly furnished, decorated, and carpeted, so that now they present an appearance of elegant luxury which could scarcely be improved upon. On the upper floor partitions have been taken down, and the apartments have been rendered more suitable than in the past for club comforts. A number of superb oil paintings adorn the parlors, some of which belong to the Illinois Art Association, which is connected with the club, and which will give a reception in November. Among the works are two masterpieces depicting peasant life, one by A. Gilisenti and one by C. Rinaldi. T. Mazzoni and L. C. Earle are represented by paintings which are particularly fine.

The reception last night was in the nature of an informal "house-warming." President J. Harley Bradley received the members, who were delighted at the improved appearance of their quarters. Lunch was served at 10 o'clock, and during the evening the members chatted and played billiards to the music of Hand's orchestra. Next year the club expects to have a larger billiard-hall by the addition which it is proposed to build to the club-house on the vacant lot south of the present structure. The affairs of the club are in a prosperous condition, and it enters upon the social season under favorable auspices.

WALKING IN.

WHAT BEFEL AN ENTHUSIASTIC CLERK WHO WENT OUT TO INVESTIGATE THE CORN CROP.

About the time of the late cold snap, a Board of Trade man, who asks as a special favor that his name be not given, said to one of his clerks, in whose judgment he had much confidence, "Go to Iowa, find out what damage has been done to the corn by the frost, and wire me the state of affairs."

The clerk, after he had gotten about a hundred miles into the State, telegraphed: "Crop a failure; buy at once."

The Board of Trade man who wishes his name kept close bought 50,000 bushels.

The clerk, getting still further into the bowels of the land, telegraphed: "Crop ruined; buy all you can."

The Board of Trade man, exulting at his wisdom in sending a competent man out to see how things were, bought 50,000 bushels more, and began calculating what he should do with his gains.

Then it suddenly came to pass that corn went down, and, not being endowed with staying qualities, the buyer sold out at a loss of $2,000.

Then he tried his hand at telegraphing, and this is the word he sent to the clerk, who had by this time gotten pretty near the Missouri River: "The further you go the longer your walk back will be."

"I do not understand," said the clerk in reply.

"I mean that your reports have cost me $2,000, and that you can walk back from wherever you are. No remittances from me."

And the clerk is walking in.

DOWN FOR LIFE.

KEENAN ESCAPES THE HALTER, BUT IS PERMANENTLY ASSIGNED TO THE PENITENTIARY.

The knowledge that State's-Attorney Mills was to make the closing argument in the Keenan-Hensley murder case filled the Criminal Court yesterday morning, quite a number of the listeners being ladies. Mr. Mills said he wouldn't ask for the hanging of Keenan if there was a reasonable doubt of his guilt, but did so because the prosecution had proved that the defendant was a cool, icy, red-handed murderer. Particular attention was called to the statute which says that no person is disqualified as a witness by reason of his being a party or otherwise. After relating the circumstances of the killing, Mr. Mills characterized it as one of the most atrocious and cruel murders ever committed in the world. As to Haber Korn, not a word was said against his character by a reputable witness. Moore, the thief, had testified that Haberkorn told him in 1880 that he didn't believe Keenan was guilty. That was a perjured statement, since the accused was not indicted for murder until 1881. The strongest proof of guilt was in Keenan's letters: "If those parties [Connors and Riley] turn up and say that thing [the revolver] is yours, and that you gave it to me, you keep still, and I will say it is mine, and get you out of it."

The jury were instructed at a quarter of 12, and agreed within half an hour after they left the room. The verdict, however, was not returned until the court reconvened at 2 o'clock. It was "Guilty, with imprisonment for life." Keenan, who had been a little nervous in the morning, seemed pleased that his neck was safe, but was not particularly moved by the announcement. His attorneys were apparently satisfied, but Mr. Stark had the jury polled and entered a motion for a new trial, which will probably be argued the 13th of October.

One juror stated to THE TRIBUNE reporter that all except Mr. Hale voted "guilty" on the first ballot, but he simply did it "as a feeler," believing that Keenan was guilty. All except two or three were in favor of hanging, but finally agreed on a life-sentence, looking at the case in this way: Keenan is a desperate, bad man, and if he is locked up he will be accessible in case Connors or Riley, his associates in the crime, turn up, and probably furnish evidence against them.

"Are you satisfied?" said the reporter to Keenan after he had been taken back to jail.

"No," he replied. "I expected an acquittal. I didn't even look for a disagreement, because Haberkorn lied, and I thought the jury would think so. My attorneys have done well by me, and I have no fault to find with them."

If the motion for a new trial is denied the case will go to the Supreme Court, the grounds for the appeal being the admission of Keenan's letters without proving that he wrote them, and the refusal of the court to give an instruction that if Haberkorn was not corroborated his testimony was not sufficient to warrant a conviction.

"We dropped the alibi," said Mr. Percy Shuman, "because, after an investigation of all the evidence for the defense and the probable rebuttal, we made up our minds that the railroad men who testified at the last trial were so scattered that they would be hard to get—that we would prejudice our case by compelling them to come, and therefore we decided to rely entirely on the case of the State, which we didn't think was strong on account of the character of Haberkorn and the obvious trade made with him by the State's-Attorney to testify against Keenan. We believe Haberkorn told the truth about loading the revolver and the return of the men to his saloon, but that he introduced Keenan's name (Riley and Connors being gone) because he was unable to clear himself."

COUNTY INFIRMARY.

A VISIT TO THE POOR FARM AND INSANE ASYLUM BY THE FRENCH CONSUL.

Mr. Edmond Bruwaert, the French Consul for the entire Northwest of the United States, yesterday made a visit to the County Insane Asylum in Jefferson in company with County Commissioner Mattocks. It is the purpose of Mr. Bruwaert to thoroughly familiarize himself with public institutions of all kinds in this country, and he has seen a good deal of them already. What he saw in Jefferson pleased him immensely, at least as far as the apparent condition and treatment of the inmates is concerned. That the grounds and buildings showed strong indications of neglect did not escape him either, but Commissioner Mattocks' explanation that things were in a state of transition, and that extensive repairs and alterations were contemplated, was received by him with a polite smile. The imposing exterior of the new Infirmary Buildings pleased the foreign visitor hardly less than the fine inside arrangements, and the order and cleanliness to be found everywhere in the vast building was loudly praised by him. There was, however, even in the new building, plenty of evidence that dirt will accumulate in such places unless the scrubbing-brush is vigorously and unceasingly applied to the small corners. Nor are the evidences missing that the building is constructed somewhat on the Cheap John style, and will hardly be a thing of joy forever, but on the contrary a source of continuous outlay on account of repairs. The wood-work is all shrinking, leaks have already been discovered in the roof, and a practical builder would probably discover a multitude of defects which will cost far more to be remedied than it would have cost to avoid them. The filling up of the grounds around the new infirmary appears to be going on nicely, but it seems inexcusable that the grounds adjoining the old and partly abandoned buildings, and, in fact, the entire yard back of the Insane Asylum, are lumbered up with rubbish of all kinds, and dug up and torn up as if boys had been out on a frolic. There are people enough in both institutions who, under proper direction, would be able to keep the yard tidy and to put the unavoidable waste of furniture and fixtures into marketable shape. It defeats every attempt to develop the educational features of public institutions like the infirmary to surround them with evidences of neglect and decay, caused by nothing but carelessness. There is one feature of the infirmary which promises to be highly successful—its foundling department. Some seventy infants who had been refused admission to the private charities in the city have thus far been taken care of in the female wards of the infirmary, with splendid results. Some of the young mothers from the lying-in department have had milk to spare for the little waifs, and quite a number of the old women around the institution have proven themselves splendid nurses. The large, airy rooms are well adapted to the bringing up of infants, and the appearance of the little strangers thrust on the charities of the world bespeaks health and comfort.

In the Insane Asylum overcrowding was noticeable to a large degree, and the basement stories of the building betokened everywhere the necessity of thorough repairs. Some of the idiots have been placed in the old Infirmary Buildings, but that seems a very poor makeshift. Dr. Spray stated that the crowded condition of the asylum began to make itself felt on the general health of the inmates, and was a matter no longer to be trifled with. The French Consul expressed himself as highly gratified with the system in the Insane Asylum, and showed special interest in the pathological department, opened only a short time ago for the purpose of better keeping track of individual cases.

LORD COLERIDGE.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR HIS RECEPTION AND ENTERTAINMENT.

Extensive preparations have been made for the reception of Lord Chief-Justice Coleridge of England, who will arrive here next Saturday evening in company with his son, the Hon. Gilbert Coleridge, and other gentlemen. The Reception Committee, composed of the following gentlemen: Oliver H. Horton, the Hon. Elihu B. Washburne, the Hon. John N. Jewett, Gen. Philip H. Sheridan, Abram M. Pence, the Hon. John A. Logan, the Hon. Lyman Trumbull, the Hon. John D. Caton, the Hon. Melville W. Fuller, William C. Grant, Henry W. King, the Hon. Lambert Tree, the Hon. Thomas F. Withrow, the Hon. Isaac N. Arnold, the Hon. William C. Goudy, and the Hon. Leonard Swett, will leave on a special train on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway Saturday and meet the distinguished party at La Porte, Ind. Tuesday evening, Sept. 25, a banquet will be given at the Grand Pacific, which, it is said, will be one of the finest affairs of the kind ever gotten up by Mr. Drake. The price of each plate was at first fixed at $15, but was subsequently placed at $10, including wine. At this banquet the Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States, the Judge of the State Courts of Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Iowa, and Wisconsin, the United States and State Senators of Illinois, and other prominent men have been invited, many of whom have signified their intention of being present.

LAKE.

The Board of Trustees held a meeting yesterday afternoon. The report of the experts Zimmerman and Gaunt on Town-Clerk Byrne and the Water Department of the town was read and referred to the Committee of the Whole. The reports were published in THE TRIBUNE at the time they were first presented to the board. The remainder of the July pay-rolls, except those of the Water Department and Superintendent of Roads, were approved.

The Board of Education of District No. 2, Hyde Park and Lake, have rented the basement of the Baptist Church at Englewood for the accommodation of 150 children who are now receiving only half-day instruction. The rooms will be ready for occupancy Oct. 1.

The Englewood Baptist Church, which has been enlarged by cutting the building in half, moving the rear half eighteen feet and nine inches, and building in the space, will be rededicated today. The church has also been raised two feet, and a large and airy basement added, which will be used as a Sunday-school room. The seating capacity will be 325 persons, which can be increased to 400 when occasion requires. The building has been repainted and frescoed, and makes a very handsome structure. The cost of the alterations have already amounted to $2,675, and the furnishing of the basement will amount to $600 or $800 more. The building committee who have had the matter in charge are Messrs. Ishi Smith, J. Badenoch Jr., and J. C. Dennison. The dedicatory sermon will be preached this morning by the Rev. W. P. Elsdon. The Rev. F. G. Thearle will assist in the service. A new organ, presided over by Mrs. Eleanor Smith, will be one of the features of the service today.

LAKE VIEW.

The question of changing the form of the town government is attracting a great deal of attention just now. It is claimed by the advocates of this movement that the charter under which the town is now being governed is entirely inadequate to the needs of a large and rapidly-increasing population. The town being large and its interests diversified, it is desirable that each section should be represented in the board. For this reason some are in favor of adopting the city charter under the general laws of the State. Others think that it is best to let well enough alone. The town is being governed fully as well if not better than any of the other suburban towns. They also fear that the expenses will be very much increased by the change. In order to find out public opinion and give both sides a chance to discuss the question, a meeting has been called at the town-hall for Wednesday evening next, and another at Cook's Hall for Saturday evening. It is also contemplated to have meetings at Ravenswood and other portions of the town at some future time, and of which due notice will be given.

GRAND CROSSING.

The Lake George Sportsmen's Association held a contest for the pigeon and glass-ball medals of the association at Kleinman's Park, Grand Crossing, yesterday. A. J. White won the badge in the pigeon contest by the following score: Turtle, 8; Holton, 8; Stell, 9; Goodrich, 9; Vannatta, 8; Foss, 5; Cruver, 7; Hall, 5; Bour, 8; Ditterly, 4; Conley, 8; White, 10; Barnard, 9; McGowan, 7; E. Hunter, 7; C. Hunter, 7; Shehan, 7.

Conley won a half-interest in the glass-ball badge by the following score: E. Hunter, 9; Stell, 5; Vannatta, 8; Conley, 11; White, 8; Turtle, 10; Goodrich, 9; Cruver, 4; Thacker, 11; C. Hunter, 2; Barnard, 8; McGowan, 11; Ditterly, 3; Bour, 10; Holden, 7; Hall, 6.

On the shoot-off between Conley and Thacker the former won.

CHELTENHAM BEACH.

An auction sale of property at Cheltenham Beach was held yesterday by Layton, Thayer & Co. Following were the sales made: Lots 134 to 145, inclusive, Division 2, F. G. Hanen, Chicago, $20,000; Lot 149, Division 1, G. F. Brown, $800; Lot 177, Division 3, John B. Strasburger, $900; N. ½ Lot 63, Division 3, John Corbett, $325; S. ½ Lot 63, Division 3, Dr. W. B. Ferris, $327; Lot 62, Division 3, Dr. W. B. Ferris, $650.

RAVENSWOOD.

Two weddings occurred Wednesday morning. Miss Ida V. Columbia, a late graduate of the high school, and Mr. Sanford L. Crain were married. No reception was had on account of sickness in the family.

Thursday Miss Sara A. Frost and Dr. Harry Parsons were married at Mr. Angel's residence. The presents were many and tasteful.

THE POLISH JEWS.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Almost every day the telegraph brings news of fresh outbreaks of violence against the Jews in European countries, and now and then we read an editorial, or the reproduction of one, attempting to explain the causes of these persecutions, and, while as a rule they condemn them, pretend to show that certain peculiar traits in the Jewish character could only have started and stimulated this state of fanaticism. They mention especially "exclusiveness." Yes, it is a fact, the Jews in Europe have not intermingled with their neighbors to any extent. But who is responsible for this? Let us see. There was nothing in the habits and carriage of the Jews which differed from that of any other nation prior to the period of the abandonment of their country. There was nothing about them when they looked for new homes which could tend to persuade other nations to think they sought to establish a régime of their own among them. If the Gentiles would have left them unmolested, if they would have acted friendly with them, and had given them human rights; if, instead of hunting and slaughtering them like beasts the last ten centuries, they would have loved them and extended to them brotherly feelings, the Jews would never have excluded themselves; separation would never have had a chance to grow among them. They would have had the same interests to fight for as their neighbors and protectors, and it would have been a blessing for the persecutors as well as those who suffered so much "exclusiveness," but under compulsion. They were forced, if at all allowed to live, to restrict themselves to a certain quarter within the city; they were shown and ordered where to live; there they had to stay among themselves, and only at certain hours of the day had they the privilege of traversing the other parts of the city. They were forbidden to pursue agriculture and handicrafts; they could not buy a foot of land, and could not become citizens, and when they showed themselves on the streets they were insulted. Under such a treatment what results could you expect—to submit to their persecutors and throw away all the sentiment and thought out of which their character was formed for the sake of a life of contentment? No, no! Their outward feebleness grew into inner strength; they clung together more than ever; they stood to their faith better than ever; they remembered their ancient history, so full of glory, oftener than ever, and looked to the future with their hearts full of hope. They could not help clinging to everything that was left to them, it seemed so precious to them, more so yet when it differed from that of their persecutors. They could not help loving the gold and trying to get wealthy, when they were so restricted in acquiring it; when they knew they were looked at with jealousy for it, and that often it was taken from them by force. Wherever, though, they were given human rights, there all separation vanished; and I am glad I can point to one nation in Europe where they have no cause to shrink back from the customs of the country—where today as well as centuries ago you could hardly tell the difference between Jew and Gentile—the same manners, the same speech, I dare say the same religion, the same undying love of their country—beautiful France. Respectfully,

JOSEPH KAHN.

LOCAL ITEMS.

"I understand that you referred to me as a pig, sir," remarked a pompous elderly gentleman to a young man who had spoken disparagingly of him to a third person. "You have been misinformed, sir," replied the young man. "I hope that I know better than to refer to a person of your advanced age as a pig."

Among the most attractive displays of new style fall goods is that of cased sterling silver of artistic design, from a single piece to a full dinner or tea set. These goods are especially adapted for presentations, and are now on exhibition at N. Matson & Co.'s, who have lately made large purchases direct from factories.

CANNING TOMATOES.

The farmers of Harford County, Maryland, have $1,000,000 invested in canning factories, and are building more. A correspondent of the Philadelphia Press describes the process of canning tomatoes: "After being scalded they are deposited on long tables surrounded by women called 'peelers.' The peeled tomatoes fall through a spout, and the operator presses his foot on a treadle. Instantly there is a spurt, and seeds, juice, and pieces of tomato fly out—the can is full, the packer has done its work. Small tin caps that fit in the groove are put on the can's mouth, and a brush dipped in a weak solution of muriate of zinc is passed around the groove. The capper presses a hot revolving capping iron upon a small piece of solder and the cap is firmly fastened. The can is then submitted to heat, which expels all air from it through a minute hole in the centre of the cap, and then the hole is stopped with a drop of solder."

THE KENTUCKY RACE.

TOLD AT THE OLD SETTLERS' MEETING.

Hev you heard about that famous race o' forty y'ars ago,
Way down in Ole Kentucky? 'Twuz a rattler—don't you know?
From Piketon to Paducah, not a feller see that ride
But what laid right down an' laughed—ha, ha, ha, ha, ha-a-w!—till he cried.
'Twas giv' out round in Lexin'ton the race wuz free an fa'r
"Fur eny beast that hed four legs an' grew a crop o' ha'r";
An' every chap that hed a nag fur twenty towns wuz thar'.

The day it jist wuz gorg'us, an' the track it wuzn't slow;
The hosses they wuz anxious fur the tussle—don't you know?—
When up thar' come a-ridin', right afore the race-course full,
Ole Athaliar Jefferson, astraddle on a bull!
He hed a tin horn in his hand an' spurs upon his boots;
An' sich a yell I never heard as come from them galoots.
The fellers on the hosses flunked, an' claimed it wusn't squar'.
The jedges laughed to split ther' sides, but said the race wuz fa'r
"Fur eny beast that hed four legs an' grew a crop o' ha'r."

So the jedges they got ready, an' they giv' the word to go,
An' bull an' hosses started all together—don't you know?—
When sudden Athaliar giv' a toot upon his horn,
An' stuck his spurs into the bull. Ez sure ez you were born,
The bull begun to beller an' the hosses flew the track;
He took the lead, a-totin' Athaliar on his back,
An' round he come a-rushin', with his tail up in the a'r.
The jedges said the pot wuz his—that he hed won it fa'r;
"He wuz a critter on four legs that grew a crop o' ha'r."

Sich a laughin', sich a hootin', sich a howlin'—ha, ha, ha-a-aw!—
The State o' Ole Kentucky never known, or heard, or saw.
Ole Athaliar took the pot—the bull an' he had won.
The crowd it sided with the bull, an' hollered at the fun.
The owners o' the hosses they begun to cuss an' swa'r;
They said that Athaliar hedn't won upon the squar'—
"That horn o' his'n hedn't legs nor eny crop o' ha'r."

Then up spoke Athaliar: "Boys, I'll lay the ole horn by!
'Fyou've got a hundred dollars, you kin hev another try;
I'll put the pot agin it, for I'm willin'—don't you know?—
To giv you satisfaction, if you'll give me eny show."
They up an' raised the money in a jiffy then an' thar'—
Each owner o' an animile a-chippin' in a shar'
To beat ole Athaliar an' his beast with legs an' ha'r.

Away agin' they started with a whoop an' big halloo!
That bull o' Athaliar's, how he bellered—don't you know?
Ther wasn't a hoss among 'em all that showed a speck o' sense;
Jehial Buford's thoro'bred jist threw him thro' the fence;
Some stood the'r riders on the'r heads, some scampered from the track,
An' half-a-dozen turned the'r tails an' come a-scootin' back;
While right ahead that critter tore, and jist ez sure ez sin
He won, an' Athaliar scooped another hundred in.

An' when afore the jedges' stand the bull come sailin' by,
With tail a-stickin' out behind, I tho't that crowd would die.
The yell it gave—ha, ha, ha, ha-a-w!—it fa'rly shook the a'r.
"Fur eny beast that hed four legs an' grew a crop o' ha'r."

BUSINESS.

The Local Money Market Active and Firm—Small Bills Scarce.

Eastern Exchange Stronger—Stocks Dull, but Generally Firm in Tone.

Produce Circles Weak, with a Larger Volume of Trading—Provisions Heavy.

Breadstuffs Depressed by Fine Weather and a Large Movement from First Hands.

FINANCIAL.

The local money market was fairly active Saturday and steady. Currency orders were generally reported to be rather light, but the aggregate for the week was probably considerable. Discount rates were firm at 6@7 for time and 5@5½ on call.

The following were the daily bank clearings and balances in this city for last week:

Date.	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	$ 8,734,581.56	$ 622,012.47
Tuesday	8,200,130.01	980,699.51
Wednesday	7,856,821.54	1,036,262.40
Thursday	8,510,285.85	946,217.33
Friday	8,307,358.79	943,685.56
Saturday	7,807,219.12	616,336.93
Total	$49,406,485.89	$5,130,024.20
Correspond'g week last year	51,880,388.29	4,889,210.45

The total is about $9,300,000 less than for the week previous, that aggregate being an exceptionally large one.

Eastern exchange was firmer Saturday at 50@60c discount per $1,000. There were orders for it from sections outside the wheat-raising districts.

Foreign exchange was quiet Saturday at 482½ and 485½ as the posted rates on sterling bills.

The local demand for securities continues brisk, and the stock in brokers' hands has been largely reduced during the last week. Bonds generally are held a little higher than they were a few weeks ago. One bank sold yesterday about $120,000 worth of bonds, principally local securities.

Bankers complain that small notes are growing scarce. They have been forwarded to the country freely in the last few weeks, and the stock here is much reduced, while the high rates for Eastern exchange have prevented the ordering of currency from New York. Legal-tender notes and gold certificates in denominations of $50 and upwards are plentiful, but there is no way to exchange them for gold and small legal-tender notes except by shipping to New York, where the Sub-Treasury will give gold or legal-tenders in return. At the local Sub-Treasury silver and silver certificates are offered in exchange, but it said the office is not prepared to give the gold or legal-tender notes. The banks exhibit their hostility to the silver dollar (which they think the Government is trying to force on the people) by declining to encourage the circulation of the silver, and its representative, the silver certificate. As soon as Eastern exchange falls to 80c discount, the stock of small bills will be augmented by liberal orders on New York, but meanwhile the scarcity is likely to be felt somewhat, unless the bars are let down and the silver is turned loose on the public.

The raiding of the Villard stocks was continued Saturday. The short interest in Northern Pacific is believed to be large, and Louisville also is supposed to have been sold short heavily, and is now becoming scarce for delivery in consequence of the closing of the books shortly for the annual election. Gould is believed to have been caught on the long side by the frosts in the corn belt, and has figured since to sustain the market.

Friends of St. Paul think it will earn 10 per cent on the stock the current year.

The net earnings of Manitoba for August are $376,000.

It is again the saying that Lovejoy will be the President of Denver, and the company be put in good shape financially.

The New York bank statement shows a decrease in reserve, but it is still considerably in excess of legal requirements.

Among the stories circulated to depress the Villards is one that the Northern Pacific preferred is not secured by land, and Oregon Transcontinental will not be able to pay 6 per cent. Another that $14,000,000 net earnings will be required next year to pay the interest on the bonded debt, guarantees of interest and dividends of 10 per cent on Oregon Navigation and 6 on Northern Pacific preferred. Still another that a Boston house called in a loan of a million on Oregon Transcontinental.

The following were Saturday's bidding quotations of local stocks on the Chicago Stock Exchange, except where a dagger (†) indicates that the price named was asked without a bid:

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The stock market was again very dull, and very firm during the forenoon. The dullness, however, is not due to lack of interest in the market. As far as the speculative forces were concerned, they were watching each other's movements with the greatest care this forenoon. Capitalists whose specialties were threatened with attacks have been prompt to protect and sustain them, while on the other hand the bears, who have a large line of shorts outstanding and would like to cover it, are searching for weak stocks with which to break the market. A variety of damaging rumors were circulated during the forenoon with a view of creating alarm and starting a general decline, but without effect. The result of the forenoon's trading shows a gain of ⅛@⅜ over last night's prices on the general list of stocks, the latter on Northern Pacific, with smaller advances on other stocks. After 12:30 o'clock the stock market was very dull, and the changes on any of the stocks were unimportant. The extreme range of fluctuations during the hour and a half was only ⅜. Before 1 o'clock there was a slight downward tendency, but this was recovered before 2, leaving the market almost unchanged from 1 o'clock prices. In the last hour the stock market was strong, and prices were ⅛@⅜ higher, the latter on Northern Pacific preferred. As compared with the closing of yesterday prices were ⅛@1¼ higher, the latter on Northern Pacific common and preferred, with ⅜ on Michigan Central, Western Union, and Reading, ⅜ on Union Pacific, and ⅛@¼ on other stocks. The stock market in the last few days has to a large extent recovered from the decline which began Friday, the 7th, as the result of the scare in regard to the damage of the corn crop and the later apprehension of a war on rates among the trunk lines. Those features, however, had for a time the effect of diminishing the investment-buying of stocks, and also induced a great deal of short selling. As compared with last Saturday the prices are all higher, the advance being from ⅛@2½ per cent. The investment purchases have been to some extent resumed, and the short interest put out a week ago has not been covered yet.

The following were the quotations on the New York Stock Exchange, with amount of sales during the day:

BOSTON.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The week closes with local money rates precisely where they were one week ago, the charge between the banks being 3 per cent, the street call rate 4@5 per cent, bank discounts 5@6 per cent, and brokers' notes 4½@7½ per cent. Foreign bankers are quoted as expecting a further reduction in the Bank of England discount rate to 3 per cent, but there is no positive assurance that anything of the kind will be done. The clearing-house exchanges were $9,991,445; balances, $1,278,186; exchanges for the week, $58,934,633; balances, $7,213,208. The Boston Clearing-House exchanges for August were the lowest recorded in any month for some years. Last year the total clearances aggregated $3,636,373,805, which was $600,000,000 less than in 1881. This year does not exhibit so marked a decline, but from present appearances the business of 1883, as represented in the Boston exchanges, will be $100,000,000 less than last year. There is scarcely business enough doing at the Stock Exchange to warrant an opinion upon the condition of the market. Upon the whole, however, strength is more perceptible than weakness. This was true more especially of the roads influenced by the enactment of the Colby bill in New Hampshire. Atlantic & Pacific incomes declined ¼, to 27¼. Mexican Central 7s show an improvement of ¼, to 60. Eastern 6s jumped up 2, to 112. Sonora 7 were also better at 102, a gain of ¼. Both Eastern and Boston & Maine were favorably affected by the enactment of the Colby bill. Eastern started up from 42 to 44, and later 43¾, with Boston & Maine 2½ better, at 163. Boston & Albany was also ½ higher, at 178¾. Atchison gained ⅛, to 84¾, and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy also improved ⅛, to 125¾. Wisconsin Central fell off ¼, to 17¾, with Toledo & St. Louis steady at 1¼. Bell Telephone dropped off from 225 to 223, but closed back at 225 again.

PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 15.—[Special.]—The market opened strong and moderately active at an advance over last evening's closing prices. The principal activity appeared to be confined to the Villard stocks, about which many conflicting stories are in circulation. The covering of the shorts was the principal cause of the advance, based on rumors of the retirement of a large amount of Pacific preferred stock. There was due to the company for deferred payments on lands July 1, 1883, $3,666,485, of which about $500,000 when paid will go to the retirement of the preferred stock and the balance to the retirement of the general first-mortgage bonds. The present strength of the Villard stocks is attributed to the short interest. The talked-of damaging statement soon to be published showing the fixed charges of the Villard properties to be about $8,000,000 per annum has gotten the street enlisted on the bear side. Too much company on one side of the market has frequently proved to be undesirable. It is hinted, however that large traders have sold the long stocks and are now putting out a short line. The general list was strong today in sympathy with the Pacifics, but dull. Lehigh Valley sold at 70¾ on renewed rumors that it would be leased by the Pennsylvania and made a 10 per cent stock. Reading was stronger on the report that Mr. Vanderbilt was greatly pleased with his trip over the main line and his visit to the coal regions.

The market closed dull:

The market for foreign securities has improved. Canadian railway stocks and bonds are lower. American railway securities are irregular. Norfolk & Western preferred and Union Pacific advanced 3, Baltimore & Potomac Tunnel 2, and Cleveland & Pittsburg, Denver & Rio Grande common, and Oregon & California preferred, 1; Central Pacific declined ½, Lake Shore 1½, Louisville & Nashville 1.

COMMERCIAL.

The leading produce markets were more active Saturday and generally lower. Most of them were weak, though not very weak, a free selling by holders being met by liberal purchases on the part of shorts who deemed it prudent to fill. The situation was one of general debility, due to warm weather and the fact of large receipts, coupled with the fear of a continuance of the same both in hogs and grain.

Provisions were more active and irregularly weak. Pork declined 35c and closed 30@32½c below the latest prices of Friday, at $10.82½ bid for October and $11.30 bid for January. Lard declined 15@20c and closed 15c lower, at $7.90 bid for October and $7.72½ bid for January. Short ribs closed 15c lower, at $5.92½ bid for October. The British markets were quoted steady, but the local hog market was easier, and packers were expecting large receipts for the coming week, which made them free sellers when grain proved to be on the down grade. Speculative shorts filled in freely, one foreign firm buying large quantities, but the offerings far exceeded the demand. The inquiry for shipment was decidedly light, and only for small lots, but the outgo for the week was a large one. In the afternoon the market was dull and nominally unchanged. The packing of this city since the close of October includes 1,452,000 hogs, against 1,402,000 for the same time in 1882, and 2,166,000 to do in 1881.

Flour was dull and easier, though holders did not note a decline in prices. The buying was limited to odd lots. Bran was quiet and firm at $11.75 per ton.

Wheat was active and weak, closing 1⅛c below the latest prices of Friday, at 95⅝c bid for October and 97⅛c for November. The British markets were reported heavy at a decline of 6@9d per qr. New York was lower, the weather was fine all over the West, and our receipts were rather large, with the promise of an increase during the coming week. A great deal of long wheat was unloaded for the first time in a fortnight. The sellers were apparently discouraged by the continued lack of foreign demand, while the resulting piling up here gives little promise of cessation, as Western Europe is being liberally supplied by other sources. The offerings were, however, picked up freely by people who filled shorts on the theory that it is about time for a turn in prices. Some large orders were received late in the session, about 1,000,000 bu changing hands in a few minutes half an hour before the closing. There was no apparent shipping demand for spring wheat. No. 2 was taken to sell for next month in round lots; it sold at 93¾@94½c, being a decline of fully 1½c. No. 3 was 1@1¼c lower, at 84@85c, the inside in North Side houses. Red wheat showed a big falling off; No. 2 was 3@4c lower, chiefly at 99c cash and 99⅝c for October. No. 3 red sold chiefly at 93¾c. In the afternoon the market for regular was dull and a shade easier.

Corn was moderately active and again weak, closing 1⅛c below the latest prices of Friday, at 49⅛c bid for October and 49⅝c for May. The British markets were called dull, and our receipts were large, being nearly the equivalent of 1,000 car-loads, while the weather was warm enough to give hopes that all the corn will mature which has not already been killed off by frost. In regard to the latter point opinions were still conflicting; but the damage appears to have been great in Northern Illinois and Northern Iowa, while most accounts agree that it has not been badly hurt elsewhere, though Southern Illinois is said to be suffering from drouth. The result was a big slopping over of sellers, big piles being sold by longs and smaller quantities by short sellers. The market turned a little about noon, when it was reported to be raining out West, but there was no real strength to it. The shipping demand was less active. No. 2 sold mostly at 49¼@49½c, being a decline of 1⅛c, and rejected sold chiefly at 46c, being a decline of 1¼c. In the afternoon the market was dull and nominally unchanged.

Oats opened a trifle higher than the latest prices of Friday, but soon after dropped in sympathy with corn, selling down ⅛@½c, the latter on May delivery, which was sustained for some time by parties who went long on the afternoon call of the day previous. At the close the market was quiet and steady. No. 2 spot sold at 26⅞@27c. There were light transactions in November delivery early at 28@28⅛c. A good demand existed for samples, though sellers were obliged to make slight concessions from the prices paid the day before, No. 2 selling at 27½@28c and No. 2 white generally at 28¾@29½c for everything below choice.

Rye was weak with the other grain markets, No. 2 selling at 56c, or 1c below the price of Friday. October delivery sold at 56½@57c and November at 58@59c, closing respectively at the lower prices.

Barley was weak and lower under continued liberal offerings, No. 2 spot selling at 59½@60c, September delivery selling early at the outside price. November delivery sold at 61@61½c, closing at the inside bid. Nothing was done in No. 3 outside the sample market.

There was a large movement in dry goods, nearly all departments displaying decided activity. Prices average steady. The millinery good, clothing, and boot and shoe markets were also reported active. Groceries were going out in a liberal way and were firmly held all around, while some lines have an advancing tendency. In the market for dairy products there was fair activity and cheese was ⅛@¼c higher, full creams selling at 10@10½c. Dried fruits, fish, and canned goods were quoted about as before, being quiet and nominally steady. Aside from a decline in turpentine of 1c there were no changes in oils. Coal was firm.

The receipts of peaches were again heavy—10,000 baskets of Michigan and 3,000 baskets of Delaware. Michigan sold at 50@75c, and the Eastern stock, which was generally in poor condition, was lower, selling at $1.00@2.00 per half-bushel basket. Grapes plenty and lower. Apples steady. Eggs firm at 20c per doz. Hides, grease, and tallow unchanged. Metals and tinners' ware active and steady. Wool is coming in freely, and under a moderate demand prices hold steady. In seeds timothy seed was dull and lower, prime seed being quotable at $1.28@1.30. Flaxseed easier at $1.30 for No. 1 on track. Hay slow at about Friday's prices.

The hog trade was quiet at a decline of 10@15c, closing weak at $4.85@5.40 for light, and at $4.60@5.25 for heavy. Cattle were in fair demand, and were firm at $3.00@6.30. The receipts for the week were about 40,400 cattle, 80,300 hogs, and 15,600 sheep, as against 34,432 cattle, 42,867 hogs, and 13,642 sheep for the corresponding week last year.

A bunch of blue-joint grass from Dakota was exhibited on 'Change yesterday. It is about nine feet high.

The Board of Trade Clearing-House arrangement will be in operation shortly. It will be located in Room 27, No. 126 Washington street.

A way to insure good seed-corn was described yesterday on 'Change. The speaker said his father had always made it a point to go through his cornfields about the 10th of September and pick all the ripe ears, hanging them up to dry for use in the spring. By this means he obtained early maturity for his corn, as well as insuring a good crop. His cornfields never failed, however it might be with his neighbors.

The following table shows the range of the day on the leading classes of trade in provisions and grain; also the latest (regular) buyers' price for round lots Saturday, compared with the previous day. A star (*) indicates that sellers asked more than 2½c in provisions or ⅛c in grain above the figures bid.

COKE DRIVING OUT ANTHRACITE.

[Engineering and Mining Journal.]—During the present year coke has made startling inroads into the foundry trade of anthracite coal in the Eastern and Middle States, where formerly the best grades of Lehigh lump were used to melt the iron in cupolas for machinery and stove castings. Connellsville, Snowshoe, and other cokes are so extensively used that not more than one-quarter or one-fifth of the quantity of anthracite used years ago is consumed. The low price of the coke and the comparatively stiff figures of the anthracite have of course brought about this revolution. It is likely that the difference between the price of the two grades of fuel will not remain so great for any length of time; but the new rival is undoubtedly in many respects better suited for the purpose, and it will be difficult to dislodge it.

A CRUSHED PORTER.

[Oil City Blizzard.]—We are happy. The porter of the parlor-car has been crushed.

"Beg yo' pawdon, sah," he remarked with impressive grandeur to one of the occupants of his car. "Dat was a trade-dollah yo' handed me a minute ago."

"Ah, was it?" replied the plebe, as he took it from the outstretched hand and examined it. "Take this for your honesty, my friend," and pocketing the dollar the traveler handed the astounded potentate of the road a lead nickel.

The insensible body of the porter was left at the next station, and after physicians had worked at him for two hours he recovered sufficiently to murmur incoherently:

"It wa'nt de money what pah'lyzed me, boss; but he called me 'my fren'!' Boss, dat tuk me down offul!"

VICTORIA'S GRIEF.

For The Chicago Tribune.

Great England's Queen doth sit and nurse her woes;
Through Sorrow's clouds for her no sunshine gleams;
The tears down each side of her purple nose,
Like twin Niagaras, rush in briny streams;
Her crown with ague trembles on her head;
Her faithful gillie 's gone—John Brown is dead!

Ah! naught can drive or charm her grief away;
No balm can sooth the anguish of her soul;
The rudder's gone—the royal ship doth stray
Where naught but Sorrow's murmuring billows roll.
Poor Albert's name the moaning waters drown;
They ever sadly say: John Brown—John Brown!

REAL ESTATE.

The Market Is Dull, Important Sales Are Few, and Inquiry Is Encouraging.

A Large Number of Small Stores and Residences and Not Many Large Buildings Ordered.

Cheap Buildings in the Suburbs—Principal Sales for the Week—Building Notes.

The Market.

The real-estate market was decidedly dull during the last week, few sales of importance being made. Dealers generally reported an increased inquiry for good property, and are unanimous in the belief that the fall trade will be much better than seemed likely a few weeks ago. Money is easy, and the desire to invest in real estate is daily growing. Small lots and houses are being sought after, and it has come to a point where owners of subdivisions find that they are obliged to build cottages on the lots in order to dispose of them. The laboring classes are no doubt greatly benefited by the innovation, but the outskirts of the city are being covered with inferior and unattractive houses that, because they are of brick, will probably never be replaced by any more substantial structures.

Several large transfers have been reported during the week, the most notable being from the Couch estate to Henry A. Kohn, of 48x162½ feet on Wabash avenue, west front, 48 feet south of Randolph street. The sale was made in July, the consideration being $85,000. A transfer from the same estate to Frederick Consor was recorded of 150x80 feet on La Salle and South Water streets. He transferred it to the occupants, Steele, Weddes & Co., for $155,000 cash. This is the same property purchased by S. H. Kerfoot & Co. from the Couch estate for Mr. Consor for $150,000, which was mentioned in this column of THE TRIBUNE last Sunday. It is understood that by this sale the Tremont House will be saved to the Couch heirs.

R. M. Hooley purchased the residence of William Loomis at No. 452 Dearborn avenue for $16,500.

Barnes & Parish sold during last week the following property: No. 3728 South La Salle street, for J. A. Means to Laurence Hensly, for $3,500; No. 276 Campbell avenue, for Mary A. Ladd to Julia Moynahan, for $3,000; No. 318 Washington boulevard, in connection with Griffin & Dwight, for C. W. Lasher to Gustave Freidlander, for $9,000.

The railroad companies that have recently gained a foothold on the South Side are rapidly clearing away the buildings of all classes between Clark street and the river and north of Eighteenth street. It is quite probable that the "Nickel Plate" will purchase St. John's Church, the fine edifice at the northeast corner of Eighteenth and Clark streets, together with the school buildings in the rear, and remove them. Father Waldron has not yet received an offer for the property, but it is stated that he soon will, and that he will probably sell.

An auction sale of valuable lots, 337, 339, and 341 State street, took place from the Court-House steps yesterday, Messrs. Flower, Remy & Gregory being the trustees, on account of the German National Bank. It was the third sale. In the morning a Mr. Steele made a bid of about $700 a foot, when Mr. Flower had the sale postponed till 2 p. m. The property was sold to Mr. John G. Jennings, a permanent investor, for $45,460. This was a surprise to real-estate men, who did not hesitate to say that the property was worth at least $60,000. The purchase price is equivalent to about $750 a foot.

Messrs. Kinney & Kimball report the following sales: 47½ feet on the southeast corner of Barney and Wright streets for William Dorsett to Olive Green for $1,200 cash. The residence No. 3146 Wabash avenue, to Dr. William Converse for $15,000 and taxes of 1883. Also 100 by 150 feet on Washington avenue, forty-four feet south of Forty-ninth street, to Alexander McIntosh for $6,000 and taxes of 1883.

B. L. Honore, agent of William C. Fenley, of Louisville, Ky., sold to D. H. Hammer 100 feet on the northwest corner of Thirty-ninth street and Grand boulevard for $12,000. In 1873 $25,000 was refused for the same property.

B. P. Hutchinson has sold to Dr. Alvin Brooks the property north of Sixteenth street, on Wabash avenue, east front, 60 by 180 feet, with buildings, for $25,000.

The following sales were made by W. D. Kerfoot & Co.: Eight acres on Division street, west of Western avenue, $13,250; four brick cottages on Robey and Rice streets, $10,400; six lots on Chicago avenue, west of Robey street, $5,400; ten lots on Nixon street, north of Taylor, $6,000; fifty feet on Ashland avenue, near Polk street, 5,500; seventy-four feet on Congress street, near Laflin, $7,400; three lots on West Harrison street, near Western avenue, $2,800; five lots on Warren avenue, west of Central Park, $2,500; 73x140 feet corner Wrightwood avenue and Orchard street, $2,500; four lots on Wentworth avenue, near Thirty-third street, $5,200; cottage and lot on Aberdeen street, near Congress, $3,000; four lots on Ullman and Wall streets, $1,700; two lots on Orchard street, near Wrightwood, $1,750; twenty-four feet on Superior street, near Green, $1,600; four lots on West Lake street, near Fortieth, $4,000; twenty-five feet on Diversey street, near Halsted, $1,400.

J. C. Magill & Co. have made the following sales: The octagon-front brick house No. 887 West Adams street for $5,000; the three-story brick building No. 190 Winchester avenue for $7,500; the two-story stone-front building No. 157 Third avenue for $15,000; fifty feet on Adams street, east of Ashland avenue, at $175 per foot (an elegant residence will be erected on this property); the two-story and basement octagon front brick No. 885 West Adams street for $5,000; the frame cottage, with lot, No. 750 Thirty-first street, for $1,240; the two-story and basement brick No. 294 Irving place for $3,800; the two-story frame residence No. 3112 Wabash avenue for $7,000; No. 573 Carroll avenue, two-story frame house, 85-foot lot, for $3,500; also three lots on Wentworth avenue, near Fifty-ninth street, at $25 per foot.

Building Notes.

The season thus far has not been a busy one for architects or builders, although it would appear that there is a large amount of building going on all over the city. Few new plans are being drawn for large structures, and it is quite likely that very little will be done of an important character this fall. There was no perceptible falling-off in the applications for permits to erect small stores and dwellings, but the only permits worthy of special note granted were the following:

Wheelock & Clays, architects, have furnished plans and specifications and the contracts have been let for the erection of eight houses on Lake avenue and Oakwood boulevard for W. G. Wilson, President of the Wilson Sewing-Machine Company at an aggregate cost of $90,000. One of them is to be occupied by Mr. Wilson. Five front on Lake avenue and three on Oakwood boulevard. They are to be green-stone fronts.

The same firm have furnished plans and specifications for a $5,000 cottage in Kenwood for William Reynolds; also for a frame residence for W. E. Hale on Forty-third street, near Drexel boulevard.

The contracts for the work on the Open Board of Trade Building have all been let.

A block of sixteen apartment-houses on Wabash avenue, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, having a frontage of 345 feet by 70, the cost of which will be $140,000, will be erected at once. The plans have been furnished by William Thomas, architect, and the contract let to James F. and Charles P. Keeney. There will be twin houses on either corner, four other designs in the centre, the others being of a different style of architecture. The corner houses will be of pressed brick, with limestone trimmings. The block will be three stories and basement, and each floor will contain a parlor, dining-room, kitchen, bathroom, and three chambers; each building will have front and back stairways, elevators, ash chutes, etc.

To National Warehouse Company, for warehouse, 100x100 feet, at the corner of Clinton and Fulton streets, to cost $30,000.

To H. J. Winslow, for three-story dwelling, 48x72 feet, corner of Indiana and Hoyne avenues, to cost $12,000.

To Mr. Huntington, for a five-story warehouse, 80x90 feet, to cost $25,000.

To William Ragan, for three three-story dwellings, 50x40 feet, Nos. 689 and 691 West Adams street, to cost $12,000.

To Martin McNulty, for five three-story stores, 109x48 feet, at Nos. 18 to 26 Rush street, to cost $20,000.

The Rosehill Cemetery Company is erecting a commodious floral conservatory just north of the main entrance to the cemetery.

Adler & Sullivan are just completing for Mr. R. Rubel a store on Clark street, south of Van Buren, that is decidedly the most substantial and attractive structure in the neighborhood. It is five stories and basement in hight, and has a front of brown stone and Anderson pressed brick.

C. L. Stiles, architect, is erecting a fine store and apartment building in Elgin for Hunter & Hawkins, of that city. The fronts are of Anderson brick with trimmings of light stone.

The improvement which Mr. L. Z. Leiter is making on his lot at the southwest corner of State and Van Buren streets will not, it is understood, be in keeping with the other structures on that street. It will be built on the economy plan, and rented at a good rate.

Architect J. C. Lane has completed plans for a block of stores on West Madison street, near Hoyne avenue, for Mr. Wood. The structure will have a front of Anderson brick, and will be divided up into flats above the stores.

Wheelock & Clay are building a block of eight houses for W. L. Wilcox on North avenue, and a house on Drexel boulevard for J. H. Conrad.

It is not likely that the improvements to the Rock Island depot on Van Buren street will be made this fall. The plans have all been completed and bids have been solicited. But operations will not be commenced until spring, although the railroad companies occupying the building are in need of more room.

Treat & Folz are building a factory for the Western Electric Manufacturing Company at Clinton and Canal streets, which will be finished before snow flies unless winter soon arrives.

Yesterday building permits were issued as follows:

E. B. Hosmer & Son & Keeney, sixteen three-story dwellings, 345x60, Nos. 2412 to 2444 Wabash avenue, to cost $136,000.

J. C. Dooly, one-story cooper shop, 20x50, No. 651 West Twenty-first street, to cost $700.

J. Jankewsky, basement, 20x31, No. 20 Augusta street, to cost $1,000.

H. Zimmermann, two-story flats, 21x60, No. 504 North Ashland avenue, to cost $3,000.

D. E. Healy, three-story store and flats, 54x60, Archer avenue and Fuller street, to cost $12,000.

P. Hiltzelburger, front addition, 21x56, No. 106 Newberry avenue, to cost $1,800.

German Baptist Church, 40x66, Nos. 65 and 67 Willow street, to cost $10,000.

H. H. Porter, two-story dwelling, 20x32, No. 272 East Huron street, to cost $6,000.

B. Hanson, two-story dwelling, 20x30, No. 40 Shell street, to cost $1,000.

Evanston.

As indicating the activity in building in this village the following are the more notable structures in process of erection south of Davis street, the business centre:

On Ridge avenue, George S. Lord's dwelling, nearly completed, to cost, with barn, nearly $20,000. On the same avenue A. C. Buell is making alterations to the place recently purchased at the cost of about $5,000.

On Asbury avenue, near Lake street, C. M. Goodrich is building a residence to cost $6,000.

On Oak street, near Grove street, William Holabird is building a $5,000 home.

On Maple avenue, near Dempster street, Charles O. Boring, salesman for J. V. Farwell & Co., is building a residence to cost $5,500. J. C. Conner is building on the same avenue a residence which will probably cost as much.

On Greenwood street, near Maple avenue, Edwin Hinchliffe and G. B. Dunham are building handsome dwellings, each to cost about $10,000.

On Grove street Z. S. Holbrook's brick block of five houses, with all appointments, are complete and all rented. This represents an investment of about $30,000. Adjoining these Mr. Pajean has spent about $6,000 in securing a dwelling.

On Benson avenue, near Dempster street, E. S. Gamble, of the Merchants' National Bank, is building a $4,000 cottage.

On Lakeside Block, Chicago avenue, S. W. Wheeler is finishing two dwellings at a cost of about $8,000.

Dr. Quinlan has sold his house, with fifty-foot lot, on Davis street to E. J. Martyn for $6,500, and will build a new home on other property in the vicinity for himself.

South Evanston.

The Trustees of the village have decided to sink an artesian well for the purpose of water supply. The site has been selected on Chicago avenue at a central point from which distribution can be most readily had. The contract for this work will be let this month, and it is probable that contracts will be awarded for the laying of about one mile of main pipe before cold weather. It is anticipated that the service-pipes on the principal streets will be laid early next spring, so that consumers may have the benefits of water next summer.

ADDIE.

For The Chicago Tribune.

Dare I, dear girl, confess the grief,
The sorrow, felt in losing you,
You'd blush to read the written leaf,
Tho' every burning word were true.

'Tis strange to think how hope will come—
'Tis sad to think how hope will die;
Our fortune sends the fated one,
And seals for aye our destiny.

Better by far to never meet
Than mourn a parting such as ours;
The bloom of hope, at morn so sweet,
At eve was naught but withered flowers.

Such is the fate which leaves a scar
Which never heals while heart shall beat;
And, as we watch her fading star,
We grieve that we e'er chanced to meet.

FOR SALE—ELK MOUNTAIN HOUSE, in the rapidly-growing City of Crested Butte, the terminus of the Denver & Rio Grande Railway, Gunnison County, Colorado. A new and substantial 3-story building, with large billiard-hall attached; all admirably arranged and completely furnished; paying from $500 to $700 per month net profits, with steadily increasing business; no competition. The situation of this hotel—at the gateway to the principal mining-towns in the Elk Mountains, and at the smelting and shipping point for all their ores, and in the very heart of the coke and coal region—insures a large business patronage all the year round; and it is also the most popular summer-resort in the mountains for sportsmen and tourists. Four daily mail stage-lines start from this hotel. Having been built and operated by the Town Company for the benefit of the town chiefly, it will now be sold at a very low price and on favorable terms. For further information address the Crested Butte Town Company, at Crested Butte, or R. W. Woodbury, Times Building, Denver, or A. D. WHEELER, 29 Reaper Block, Chicago.
